Udall, Jackson Slow Carter's Drive

By The Associated Press

Rep. Morris K. Udall clung to a narrow lead and claimed a close victory over Jimmy Carter in Wisconsin's presidential primary election Tuesday night, while Sen. Henry M. Jackson was winning New York's contest for Democratic delegates.

Udall and Jackson appeared to have slowed the Carter campaign drive. But the Wisconsin race was a tight one. With three quarters of the state's precincts counted Udall was gaining 37 per cent of the vote to Carter's 36 per cent.

President Ford trounced Republican challenger Ronald Reagan in Wisconsin, winning with margins that put him ahead for all 45 of the state's GOP nominating votes.

While Jackson was in command in the New York primary, his delegate margin was short of the clear majority he had forecast, and nowhere near the landslide he once had hoped to score.

Udall was running second in the New York delegate competition, and said "these are really good results for us."

Partial returns in New York, where delegates were elected in separate contests in each of the 39 congressional districts, showed Jackson leading for 102 of the state's 274 Democratic nominating votes.

That was not the margin the Washington senator had forecast. Nonetheless, he said the incomplete returns were close to the figures he had anticipated.

In Wisconsin, the primary was a direct, on-the-ballot test of the presidential candidates, and Udall was running only one percentage point ahead of Carter. That was with two-thirds of the precincts tallied.

ABC and NBC said their projections showed Udall the victor. The Arizona congressman said so, too. "I've finished second and I've finished first and I like first a lot better," he said.

Carter, who had won five out of six earlier primaries, said he had thought he might run first in Wisconsin. He also had said a Wisconsin win and a second-place showing in New York would make him the unstoppable leader for nomination.

Now, the Democratic contest appears to be a three-man race again, with Carter, Jackson and Udall due to square off next in Pennsylvania on April 27.

These were Tuesday's numbers:

WISCONSIN

Seventy per cent of the precincts had been counted, and in the Democratic race it was:

Udall 213,952 or 37 per cent.

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace 70,427 or 12 per cent.

Jackson 38,583 or 7 per cent.

Ellen McCormack, the anti-abortion candidate, 22,133 or four per cent.

Democratic delegates were awarded in proportion to the popular vote. Udall led for 26, Carter for 25. Wallace for 10, Jackson 6, McCormack one.

On the Republican side, also with 70 per cent of the precincts tallied:

Ford 255,019 or 55 per cent.

Reagan 201,954 or 44 per cent.

Since Ford led statewide and in all nine congressional districts, he was ahead for all 45 GOP delegates.

NEW YORK

With 82 per cent of the precincts counted, Jackson-pledged delegate candidates led for 102 national convention seats, Udall for 68, uncommitted entries for 64, Carter for 40.

Republicans gave the lead to 114 uncommitted delegates, with three Reagan supporters leading. Only a dozen Reagan delegates ran.

New York's was the biggest prize of the day, 274 delegates to the Democratic National Convention. But there it was the delegates who ran, not the candidates, in what amounted to 39 separate elections, one in each congressional district. Two hundred and six were elected in the primary. The other 68 New York votes are to be assigned on the basis of candidate shares in the elected delegation.

For the first time, under a last-minute change in state election laws, the ballot listed the candidate preferences of the Democrats running for delegate seats.

Jackson has been concentrating his campaign on New York, fixing it as a key target from the beginning of the race. He said he expected to win more than half the delegation. Carter and Udall talked of coming in second in New York.

NETV Puts Foot In Satellite Door

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska Educational Television Commission took the first local step Tuesday to become part of the proposed satellite interconnection system for distributing national and regional public broadcasting programs.

Commissioners decided unanimously to endorse the $38.4 million project that would replace microwave terrestrial operations, and to make a one-time equity payment of $25,000. That sum represents 15% of the actual cost of a receive-only terminal in Lincoln, licensed to NETV.

No tax funds will be used. The commission also voted to accept a $25,000 grant from the John E. Fetzer Foundation, donated specifically to enable the NETV Network to participate in the space system. Fetzer is board chairman of the Cornhusker Television Corp.

Coincidentally, Commission Chairman Philip Heckman of Crete noted, the NETV license for Lincoln Channel 12 was originally given Fetzer by NU Regents in 1954 in an interim trust arrangement.

Equipment Donated

When NU assumed full control of the license in 1956, Heckman said, the Fetzer Foundation gave NU equipment worth $135,000. Channel 12 is now the flagship station of the nine channel NETV Network.

Fetzer, a broadcasting pioneer, cited the promise of satellite transmission. A. James Ebel of Lincoln, world-wide satellite communications authority and president-general manager of Fetzer stations KOLN/KGIN-TV, said the system proposed is "ideal" and the "timing is right."

None of the commercial TV networks have got beyond the interest stage in satellite transmission, he said, and NETV "could become a very important center for regional or national program distribution."

Transmitter Eyed

Commissioners were told Lincoln is being considered as a companion transmit center for the region. NETV Network General Manager Jack McBride said that has "the strongest possibility."

Engineers were in Lincoln Tuesday examining transmit potential for Channel 12, among 155 ground stations in the 264 cooperating total of public TV stations.

The system, proposed by Public Broadcasting Service and Corporation for Public Broadcasting, would be activated in 1978, if approved by the Federal Communications Commission. The Ford Foundation has committed $1.4 million.

Heckman said the satellite confersion "sounds 21st Century," but in reality uses simple principles that reduce program costs and increase transmission reliability. Using channels on an already orbiting Western Union satellite (Westar) would offer three to four simultaneous program options locally.

Request Withdrawn

In other business, the commission voted to withdraw its federal fund request for a color mobile unit, since that was supplied by National Broadcasting Co. as part of a settlement for NETV to relinquish its look-alike logotype.

Commissioners directed NETV staff to determine what associated mobile unit equipment is still needed, and to recommend items within the $160,000 federal matching money the Legislature has appropriated.

The commission assigned priority ranking to requests for federal dollars under the Educational Broadcasting Facilities Act, administered by the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

Priorities Set

Increased power for Channel 26, Omaha, won No. 1 priority ($346,875 federal share in the $462,500 project), and NU Omaha campus switching equipment No. 2 ($22,638 federal of $30,185).

Among radio needs, a Kearney State College proposal to cost $12,265 ($9,198 federal) was ranked No. 1.

Commissioners also discussed a possible need to buy power correction equipment for the Channel 12 studios to increase use efficiency. Monthly power costs range from $5,000 to $7,000 and rate increases could exceed 10% budgeted.

Students Are Egged On To Learn Responsibility

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Eggar and Eggo, among others, persuaded more than 60 Northeast High School students that being a parent requires shelling out a lot more personal attention than they thought possible.

To teach them some of a parent's responsibilities, home economics teachers Wanda E. Brown and Karen K. Poore had their two "Living in Family" classes hardboil an egg.

The students, including about eight boys, had to name and "dress" their eggs, make some kind of a carrier and care for them as they would a child, Mrs. Poore said.

When Mrs. Brown first gave the assignment, she said "some of the boys just rolled their eyes" at the prospect of their schoolmates' hooting. But she reminded them of a first-semester lesson, that "No one can put you down unless you allow yourself to be put down."

24-Hour Job

In "some really clever little baskets" nested twins Egger and Eggo, and only-children with "conventional names like Melody and Stephanie," Mrs. Brown said. "They really had to be with them all the time," 24 hours a day including the weekend when the students were forbidden to abandon their parental duties.

Mrs. Poore said the students "had to find an egg-sitter if they were going out where they wouldn't normally take a child."

And that, Mrs. Brown said, required "going through the process of getting a babysitter." They had to "find out about the person, leave a doctor's number" and the telephone number where they could be contacted, she said.

If the students' own parents were left in charge, they had to be reminded "You can't leave that egg somewhere. You've got to go check on it" throughout the evening. If the real parents were unwilling, the students had to find another egg-sitter.

Teachers Enlisted

During school, the students had to enlist teacher egg-sitters. After all, they learned, it was impossible to care for their children properly while running in phys-ed class. Hazards of meringue, you see.

The students' reactions were "very positive," said Mrs. Poore, although "We had some catastrophes—where they were dropped." But among the survivors, the young parents "even had some other students not in the class admiring the eggs, asking how they were feeling" and helping to dress them for the day.

Students' and teachers' evaluation of the project will come later, but Mrs. Poore said the preliminary appraisal from students was "a pretty worthwhile experience, and enjoyable."

Except, perhaps, for one boy who dejectedly told Mrs. Brown that "mine died today."

The mystery of the cause of death has yet to be cracked.

Speed Trap Delays Departing Senators

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Heading down the hill toward final adjournment, the Legislature Tuesday got caught in a speed trap.

Lawmakers planned to wind down their 60-day session Wednesday and go home.

But Gov. J. James Exon announced Tuesday morning that he has been informed that speed limit laws on Nebraska highways will expire in three months if the senators do not change a law passed over his veto last year.

Exon told newsmen he is prepared to call the lawmakers back into special session as soon as they adjourn their regular session on Wednesday.

Extension Sought

Burbach said he will ask the Legislature Wednesday to extend its regular session by two days to make the statutory change, then go home on Friday.

It will take 40 votes from the 49-member legislative body to extend the session beyond the 60-day limit proposed by a constitutional change six years ago.

If the Legislature agrees to do that, Burbach said, it can grab one of three bills currently resting at second stage floor consideration, rewrite it to reinstitute the speed limit laws and send it to final reading.

Lawmakers would then be able to enact it on Friday.

Special Session

If senators do not extend the session, Burbach said, the governor plans to summon them into a special session which could not be constitutionally completed until April 14.

The 1975 speed limit law contains a provision stating that the limits would only be effective until three months after the adjournment of the 1976 session.

Exon said he was informed about the provision and the lack of amendatory action this session during a conversation with Attorney General Paul Douglas Monday.

Douglas said the situation had been called to his attention by the State Patrol.

Fine Drew Veto

Exon had vetoed the 1975 bill because it contained a provision authorizing a maximum fine of $10 (with no court costs and no loss of points) for persons traveling no more than 10 miles per hour over the 55 m.p.h. speed limit on the Interstate Highway.

Extension of the regular session could open the way for other legislative action whereas a special session would be strictly limited to the speed limit issue.

The other two bills at second stage floor consideration could also be transformed into new proposals in time for a final vote on Friday if any senator can find the supporting votes to accomplish his wishes.

Time For Vetoes

Extension of the session could also give senators time to act on gubernatorial vetoes of some, if not all, of the 13 bills which are scheduled for a final vote on Wednesday.

Among them are measures proposing political reform, pesticide management, transfer of performance auditing duties to the legislative branch, photographs on drivers licenses and salary increases for judges.

Some of them may attract a veto.

Wednesday's agenda also calls for action on 16 budget vetoes levied by Exon this week. Twelve bills were rejected, while four were subjected to item veto reductions.

All are subject to possible motions to override.

Curtis Loses Two Battles In War Over Food Stamps

Washington (UPI) — Senate opponents of the food stamp purchase requirement agreed Tuesday to a compromise that would reduce but not eliminate the fee that beneficiaries now must pay for the bonus food coupons.

The compromise also would authorize a $20 million pilot program to try eliminating the cash purchase requirements for stamps in selected counties to be determined by the Agriculture Department.

The compromise won vital support from Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, during day-long Senate debate on reform of the overall food stamp program. It is embodied in a substitute bill that will be voted on later this week.

The proposed substitute for the committee's original food stamp reorganization bill would substantially lessen the estimated overall savings to the government, but it would still close loopholes and lessen abuses that have been harshly criticized.

Earlier, conservative forces led by Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., were defeated twice in efforts to stiffen proposed food stamp reforms to virtually exclude all college students from the program

However, the Senate voted 95-0 to require college students receiving food stamps to register and seek work if they hope to continue receiving the food aids during summer vacations.

By a 63-31 vote, the Senate rejected a Curtis amendment to eliminate single students or students with families. Curtis then was defeated 61 to 35 on an amendment to require students receiving food stamps to register for work, seek work and accept fulltime employment if offered

The proposed food stamp bill drafted by the Senate Agriculture Committee would exclude college students if they are or can be legally claimed as tax exemptions by families which are themselves ineligible for food stamps.

New Knowledge May Avert Mass Starvation

NEW YORK (AP) — Food scientists expressed hopes Tuesday that new knowledge and new policies could detour the world's population from collision with mass starvation

Science is one reason for optimism now, they said So are new or proposed government attitudes and policies

"The world has a chance to feed itself," said Dr Robert R Spitzer of Food for Peace, Agency for International Development of the U.S. State Department, speaking at the American Chemical Society's centennial meeting

"We have an unprecedented wealth of new information from exploratory research," and some of this knowledge, if developed to application, might double production of certain crops, said Dr Ralph W.F. Hardy of the DuPont Company Wilmington, Del.

Another promising avenue is the use of micro-organisms to produce nutritious protein from solid wastes, said Dean A.E. Humphrey of the University of Pennsylvania's College of Engineering and Applied Science.

Dean Humphrey said the United States alone produces one billion tons of solid wastes a year, from animal feed lots, municipal wastes, agriculture and forests, and ways are being found to have single cell organisms convert them into high-protein material

There are problems of acceptance, he said, but such protein could augment cereal grains or be turned into meat substitutes that would taste good and look good.

"If we could adapt what we already know, we could begin to turn production around, doubling world food production," said Dr. J G Harrar, former president of The Rockefeller Foundation.

"That would not be the full answer, however," he said, for nations must also learn to avoid political tensions and armed conflicts that disrupt production "We must maximize food production as the first priority of all nations."

Agriculture and food "have been country cousins" in many countries, with leadership not giving them enough emphasis, Dr Switzer said

The United States now supplies 60 per cent of the world's food, he said, but "should supply not food alone, but knowledge, and stress development of agriculture in other countries, rather than just giving relief We are buying time hoping those countries can generate their own production.

There have to be incentives, as in profits, to generate production and there must be "a will of the people" to solve the food problem, which is linked with world peace," Switzer added

Hardy ticked off new research findings that suggest ways to increase crop yields, as by reducing loss from photorespiration, possible ways of regulating oxygen [illegible] increase yields of seed parts of some crops and maximizing the yield of nonseed parts in others, as with potatoes, and changes to make efficient or new ways for plants to take nitrogen out of the air

New Knowledge May Avert Mass Starvation

NEW YORK (AP) — Food scientists expressed hopes Tuesday that new knowledge and new policies could detour the world's population from collision with mass starvation.

Science is one reason for optimism now, they said. So are new or proposed government attitudes and policies.

"The world has a chance to feed itself," said Dr. Robert R. Spitzer of Food for Peace, Agency for International Development of the U.S. State Department, speaking at the American Chemical Society's centennial meeting.

"We have an unprecedented wealth of new information from exploratory research," and some of this knowledge, if developed to application, might double production of certain crops, said Dr. Ralph W.F. Hardy of the DuPont Company, Wilmington, Del.

Another promising avenue is the use of micro-organisms to produce nutritious protein from solid wastes, said Dean A.E. Humphrey of the University of Pennsylvania's College of Engineering and Applied Science.

Dean Humphrey said the United States alone produces one billion tons of solid wastes a year, from animal feed lots, municipal wastes, agriculture and forests, and ways are being found to have single cell organisms convert them into high-protein material.

There are problems of acceptance, he said, but such protein could augment cereal grains or be turned into meat substitutes that would taste good and look good.

"If we could adapt what we already know, we could begin to turn production around, doubling world food production," said Dr. J.G. Harrar, former president of The Rockefeller Foundation.

"That would not be the full answer, however," he said, for nations must also learn to avoid political tensions and armed conflicts that disrupt production. "We must maximize food production as the first priority of all nations."

Agriculture and food "have been country cousins" in many countries, with leadership not giving them enough emphasis, Dr. Switzer said.

The United States now supplies 60 per cent of the world's food, he said, but "should supply not food alone, but knowledge, and stress development of agriculture in other countries, rather than just giving relief. We are buying time hoping those countries can generate" their own production.

There have to be incentives, as in profits, to generate production and there must be "a will of the people" to solve the food problem, which is linked with world peace, Switzer added.

Hardy ticked off new research findings that suggest ways to increase crop yields, as by reducing loss from photorespiration; possible ways of regulating oxygen concentrations to increase yields of seed parts of some crops and maximizing the yield on nonseed parts in others, as with potatoes; and cheaper or more efficient or new ways for plants to take nitrogen out of the air.

Day Care Veto Said 'Incredible'

The New York Times

Washington — President Ford vetoed legislation Tuesday providing $125 million to the states to finance the cost of upgrading day care facilities

Ford said he opposed the legislation because it imposed burdensome federal restrictions

Rep Abner Mikva D-Ill one of the principal sponsors of the legislation described the veto as incredible because he said without the legislation new federal standards for staffing day care centers would go into effect immediately but the money to meet these standards would be denied

The bill would have postponed the effective date for meeting the staffing standards until Oct 1

Whether Congress will be able to override Ford s veto was in doubt Although the House passed the bill last month by a vote of 317 to 72 an earlier vote on the bill that was considered a better test of the real sentiment in the House carried by less than the two-thirds necessary to override a veto

The House will not attempt an override until after its Easter recess

In his veto message Ford asked Congress to adopt his block grant approach to providing aid to the states in financing community services The block grant eliminates the concept of federal standards or other requirements that localities have to meet to be eligible to receive federal funds for a broad category of programs

Ford said the legislation runs directly counter to a basic principle of government in which I strongly believe the vesting of responsibility in state and local government and the removing of burdensome federal restrictions

The vetoed bill does not in fact, impose any new standards on the states The standards to which Ford was referring were enacted in legislation passed in 1974 The vetoed bill postponed the effective date of the standards provided funds to the states for meeting them and excluded from the requirements day-care centers where fewer than 20 of the children qualify for federal day-care programs because they are from low income families

Site Supposedly Neutral But Fighting Breaks Out

Witnesses reported heavy machine-gun fire between Christian and Moslem militiamen and explosions near the Villa Esseily only hours after it was announced parliament would meet there Saturday

The supposed neutrality of the mansion site near the only crossing point between Moslem and Christian sections of Beirut, had made it acceptabl to both leftist Moslem and right wing Christian party chiefs

The regular parliament building in downtown Beirut has beer plundered by looters and is under sniper fire from militia front lines

An official said it would have required 3 000 security troops to make it safe for a meeting 'and this large a force is not available at the moment ' He said only 300 men would be needed to guard the villa

Police reported 32 persons killed and 38 wounded since daybreak Tuesday at the halfway point of a 10-day truce declared to give politicians another chance to work out a peaceful settlement The cease-fire expires Monday one day before the first anniversary of the conflict

A spokesman said the dead included a Moslem police commissioner who was assassinated before his horrified Christian wife inside their apartment

Leftist Moslems have insisted the cease-fire be used to elect a successor to Christian President Suleiman Franjieh 65 who has refused Moslem demands that he resign immediately and unconditionally

Parliament Speaker Kamel Assaad told reporters the 99 legislators would meet in the Villa Esseily to amend the constitution to end Franjieh s term immediately six months ahead of schedule, so a successor could be elected

Pre-Merger Bill Tough

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday passed an antitrust bill that would impose tough pre-merger notification rules on businesses and give states the power to recover triple damages on behalf of their citizens

The bill approved 8 5 would also give the government broad new powers to obtain documents testimony and other information from businesses and others in antitrust investigations

The measure s most controversial provision — which President Ford strongly opposes would allow states to seek triple damages from businesses found guilty of price-fixing or other antitrust violations on behalf of consumers The House has already accepted it in separate legislation

Attempts by Sen Roman Hruska R-Neb and Sen Quentin Burdick D-N D to modify or restrict this section of the bill were defeated

Death Concessions Offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators sponsoring a bill to revise federal criminal laws agreed Tuesday to drop provisions restoring the death penalty in some federal crimes

Sens John L McClellan, D-Ark and Roman L Hruska R-Neb chief sponsors offered major concessions in negotiations over the measure to consolidate the criminal laws into a single code

They said they were willing to drop limited restoration of the death penalty and also to leave unchanged present laws against espionage and disclosure of classified information

They also agreed to other modifications in the bill but balked at others urged by a trio of Senate Judiciary Committee liberals with whom they have been negotiating

The three Sens Philip A Hart D-Mich Edward M Kennedy, D Mass , and James Abourezk D-S D , said this had helped to narrow the differences

The bill had provided for the death penalty for treason espionage and other major crimes such as kidnaping or aircraft hijacking resulting in death, depending on the presence or absence of certain aggravating or mitigating factors

©The New York Times

Washington — President Ford vetoed legislation Tuesday providing $125 million to the states to finance the cost of upgrading day-care facilities.

Ford said he opposed the legislation because it imposed "burdensome federal restrictions."

Rep. Abner Mikva, D-Ill., one of the principal sponsors of the legislation, described the veto as "incredible" because, he said, without the legislation new federal standards for staffing day-care centers would go into effect immediately, but the money to meet these standards would be denied.

The bill would have postponed the effective date for meeting the staffing standards until Oct. 1.

Ford said the legislation "runs directly counter to a basic principle of government in which I strongly believe the vesting of responsibility in state and local government and the removing of burdensome federal restrictions."

The vetoed bill does not, in fact, impose any new standards on the states. The standards to which Ford was referring were enacted in legislation passed in 1974. The vetoed bill postponed the effective date of the standards, provided funds to the states for meeting them and excluded from the requirements day-care centers where fewer than 20% of the children qualify for federal day-care programs because they are from low-income families.

Business Mail Service Cuts 'Planned Nationally'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service plans to cut mail service to businesses further, making the cutbacks nationwide, the head of the Letter Carriers Union said Tuesday

"Service is being eaten away little by little," James H. Rademacher, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, told the House Postal Service subcommittee.

The Postal Service last month reduced business deliveries from two to one per day in 10 Eastern cities. It has announced a cutback in New York City, the only place where business mail is delivered three times a day, to two deliveries effective May 17

In addition, the mail agency has said it is considering a cutback to one business delivery per day in 13 Southern cities.

The Postal Service has said it is considering each city individually, but so far has found that very little mail is delivered on the last delivery in a day.

"They are doing this piecemeal in order to get around the legal requirement that the Postal Rate Commission approve any nationwide reduction in service," Rademacher said.

"It isn't every city now, but it will be eventually," he said.

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., added, "I concur with that completely." Simon has been leading opposition to the Postal Service's policy of gradually decreasing the number of rural post offices.

$5,500 For 4=Poverty

Washington (AP) — Millions of Americans once looked at an income of $100 a week as a major benchmark, a sign of middle class success. Now, the government says, a family of four with that income lives below the poverty level.

The rising cost of living means the federal government's definition of poverty will go up about $500 to nearly $5,500 this year for a non-farm family of four, the Labor Dept. reported Tuesday.

The Labor Dept. said it will use the higher income levels in determining eligibility for its employment and job training programs, effective April 1.

WINTER WEAR . . . models display Kenzo of Jap clothes. AP

By SUZY PATTERSON

PARIS (AP) — They screamed like teen-agers at a pop concert when Kenzo of Jap showed his fall-winter collection Tuesday under a glassy nineteenth-century dome, climaxing the Japanese wave in Paris fashion.

The clothes were flamboyant fun, fine for a costume party. But buyers always go berserk over some of the ideas, and other designers sneak in to cull inspiration.

"Jap goes West" (or south of the border) was one big obsession, with girls and men prancing around under fringed blankets and serapes, heads stuck with dyed pheasant tails. Mexican-Peruvian-Indian looks prevailed with big blousy, low-belted long garments over leggings, worn with feathered hats.

There was a bit of the old kimono too, plus some odd additions like piped short loden jackets over longer pull-overs — in contrasting blinding colors.

Jap dared the ultimate in bulky layering — with split tunics, sleeveless cardigans or ribbed knit skirts over leggings, large wide-sleeved long jackets, or hip-length knit tunics over tights.

The party went on at Yves Saint-Laurent, who jilted the strict mannish look women have fawned over to go into a wild Mongolia, Ukrainian-peasant phase. After a few sane double-breasted wide-collared knit sweaters over pants or skirts, big circular skirts came on with boxy belts,

But the big thing was the super-chic Saint-Laurent peasant: little square velvet or soft felt jackets or boleros over full-sleeved wool challis print blouses, with equally full gathered skirts in unmatching prints, the whole topped by generous bandana scarves in yet other prints, by furred mongol hats, or little knit beanies with tassels or a long black braid down the back.

The fabrics were sensational — amazing combinations of big and small flowered, diamond or striped prints in the same outfit — in cardinal reds, plum, fuschia, turquoise, ultramarine or royal blues, emerald green and black.

Guy Laroche showed a modest collection that would look fine on any street, with good, tailored clothes leading the way. Setting the keynote were tunics over pleated or eased narrow below-knee-length skirts, trench-coats, hip-length windbreakers over pleated skirts, or narrow pants tucked into boots, man-tailored skirt-blazer or trouser combinations, with pointed men's vests.

Ted Lapidus has a big following all over the world, and his customers won't be disappointed with the usual double-breasted and tailored unisex look, the belted, yolked raincoats and trenchcoats. He loves wide or pleated culottes this year, comfortably knee-length, worn with boots. One number in a patchwork of pastel plaids with a huge matching scarf at the neck pleased the crowds.

Baby Drowns In Diaper Pail

Christiana M. Maybee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Maybee, was found in a hallway of the home by police.

Mrs. Maybee told authorities she found the baby in the diaper pail not long after she had placed the baby in its crib. Mrs. Maybee said the baby apparently knocked the lid off the pail after falling or crawling out of the crib, which was about six inches off the floor.

A Robbery A Week Just Too Much

Chicago (UPI) — Sally King, the manager of a South Side clothing store that has been robbed once a week for the last three weeks, says "something's got to give."

"I'm getting up in years and I can't go through this every week," said Mrs. King, manager of York Women's Apparel. "This is getting too much for me."

Mrs. King said a man and woman robbed the store of $200 Monday.

The week before that, another $100 was taken by a third man-woman duo.

She said each couple appeared to have a gun.

Mrs. King said she has been in the business for 20 years but feels she should not have to put up with the weekly routine.

Abortion Issue Threat To Italian Government

ROME (AP) — Socialists threatened Tuesday to topple the fragile 55-day-old Christian-Democrat cabinet over the explosive issue of abortion and possibly pave the way for a Communist role in governing Italy.

The United States has consistently opposed any such role for the Communists because of Italy's strategic position in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Some U.S. officials hinted that there would be economic reprisals if the Communists are let into the government.

The Socialists, the third largest party, have the power to bring down the government and force a general election.

Calling for an immediate meeting with Christian Democrat leaders, the Socialists said the only alternative to early elections would be a national emergency government with a policy-making role for the Communists.

Premier Aldo Moro, a Christian Democrat, has been operating with a minority government only by the good will of the Socialists, who left the ruling coalition but have abstained on votes of confidence.

That benign attitude is now threatened by the dispute over abortion.

The Christian Democrats, spurred by the Vatican, joined the right-wing Italian Social Movement party last week to pass an amendment restricting abortions to rape and therapeutic cases. This led to a weekend demonstration by more than 50,000 feminists attacking Moro and the Vatican.

Abortions are illegal in Italy under a 1930 Fascist law, and the Vatican recently called abortions "a regression to barbarity."

The pressures on the Moro government were compounded by scheduled negotiations Wednesday between the government and three big unions. The country is in the grip of a monetary crisis and rising labor unrest typified by a series of scattered strikes Tuesday.

Lori Fortuna, Socialist leader of the proabortion movement in the House of Deputies, said parliament should be disbanded by April 21-22 and new general elections held before the end of June, a year earlier than scheduled.

"To prolong the agony of this legislature means to let problems rot," he said. "In any case, the grave measures that a serious government must adopt cannot be decided in a confused climate."

Twitchy Lip Worth $3,600

London (AP) — Desiree Llewellyn, pretty and 21, was awarded $3,600 damages Tuesday because, she said, her lower lip twitches when she is kissed.

She told Judge Austen Croom-Johnson that she suffered a deep cut in her lip in a traffic accident four years ago. "It makes kissing uncomfortable," she said. "I suddenly feel a twitch — a sort of tingling sensation.

"I certainly don't tell my boyfriends about it."

It may come as a surprise, but toilet paper doesn't do what you think it does.

Of all the things in life people take for granted, toilet paper has to be first on the list.

Which, when you think about it, is a little naive. Because actually dry toilet paper is something of a failure. Primarily because it's dry. And you can't always count on dry to clean the way you want it to. The simple truth is that what we really needed all this time was something we didn't have. Toilet paper that's moist.

Well, we have it now.

It's called Fresh'n Pre-Moistened Toilet Tissue. A new kind of toilet tissue you can take for granted. Because it works.

How it works.

Fresh'n comes in a pretty self-adhesive dispenser you mount instantly on your wall. The Fresh'n sheets pop out one at a time. When they're all gone, you simply slip in refill tissues.

Now we're not recommending you throw out your dry toilet paper.

What we do think, however, is that the more you use Fresh'n, the less you're going to trust dry.

It really cleans.

Because Fresh'n is lightly moistened, it obviously cleans better than dry toilet paper. And feeling clean has a lot to do with feeling really good.

In fact, many people tell us that Fresh'n actually makes them feel better than they did before.

Now that may sound like a lot of nonsense. But all we can suggest is that you try it. You'll see what we mean.

And because it really cleans and refreshes, it gives you extra personal hygiene assurance every day of the month. So you feel sanitary and well [illegible]

That's because Fresh'n not only cleans thoroughly, its moisture makes it incredibly soft,

It's great for kids.

A lot of kids couldn't care less about keeping clean. So Fresh'n does it for them. Almost automatically. Which means their clothes stay cleaner too. (Many mothers have told us what a difference Fresh'n makes.)

What's more, you'll feel good knowing your children can take better care of themselves without your help.

It's no strain on the drain.

Of course, Fresh'n has been tested for flushability and biodegradability in plumbing and septic tanks.

So you just flush it away using the same common sense you do with dry.

Of course, there's one more advantage with Fresh'n. The one-sheet-at-a-time system can discourage children from stuffing the bowl with wads of toilet paper.

The dispenser (which you can keep for life) costs about $1.39.

And because each Fresh'n tissue pops out one at a time, it won't end up all over the floor when kids use it. That's more economical, too.

It can change your life.

If you've never considered changing your dry tissue habit before, we understand. You've never had anything better. But now that you have Fresh'n, you have the opportunity to not only change a habit, but also to change your life.

Because, as you can see, Fresh'n gives you a whole lot more than just the cleanest freshest feeling you've ever had. And that's really something to consider.

Anti-Busers Stripped Bare

Boston bigots tore to shreds any presumably decent anti-busing argument this week.

"We got ourselves a nigger," several white demonstrators of high school age yelled when a black man walked by. The students, who were boycotting classes, and parents had attended an ani-busing rally in the City Council chambers and were on their way to picket U.S. District Judge Arthur Garrity Jr., who ordered the city's schools desegregated.

The demonstrators beat up the black man, who was on his way to another meeting at City Hall. They bloodied him up pretty good and in the process struck him with a wooden standard bearing an American flag.

It was a sad day for the flag.

According to press reports, the demonstrators also "taunted several blacks with obscenities and by imitating apes. One black man was spat upon, but there were no more fights."

So, the real enemy is not ivory tower federal judges who dictate social policy from on high, nor bleeding heart liberals nor other social experimenters. This is not a thoughtful argument over the values of neighborhood schools, equal educational opportunities, the dislocation of students or the dollar cost of busing programs.

The real object of scorn and hate is "nigger" and the concept under attack is integration, which happens to be the law of the land.

The political candidates who say in any form "I am opposed to busing" wrap themselves in the flag that hangs on the standard that bludgeons innocent blacks.

Those who would amend the Constitution to outlaw a desegregation tool are giving comfort to the apes who imitate apes in an attempt to taunt blacks but who only reflect their own true character.

The plausible arguments against busing are making headway in this country. But Americans are reminded of reality by the shameless exposure of the gut reasoning: "We got ourselves a nigger."

An Ethics Code For Business

THE HAGUE— One result of the Arabian nightmare of scandals flowing from United States business malpractices is increasing thought in some nations about the need to draft an international code of good behavior. Signatory nations would be expected to apply this to governmental and private contracts.

There has been so much discussion of alleged U.S. commercial misbehavior in search of competitive deals that many people abroad are eager to see serious consideration of a regulation.

The Netherlands exemplifies such views. It is hugely involved in foreign commerce as a nation existing by trade. It has also been politically tarnished by innuendo emerging from Sen. Church's inquiry in Washington.

Some rather dubious witnesses summoned before Church's committee have spoken of a "high Dutch official" said to have accepted large payments from the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation. It was implied that this is probably Prince Bernhard, husband of Dutch Queen Juliana.

Bernhard immediately demanded an official investigation here in order to clear his name. The entire royal family is reportedly determined to ride out the storm, confident in Bernhard's probity. The Queen and her husband even plan to visit the United States this autumn to honor the Bicentennial celebrations.

By the smudging of this nation's moral pride and commercial standing produced by unproven allegations during current inquiries encourages a climate of character assassination unrelated to charges of business misbehavior.

Thus in a quite separate release of a 31-year-old U.S. intelligence report of questionable origin, Bernhard was accused of leaking to Germany secrets concerning the then-impending Arnhem battle although he had a splendid record as commander of all Dutch resistance during World War II.

To avoid publicizing any kind of inferential slander — unless it is proven justified — Europeans are devoting more attention to this overall problem than if it were only a business matter. For it is evident that any damage to the stability of Western nations by tearing down moral reputations can only benefit their adversaries.

The problems posed by international business competition are immense. It is obviously impossible for a country like the U.S.A. to insist that all lands traded with must accept the puritanical standards we now talk of imposing.

A recent visitor to Saudi Arabia, there on a preliminary negotiating trip, was told by a high court official there would be no point in sending a mission to complete the deal unless it was prepared to pay an extra 10% commission to host country officials. "That is the way we do business here," he added.

This is a well known faact. In many countries between the Mediterranean and the Yellow Sea, it has long been customary to grease palms and arrange kickbacks. The Italian Communist Party, for example, receives kickbacks on all East-West trade contracts Italy signs.

PRINCE BERNHARD
. . . is he the 'high
Dutch official'? . . .

One idea now pondered is that a fair practices code should be prepared by an international forum for later presentation to those governments considered likeliest to give the idea serious consideration. As a start, these might include all members of NATO and the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD).

Such a code could propose a maximum commission rate which signatory nations would pledge themselves and their private companies to observe. Adherence to such a fixed standard should limit foolish and immoral competition among firms seeking to outbribe each other in lands where bribery is still an accepted practice.

A good behavior code could be guaranteed internationally and private companies involved might perhaps be ensured by participating nations. U.S. concerns already have their investments in developing regions underwritten by Washington. It is even logical that the World Bank play an active role in such a program and that all governments involved might be asked to make available, as swiftly as possible, any documents they have involving suspected violations.

This is only one approach to a disturbing problem that deeply concerns the trading nations of the West. The latter have seen how present methods of investigating malpractices can get out of hand in a politically dangerous way. They have also discovered to their sorrow that the current global race to peddle arms contains even nastier aspects than hitherto suspected.

One may hope that even before the present series of inquiries has been concluded, a start will be made in facing the crux of the matter. This requires creating a self-regulatory system for the great commercial nations most of which are allied to or friendly with the United States.

Tempus Fugit

As does the passing of the seasons, certain events demark time's flight.

Sorrowfully remember, if you will, Richard Speck's carving up of eight nurses in Chicago in 1966. That was a carnage headliner for the Sixties or any other decade.

The papers now report that Speck has earned a parole hearing in September "because of good behavior."

Such hearings are only a matter of course. No chance, we imagine and hope, that he would be paroled. But he has "earned" it, and hat says something about the system.

Such crimes as Speck's sorely try society's forgiving impulses. But once sentence is imposed, cases usually become only a matter of bookwork. People are not very intelligent about delving into such things as motivation, comulsion and the like. He gets the standard 50o-150 years and earns, as amatter of course, a parole hearing after ten years for "good behavior." One helpful determination, in our opinion, would be whether he is any less crazy. We missed any reference to that.

But crime and punishment aside, it serves as a matter of measuring time.

In the not-too-distant future you will be reading "Charles Manson has earned a parole hearing . . ."

High Bills Are Understood

Deserving an immense load of fresh manure was an argument presented by a Lincoln Chamber of Commerce representative Monday to the City Council with regard to the water rate controversy. The chamber opposes the present rate structure.

The chamber spokesman said people would conserve water if they could understand the rates. "All the fancy gimmickry is not necessary to encourage conservation," he said.

Hah!

Some people will conserve water because they regard it as a precious resource.

Many people will restrict their use of water only when it costs them too much to use it.

For selfish and other more noble reasons we have opposed the base demand formula written ino the presen water rate structure. We advocate a change in the rate plan.

Words For The Senator

Lincoln, Neb.

There is a bill that is in the current session of Congress called S-1. It is the biggest piece of baloney imaginable. Senator Sam Ervin (D-N.C.), one of the bill's original authors, now disassociated with it entirely and shocked and upset by his colleagues' attempts to use it to undo democracy, puts it this way:

"In its present state, S-1 is a hideous proposal which merits the establishment that is essentially a police state."

As I understand, Senator Roman Hruska (R-Neb.) is responsible for the horrendous provisions of this legislative chamber of horrors.

Senseless, brainless, idiotic, simple, shallow, imprudent, witless, irrational, inane, ridiculous, mindless, luricrous, muddled, absurd, half-witted, illogical, unintelligent, scatter-brained, unwary, incautious, misguided and injudicious are the words that describe Roman Hruska.

Rich Man's Government

Lincoln, Neb.

I think the government and the IRS have a lot of nerve, putting a place in the income tax forms about whether or not a person wants to contribute money to campaign funds. It's hard enough, scratching up the tax bite, without financing these loud-mouthed politicians.

I think they also should definitely put a limit on what any one candidate can spend to try to get an office, and the amount of individual contributions. It's getting to be a rich man's government, where an office is bought and paid for. These people cannot possibly understand the little fellow's problems and needs.

Cancer, Enemy To Be Defeated

Lincoln, Neb.

Cancer is the enemy of each one of us. It is no respecter of age, taking wee ones, those in the prime years of their lives or finally, those in the golden years of retirement.

As yet there is no one positive answer to its many ugly faces and one hope is that dedicated research will be able to provide us with a hoped-for miracle of prevention rather than the heart-rending route of cure.

Remember how we worked to provide research for polio? Now, let's attack cancer with the same zeal.

Lancaster County and the City of Lincoln have a tremendous team of volunteers — let's support their offer of their free time by giving generously when they visit our homes or businesses.

Who Is The Culprit?

Lincoln, Neb.

"The Final Days" by Woodward and Bernstein must logically show that there is somewhere about the White House a covert conspiracy to destroy representative government from the U.S.

The reporters maintain they had access to "notes, diaries, transcripts of conversations, White House logs, official documents, hearing testimony." How did they get this access?

Even historians cannot get this type of material 100 years after former presiens have left office. Someone in control doesn't like our form of government and is saying to the reporters: "Here, take what you want, either secret or otherwise?"

The sooner we as the electorate pinpoint who is behind such a dastardly conspiracy, the safer the U.S. will be.

Words Forgotten

Falls City, Neb.

Surely the late President John F. Kennedy would turn over in his grave if he could know how far this nation has strayed from the ideals Kennedy believed in and practiced.

I'm certain he would feel especially disenchanted with actions of peers from the party he served. But his disappointment would include the Ford administration, as well, particularly with regard to its foreign policy.

". . . The world remembers, the world must never forget, that aggression unchallenged is aggression unleashed.

"We of the United States have not forgotten."

I think it's about time Democrats stopped trying to identify with this brilliant young President who was a dedicated patriot. And Republicans may as well forget him, too, for they have forgotten his warning that "aggression unchallenged is aggression unleashed."

Nuclear Power Debate

WASHINGTON — It is difficult to pick out the single most dangerous war cry of the American environmental movement. All too many of these people seem to cherish extremism the way John D. Rockefeller cherished money.

Nevertheless, I will venture a choice: The most dangerous current environmentalists' fetish is their deplorable, twisted, ignorant attack on nuclear power which, by way of underlining its importance, happens to be the best hope of an adequate energy supply for America's future.

You've probably seen the cartoons. "Dirty" nuclear power plants leaking radioactive fumes the way secret backroom political meetings leak cigar smoke. And maybe you saw the evening news programs recently, where three nuclear engineers resigned their jobs at General Electric charging that atomic energy threatens the world with radiation hazards and war.

Ah, but it turns out that the three men were affiliated with something called "Creative Initiative," a California religious-political organization whose leaders have been quoted as saying "God did not create plutonium, and therefore it's evil." That didn't make the news. News coverage favors the simple sensationalist charges that can fit a sixty-second video slot.

The nuclear power issue is especially hot in California. Local voters are already debating Proposition 15, which would curb nuclear energy development in the state unless and until the legislature determines that all liability and safety questions have been resolved.

DR. DIXY LEE RAY
bushwhackers . . .

On the national level, a kindred campaign against nuclear energy development is being keynoted by presidential candidate Morris Udall and Washington's "Environmental Action" lobby.

In a recent speech, Udall charged that the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission is moving too quickly to build nuclear-powered generating stations off the New Jersey coast. Udall attacked "the Ford administration's commitment to a wasteful technology where the risks are not yet fully understood. The nation should not commit itself to further development of nuclear technology without far-reaching reform of current practices."

And "Environmental Action"? These are the boys who have brought us "The Dirty Dozen" — not the two-fisted movie, but the annual hit-list of 12 congressmen charged with being "anti-environment." This year, nuclear power attitudes are a major criterion.

Iowa Republican Charles Grassley was charged: "Despite the costs and dangers of nuclear power plants, one of which is located very near Grassley's district in Palo, Iowa, Grassley has shown very little concern for the potential dangers of nuclear power." Others were also condemned for the heinous crime of supporting nuclear power.

How tragic that the media so often aid and abet these specious anti-nuclear charges with little or no attention to the overwhelming body of scientific opinion. But perhaps that will change now that the politics of 1976 have yielded an extraordinarily authoritative and mediagenic candidate who can set the record straight.

In mid-March, Dr. Dixy Lee Ray announced her candidacy for governor of the state of Washington. Dr. Ray is a Democrat, a former chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and a former director of the Pacific Science Center. What's more, she is nothing if not colorful, having lived here in the nation's capital in a trailer with her two dogs! The 61-year-old Ms. Ray hesitates about taking a position on whales in Puget Sound, but she is forthright on nuclear power: "It's safe, economic and environmentally acceptable. One of the tragedies of modern life is that such technical issues become emotional issues."

Stay tuned and we'll see if the bushwhackers at Environmental Action have the courage to take on Dixy Lee Ray.

Amtrak's Golden Age

WASHINGTON — The golden age of railroads is not yet over for the corporate moguls who run Amtrak. The evidence can be found in their expense accounts.

Congress established Amtrak in 1971 to manage the nation's passenger rail system. The original intent was to subsidize Amtrak for only five years. Thereafter, Amtrak was expected to break even.

At the end of the fifth year, however, the railroad is still deep in the red. Last year's loss was a painful $352 million. And just last week, Amtrak executives trekked up to Capitol Hill to ask for another $633 million subsidy.

Yet this staggering deficit, apparently, has had no restraining effect on the railroad bosses. They continue to squander the taxpayers' subsidies with reckless abandon.

Amtrak's president, Paul H. Reistrup, draws an annual $85,000 salary. The 11 vice presidents are also paid an adequate $50,000 a year on the average. This ought to be enough for them to struggle along on.

Yet the railroad has just provided them with brand-new automobiles. Their business expenses hit $49,000 last year, most of it for food and liquor. Reistrup spent $576.12 in September, for example, on candles, flowers, food and booze for a staff party.

In fact, Amtrak sometimes picks up the tab when its executives simply go out for cocktails. A corporate vice president, Calvin Andringa, took Reistrup to a favorite pub. Another time, Andringa invited the vice chairman, Mary Head, out for drinks. The bills were charged to Amtrak which pays them, of course, with taxpayers' money.

Last year, Amtrak shelled out $600 so that a vice president, Harold Graham, could belong to the posh Kenwood Country Club in the Washington suburbs.

Amtrak is trying to persuade the public to ride the rails, but its executives don't always heed their own advertising. Last year, the company laid out a startling $612,574 for air travel, even though its executives are entitled to ride the rails free of charge.

The general counsel, Nathaniel Goodrich, flew between Washington and New York, Washington and Pittsburgh, New York and Boston — which have excellent Amtrak service. A vice president, David Watts, also shuttled between Washington and New York by plane. We found vouchers, charging for first-class air fare from Washington to Norfolk, Va.

One vice president, Bruce Pike, turned in an expense account of $6,550.50 last year for entertaining Washington bigwigs. The names of his guests aren't listed, only the charges. Amtrak concedes that his "effectiveness would be impeded" if he disclosed the names of the federal officials he wines and dines.

The expense vouchers reveal, however, that Reistrup threw a brunch last December. Among the prominent guests was Federal Railroad Administration's chief, Asaph Hall, who helps decide how much government money Amtrak will get. Reistrup's invitation list also contains the names of two congressmen, Silvio Conte, R-Mass., and Fred Rooney, D-Pa., who have an influential voice in trasportation matters. Rooney said he didn't go; Conte didn't return our calls.

The vouchers of Amtrak vice president Edwin Edel indicate that he entertained White House aide Russ Rourke on three separate occasions. Once, Edel ran up a $100 bill at the Annapolis Yacht Club supposedly entertaining Rourke, his wife and an Iranian diplomat.

Yet the White House aide told us he never got any of the free entertainment. Edel blames his sloppy record-keeping for the erroneous vouchers, saying Rourke was invited but canceled out.

It is the accumulation, rather than any single gift, that gradually obligates them.

Footnote: Amtrak officials, to their credit, cooperated with our investigation. A spokesman said the club memberships are given only to executives who need them for official entertaining. The expenditures for food, liquor and entertainment, the spokesman said, helped to increase communication. Reistrup paid one-third of the cost of his brunch out of his own pocket. The spokesman also said that Amtrak officials fly only when absolutely necessary.

An Ethics Code For Business

THE HAGUE— One result of the Arabian nightmare of scandals flowing from United States business malpractices is increasing thought in some nations about the need to draft an international code of good behavior. Signatory nations would be expected to apply this to governmental and private contracts.

There has been so much discussion of alleged U.S. commercial misbehavior in search of competitive deals that many people abroad are eager to see serious consideration of a regulation.

The Netherlands exemplifies such views. It is hugely involved in foreign commerce as a nation existing by trade. It has also been politically tarnished by innuendo emerging from Sen. Church's inquiry in Washington.

Some rather dubious witnesses summoned before Church's committee have spoken of a "high Dutch official" said to have accepted large payments from the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation. It was implied that this is probably Prince Bernhard, husband of Dutch Queen Juliana.

Bernhard immediately demanded an official investigation here in order to clear his name. The entire royal family is reportedly determined to ride out the storm, confident in Bernhard's probity. The Queen and her husband even plan to visit the United States this autumn to honor the Bicentennial celebrations.

By the smudging of this nation's moral pride and commercial standing produced by unproven allegations during current inquiries encourages a climate of character assassination unrelated to charges of business misbehavior.

Thus in a quite separate release of a 31-year-old U.S. intelligence report of questionable origin, Bernhard was accused of leaking to Germany secrets concerning the then-impending Arnhem battle although he had a splendid record as commander of all Dutch resistance during World War II.

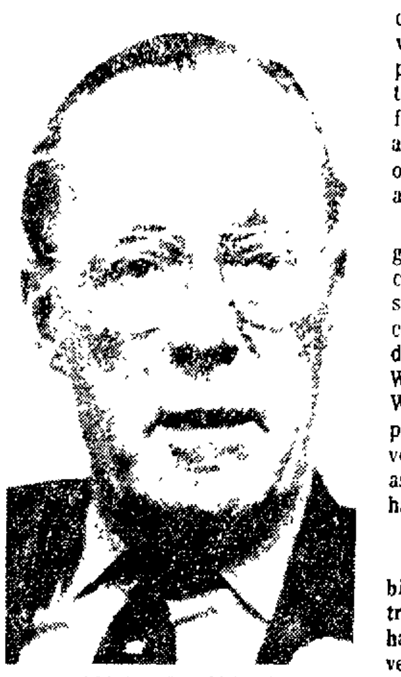
To avoid publicizing any kind of inferential slander — unless it is proven justified — Europeans are devoting more attention to this overall problem than if it were only a business matter. For it is evident that any damage to the stability of Western nations by tearing down moral reputations can only benefit their adversaries.

The problems posed by international business competition are immense. It is obviously impossible for a country like the U.S.A. to insist that all lands traded with must accept the puritanical standards we now talk of imposing.

A recent visitor to Saudi Arabia, there on a preliminary negotiating trip, was told by a high court official there would be no point in sending a mission to complete the deal unless it was prepared to pay an extra 10% commission to host country officials. "That is the way we do business here," he added.

This is a well known faact. In many countries between the Mediterranean and the Yellow Sea, it has long been customary to grease palms and arrange kickbacks. The Italian Communist Party, for example, receives kickbacks on all East-West trade contracts Italy signs.



PRINCE BERNHARD
. . . is he the 'high Dutch official'? . . .

One idea now pondered is that a fair practices code should be prepared by an international forum for later presentation to those governments considered likeliest to give the idea serious consideration. As a start, these might include all members of NATO and the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD).

Such a code could propose a maximum commission rate which signatory nations would pledge themselves and their private companies to observe. Adherence to such a fixed standard should limit foolish and immoral competition among firms seeking to outbribe each other in lands where bribery is still an accepted practice.

A good behavior code could be guaranteed internationally and private companies involved might perhaps be ensured by participating nations. U.S. concerns already have their investments in developing regions underwritten by Washington. It is even logical that the World Bank play an active role in such a program and that all governments involved might be asked to make available, as swiftly as possible, any documents they have involving suspected violations.

This is only one approach to a disturbing problem that deeply concerns the trading nations of the West. The latter have seen how present methods of investigating malpractices can get out of hand in a politically dangerous way. They have also discovered to their sorrow that the current global race to peddle arms contains even nastier aspects than hitherto suspected.

One may hope that even before the present series of inquiries has been concluded, a start will be made in facing the crux of the matter. This requires creating a self-regulatory system for the great commercial nations most of which are allied to or friendly with the United States.

Nuclear Power Debate

WASHINGTON — It is dif[illegible]t to pick out the single most [illegible]gerous war cry of the [illegible]rican environmental move[illegible]nt. All too many of these peo[illegible] seem to cherish extremism [illegible] way John D. Rockefeller [illegible]rished money.

Nevertheless, I will venture a [illegible]e. The most dangerous [illegible]rent environmentalists' fetish [illegible]heir deplorable, twisted, ig[illegible]ant attack on nuclear power [illegible] by way of underlining its [illegible]portance, happens to be the [illegible] of an adequate energy [illegible] for America's future.

[illegible]ve probably seen the car[illegible] "Dirty" nuclear power [illegible] smoking radioactive fumes [illegible] secret backroom [illegible]al meetings leak cigar [illegible]. And maybe you saw the [illegible] news programs recently, [illegible] three nuclear engineers [illegible] their jobs at General [illegible] charging that atomic [illegible] threatens the world with [illegible] hazards and war.

[illegible] but it turns out that the [illegible] men were affiliated with [illegible]thing called "Creative [illegible]ative," a California [illegible] political organization [illegible] leaders have been quoted [illegible] 'God did not create [illegible] and therefore it's [illegible]. That didn't make the News coverage favors the sensationalist charges [illegible] a sixty-second video.

[illegible] power issue is [illegible] California [illegible] which would [illegible] energy develop[illegible] state unless and un[illegible] legislature determines [illegible]ability and safety [illegible] been resolved.

DR. DIXY LEE RAY
. . . she'll take on the bushwhackers . . .

On the national level, a kindred campaign against nuclear energy development is being keynoted by presidential candidate Morris Udall and Washington's "Environmental Action" lobby.

In a recent speech, Udall charged that the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission is moving too quickly to build nuclear-powered generating stations off the New Jersey coast. Udall attacked the Ford administration's commitment to a wasteful technology where the risks are not yet fully understood. The nation should not commit itself to further development of nuclear technology without far-reaching reform of current practices.

And Environmental Action? These are the boys who have brought us "The Dirty Dozen" — not the two-fisted movie but the annual hit-list of 12 congressmen charged with being anti-environment. This year, nuclear power attitudes are a major criterion.

Iowa Republican Charles Grassley was charged. "Despite the costs and dangers of nuclear power plants, one of which is located very near Grassley's district in Palo, Iowa, Grassley has shown very little concern for the potential dangers of nuclear power." Others were also condemned for the heinous crime of supporting nuclear power.

How tragic that the media so often aid and abet these specious anti-nuclear charges with little or no attention to the overwhelming body of scientific opinion. But perhaps that will change now that the politics of 1976 have yielded an extraordinarily authoritative and mediagenic candidate who can set the record straight.

In mid-March, Dr. Dixy Lee Ray announced her candidacy for governor of the state of Washington. Dr. Ray is a Democrat, a former chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and a former director of the Pacific Science Center. What's more, she is nothing if not colorful, having lived here in the nation's capital in a trailer with her two dogs. The 61-year-old Ms. Ray hesitates about taking a position on whales in Puget Sound, but she is forthright on nuclear power: "It's safe, economic and environmentally acceptable. One of the tragedies of modern life is that such technical issues become emotional issues."

Stay tuned and we'll see if the bushwhackers at Environmental Action have the courage to take on Dixy Lee Ray.

Amtrak's Golden Age

WASHINGTON — The golden age of railroads is not yet over for the corporate moguls who run Amtrak. The evidence can be found in their expense accounts.

Congress established Amtrak in 1971 to manage the nation's passenger rail system. The original intent was to subsidize Amtrak for only five years. Thereafter, Amtrak was expected to break even.

At the end of the fifth year, however, the railroad is still deep in the red. Last year's loss was a painful $352 million. And just last week, Amtrak executives trekked up to Capitol Hill to ask for another $633 million subsidy.

Yet this staggering deficit, apparently, has had no restraining effect on the railroad bosses. They continue to squander the taxpayers' subsidies with reckless abandon.

Amtrak's president, Paul H. Reistrup, draws an annual $85,000 salary. The 11 vice presidents are also paid an adequate $50,000 a year on the average. This ought to be enough for them to struggle along on.

Yet the railroad has just provided them with brand-new automobiles. Their business expenses hit $49,000 last year, most of it for food and liquor. Reistrup spent $576.12 in September, for example, on candies, flowers, food and booze for a staff party.

In fact, Amtrak sometimes picks up the tab when its executives simply go out for cocktails. A corporate vice president, Calvin Andringa, took Reistrup to a favorite pub. Another time Andringa invited the vice chairman, Mary Head, out for drinks. The bills were charged to Amtrak which pays them, of course, with taxpayers' money.

Last year, Amtrak shelled out $600 so that a vice president, Harold Graham, could belong to the posh Kenwood Country Club in the Washington suburbs.

Amtrak is trying to persuade the public to ride the rails, but its executives don't always heed their own advertising. Last year the company laid out a startling $412,574 for air travel, even though its executives are entitled to ride the rails free of charge.

The general counsel, Nathaniel Goodrich, flew between Washington and New York, Washington and Pittsburgh, New York and Boston — which have excellent Amtrak service. A vice president, David Watts, also shuttled between Washington and New York by plane. We found vouchers, charging for first-class air fare from Washington to Norfolk, Va.

One vice president, Bruce Pike, turned in an expense account of $6,550.50 last year for entertaining Washington bigwigs. The names of his guests aren't listed, only the charges. Amtrak concedes that his "effectiveness would be impeded" if he disclosed the names of the federal officials he wines and dines.

The expense vouchers reveal, however, that Reistrup threw a brunch last December. Among the prominent guests was Federal Railroad Administration's chief, Asaph Hall, who helps decide how much government money Amtrak will get. Reistrup's invitation list also contains the names of two congressmen, Silvio Conte, R-Mass., and Fred Rooney, D-Pa., who have an influential voice in trasportation matters. Rooney said he didn't go. Conte didn't return our calls.

The vouchers of Amtrak vice president Edwin Edel indicate that he entertained White House aide Russ Rourke on three separate occasions. Once, Edel ran up a $100 bill at the Annapolis Yacht Club supposedly entertaining Rourke, his wife and an Iranian diplomat.

Yet the White House aide told us he never got any of the free entertainment. Edel blames his sloppy record-keeping for the erroneous vouchers, saying Rourke was invited but canceled out.

It is the accumulation rather than any single gift that gradually obligates them.

Footnote: Amtrak officials, to their credit, cooperated with our investigation. A spokesman said the club memberships are given only to executives who need them for official entertaining. The expenditures for food, liquor and entertainment, the spokesman said, helped to increase communication. Reistrup paid one-third of the cost of his brunch out of his own pocket. The spokesman also said that Amtrak officials fly only when absolutely necessary.

Words For The Senator

Lincoln, Neb.

There is a bill that is in the current session of Congress called S-1. It is the biggest piece of baloney imaginable. Senator Sam Ervin (D-N.C.), one of the bill's original authors, now disassociated with it entirely and shocked and upset by his colleagues' attempts to use it to undo democracy, puts it this way:

"In its present state, S-1 is a hideous proposal which merits the establishment that is essentially a police state."

As I understand, Senator Roman Hruska (R-Neb.) is responsible for the horrendous provisions of this legislative chamber of horrors.

Senseless, brainless, idiotic, simple, shallow, imprudent, witless, irrational, inane, ridiculous, mindless, luricrous, muddled, absurd, half-witted, illogical, unintelligent, scatterbrained, unwary, incautious, misguided and injudicious are the words that describe Roman Hruska.

Rich Man's Government

Lincoln, Neb.

I think the government and the IRS have a lot of nerve, putting a place in the income tax forms about whether or not a person wants to contribute money to campaign funds. It's hard enough, scratching up the tax bite, without financing these loud-mouthed politicians.

I think they also should definitely put a limit on what any one candidate can spend to try to get an office, and the amount of individual contributions. It's getting to be a rich man's government, where an office is bought and paid for. These people cannot possibly understand the little fellow's problems and needs.

Cancer, Enemy To Be Defeated

Lincoln, Neb.

Cancer is the enemy of each one of us. It is no respecter of age, taking wee ones, those in the prime years of their lives or finally, those in the golden years of retirement.

As yet there is no one positive answer to its many ugly faces and one hope is that dedicated research will be able to provide us with a hoped-for miracle of prevention rather than the heart-rending route of cure.

Remember how we worked to provide research for polio? Now, let's attack cancer with the same zeal.

Lancaster County and the City of Lincoln have a tremendous team of volunteers — let's support their offer of their free time by giving generously when they visit our homes or businesses.

Who Is The Culprit?

Lincoln, Neb.

"The Final Days" by Woodward and Bernstein must logically show that there is somewhere about the White House a covert conspiracy to destroy representative government from the U.S.

The reporters maintain they had access to "notes, diaries, transcripts of conversations, White House logs, official documents, hearing testimony." How did they get this access?

Even historians cannot get this type of material 100 years after former presiens have left office. Someone in control doesn't like our form of government and is saying to the reporters: "Here, take what you want, either secret or otherwise?"

The sooner we as the electorate pinpoint who is behind such a dastardly conspiracy, the safer the U.S. will be.

Words Forgotten

Falls City, Neb.

Surely the late President John F. Kennedy would turn over in his grave if he could know how far this nation has strayed from the ideals Kennedy believed in and practiced.

I'm certain he would feel especially disenchanted with actions of peers from the party he served. But his disappointment would include the Ford administration, as well, particularly with regard to its foreign policy.

"The world remembers, the world must never forget, that aggression unchallenged is aggression unleashed.

We in the United States have not forgotten."

It is about time Democrats stopped trying to identify with this brilliant young President who was a dedicated patriot. And Republicans may as well forget him too, for they have forgotten his warning that "aggression unchallenged is aggression unleashed."

Howard Hughes' Death Called Ordinary—He Wasn't

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors discovered Tuesday that Howard Hughes had died "an ordinary death" due to kidney failure, while government agents checked fingerprints to make positive identification of the billionaire recluse.

The Internal Revenue Service also said that if Hughes left his fortune to medical research, which his lawyer says he may have done, it will escape taxes. Otherwise, the maximum estate tax of 77% could apply against much of Hughes' money, estaimted at between $1.5 billion and $2 billion.

Meanwhile, after a two-and-a-half hour autopsy, Dr. Henry McIntosh, chairman of internal medicine at Baylor College of Medicine, said:

"The kidneys are responsible for getting rid of waste products. When they don't function well, waste products accumulate. If nothing is done, the patient eventually will die. This, I think, is what happened."

"As far as I'm concerned it's an ordinary death," said Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk, Harris County medical examiner. "It's just that it was not an ordinary person."

Jachimczyk said Hughes' relatives, whom he did not name, granted a request for the autopsy. A spokesman for Hughes' company had initially said the billionaire had died of a stroke.

A Treasury Department spokesman said two IRS agents and one Customs Service agent were dispatched to the Houston hospital where Hughes' body was taken Monday to make the identification and would bring back to Washington proof of Hughes' identification.

Mysteries continue to cloud the Hughes story, meanwhile, including what will become of his fortune, estimated at $2 billion, and exactly why Hughes decided to drop out of public view in the 1950s when he was regarded as both a wealthy and romantic figure.

Greg Bautzer, a Hughes attorney, said Tuesday he does not know whether Hughes left a will, but predicted the bulk of the 70-year-old Hughes' fortune probably will go to medical research.

In Los Angeles, Bautzer said Hughes was always intensely interested in medical research and that if there was a will it would probably give a considerable amount to that field. Bautzer said he did not know what medical foundation or cause might benefit.

In a 1972 news conference, Hughes said he planned to leave his money to the Howard Hughes Medical Institute in Miami.

"Over a period of time, he talked to me about various forms of bequests," Bautzer said, but he added that he was not asked to make up a will. He said he had the impression Hughes wanted to write his own will without an attorney.

"He was a brilliant man and could have done this very easily," he said.

Bautzer denied published reports that he had said Hughes left a standard will leaving the bulk of his estate to aerospace research.

The first word of Hughes' illness came Monday when Methodist Hospital was told he would be arriving for treatment. Doctors aboard his plane said he died 30 minutes before his plane landed and a spokesman for his Summa Corp. said he had died of a stroke, "a cerebral vascular accident."

U.S. Customs officials said presentation of Hughes' birth certificate satisfied them the body brought off the airplane was that of Hughes. Witnesses described the corpse as pale and wasted.

Jachimczyk said he must turn over the Hughes case to a Texas-licensed physician, or himself sign Hughes' death certificate.

Hughes inherited his father's tool company before he was 20 and went on to become a pioneer in aviation, a discoverer of Hollywood stars and head of a vast empire of hotels, gambling casinos, airlines and space and electronic concerns. But for the last 20 years of his life he was an enigmatic figure, the subject of strange rumors.

He was so elusive two shareholders in his company once tried to have him declared legally dead. The effort failed when the judge believed Hughes' lawyer, though the lawyer admitted he'd never seen Hughes.

As to what will happen to Hughes' interests, a spokesman for his umbrella conglomerate, Summa Corp., said the Summa empire would continued to be run by directors, "as in the past."

"It has been run by the board of directors and a three-person executive committee," spokesman Arelo Sederberg said. "It will continue to be run by that group. The company will continue to be a company."

He said he did not know who would be named executors of Hughes' estate.

Hughes' marriage to actress Jean Peters, which ended in divorve in the early 1970s, was childless. In Beverly Hills, Calif., Miss Peters said: "I'm sorry; I'm saddened." Hughes' first marriage, to Houston socialite Ella Rice, ended in divorce when he was 23.

Hughes did not earn his initial fame as a businessman but as a pilot. He set aviation speed records in 1935 and again in 1938 when he circled the globe in 3 days, 19 hours.

He started designing his own planes, giving birth to the Hughes Aircraft Co. He designed or helped design major components of the XF-11 experimental photographic plane, the P38 Lightning fighter, the Constellation airliner and the H-1 monoplane.

In addition to his aviation interests, Hughes was involved in the Hollywood scene. In the 1930s, he had dated such stars as Jean Harlow, Ginger Rogers, Lana Turner, Ava Gardner, Yvonne de Carlo and Ida Lupino.

Smoking Causes 80% Of Deaths

Houston (UPI) — Cigarette smoking causes at least 80% of lung cancer cases, according to the American Cancer Society.

The ACS says the risk of lung cancer increases if a close relative has had the disease.

For men, most lung cancers occur between ages 60-69. Men who smoked two or more packs of cigarettes a day for 20 years and who started smoking before age 15 are 15 to 20 times more likely to die from lung cancer than men who never smoked.

U.S. For Autonomy For Eastern Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Helmut A. Sonnenfeldt, a chief adviser to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, affirmed Tuesday the administration's support for the independence of Eastern Europe from Soviet domination and the aspirations of its peoples for "a normal life."

However, Sonnenfeldt said, while the United States should take reasonable steps to encourage evolution toward autonomy in those Communist countries, it must remain aware of instability that fould lead to an explosion with "tragic consequences."

Recalling the uprisings in Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968, he said, "geographically the Soviet Union is a great power nearby and that cannot be changed."

Sonnenfeldt, the State Department counselor and a specialist in U.S.-Soviet relations, outlined his views for reporters following publication of a summary of remarks he made last December in London to American ambassadors based in Europe.

His reported suggestion then that it is in the long-term interest of the United States to encourage Eastern Europe to develop "a more natural and organic" relationship with the Soviet Union has generated considerable controversy both in this country and abroad.

Sonnenfeldt said he regretted that his use of the word "organic" may have contributed to distress among millions of Americans of Eastern European ancestry by appearing to suggest the United States accepts a Soviet sphere of influence in the area.

In fact, he said, he was advocating a relationship that would tolerate independence and national identity in contrast to one based on power, force and repression.

"We have never accepted a Soviet sphere of influence," he said.

The election-year controversy prompted President Ford to declare his support for the freedom and independence of Eastern Europe and his opposition to Soviet domination before an audience of representatives of 42 ethnic groups last Friday in Milwaukee. The State Department, meanwhile, affirmed Kissinger's backing for the aspirations of Eastern Europeans.

The "leaking" of the summary, a classified document, "is a very serious matter," Robert L. Funseth, the department spokesman, said in a statement approved by Kissinger.

Sonnenfeldt, meanwhile, said the quotations attributed to him in a number of newspaper articles were "reasonably accurate" but with some distortions based partly on the fact that his remarks were compressed by a note-taker for the summary sent to U.S. embassies and circulated within the department.

Harassment Of Diplomats Brings Diplomatic Protests

Moscow (UPI) — The United States and the Soviet Union traded diplomatic protests Tuesday over the harassment of diplomats in New York and Moscow, including the first violent incident in the Soviet capital.

A spokesman for the U.S. embassy said the American protest, the fourth in two weeks, was handed to the Soviet foreign ministry.

In the latest encounter Monday night, cultural counselor David Benson said he was stopped by a group of Russians outside a Moscow theater, jostled and grabbed by the lapels when he attempted to escape.

The Soviets announced in Moscow that the Soviet mission to the United Nations had protested over a demonstration near the building Sunday.

The Soviet note charged that a "group of hoodlums" had shouted abuse at Soviet diplomats and their families and attacked a bus carrying Soviet diplomatic couriers while New York police stood by without acting.

The Soviets demanded the United States "curb the rampant Zionist thugs and stop and prevent in the future hostile anti-Soviet actions."

The Moscow harassment has included threatening phone calls to diplomats and their families, a deluge of telegrams, and two bomb scares which led to the evacuation of the nine-story U.S. embassy building in downtown Moscow.

Russian Military Pilots In Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon spokesman said Tuesday there are Russian military pilots in Cuba, but the Defense Department does not know what they are doing there.

"We are aware of some Soviet pilots in Cuba," spokesman William Greener told newsmen at a briefing.

Greener said, "We are evaluating" the reports and that the Pentagon knows nothing more about the situation at this time.

He said, "I don't have anything on numbers."

Other sources said there are about 20 Russian pilots in Cuba at this time.

The Russians have been flying aircraft in and out of Cuba for years, and the Cuban Air Force is equipped almost entirely with Soviet-built MIG jet fighters and other Soviet aircraft.

There was no immediate indication whether or not the Russians had sent additional planes to Cuba to be flown by Soviet pilots.

Chops Were 11¢ A Pound

Washington (AP) — If you want to find the average retail price for pork chops in 1890, the federal government has a new publication where you can look it up and discover that chops were selling at 11 cents a pound then.

The new publication is "Historical Statistics of the United States, Colonial Times to 1970," a revised edition published for the Bicentennial by the Census Bureau. A previous second edition was issued 16 years ago. The present one contains half as many more figures.

The new publication is in two volumes and has 1,298 pages of tables and notations; the page size is about 9 by 11 inches. The two-volume works sells for $26.

Systematic federal gathering of statistics didn't start until after the Civil War, but the new work draws on commercial and other records dating back to early colonial times.

In Los Angeles, Bautzer said Hughes was always intensely interested in medical research and that if there was a will it would probably give a considerable amount to that field. Bautzer said he did not know what medical foundation or cause might benefit.

In a 1972 news conference, Hughes said he planned to leave his money to the Howard Hughes Medical Institute in Miami.

"Over a period of time, he talked to me about various forms of bequests," Bautzer said, but he added that he was not asked to make up a will. He said he had the impression Hughes wanted to write his own will without an attorney.

"He was a brilliant man and could have done this very easily," he said.

Bautzer denied published reports that he had said Hughes left a standard will leaving the bulk of his estate to aerospace research.

The first word of Hughes' illness came Monday when Methodist Hospital was told he would be arriving for treatment. Doctors aboard his plane said he died 30 minutes before his plane landed and a spokesman for his Summa Corp. said he had died of a stroke, "a cerebral vascular accident."

U.S. Customs officials said presentation of Hughes' birth certificate satisfied them the body brought off the airplane was that of Hughes. Witnesses described the corpse as pale and wasted.

Jachimczyk said he must turn over the Hughes case to a Texas-licensed physician, or himself sign Hughes' death certificate.

Hughes inherited his father's tool company before he was 20 and went on to become a pioneer in aviation, a discoverer of Hollywood stars and head of a vast empire of hotels, gambling casinos, airlines and space and electronic concerns. But for the last 20 years of his life he was an enigmatic figure, the subject of strange rumors.

He was so elusive two shareholders in his company once tried to have him declared legally dead. The effort failed when the judge believed Hughes' lawyer, though the lawyer admitted he'd never seen Hughes.

As to what will happen to Hughes' interests, a spokesman for his umbrella conglomerate, Summa Corp., said the Summa empire would continued to be run by directors, "as in the past."

"It has been run by the board of directors and a three-person executive committee," spokesman Arelo Sederberg said. "It will continue to be run by that group. The company will continue to be a company."

He said he did not know who would be named executors of Hughes' estate.

Hughes' marriage to actress Jean Peters, which ended in divorce in the early 1970s, was childless. In Beverly Hills, Calif., Miss Peters said "I'm sorry. I'm saddened." Hughes' first marriage, to Houston socialite Ella Rice, ended in divorce when he was 23.

Hughes did not earn his initial fame as a businessman but as a pilot. He set aviation speed records in 1935 and again in 1938 when he circled the globe in 3 days, 19 hours.

He started designing his own planes, giving birth to the Hughes Aircraft Co. He designed or helped design major components of the XF-11 experimental photographic plane, the P38 Lightning fighter, the Constellation airliner and the H-1 monoplane.

In addition to his aviation interests, Hughes was involved in the Hollywood scene. In the 1930s, he had dated such stars as Jean Harlow, Ginger Rogers, Lana Turner, Ava Gardner, Yvonne de Carlo and Ida Lupino.

Smoking Causes 80% Of Deaths

Houston (UPI) — Cigarette smoking causes at least 80% of lung cancer cases, according to the American Cancer Society.

The ACS says the risk of lung cancer increases if a close relative has had the disease.

For men, most lung cancers occur between ages 60-69. Men who smoked two or more packs of cigarettes a day for 20 years and who started smoking before age 15 are 15 to 20 times more likely to die from lung cancer than men who never smoked.

U.S. For Autonomy For Eastern Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Helmut A. Sonnenfeldt, a chief adviser to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, affirmed Tuesday the administration's support for the independence of Eastern Europe from Soviet domination and the aspirations of its peoples for "a normal life."

However, Sonnenfeldt said, while the United States should take reasonable steps to encourage evolution toward autonomy in those Communist countries, it must remain aware of instability that fould lead to an explosion with "tragic consequences."

Recalling the uprisings in Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968, he said, "geographically the Soviet Union is a great power nearby and that cannot be changed."

Sonnenfeldt, the State Department counselor and a specialist in U.S.-Soviet relations, outlined his views for reporters following publication of a summary of remarks he made last December in London to American ambassadors based in Europe.

His reported suggestion then that it is in the long-term interest of the United States to encourage Eastern Europe to develop "a more natural and organic" relationship with the Soviet Union has generated considerable controversy both in this country and abroad.

Sonnenfeldt said he regretted that his use of the word "organic" may have contributed to distress among millions of Americans of Eastern European ancestry by appearing to suggest the United States accepts a Soviet sphere of influence in the area.

In fact, he said, he was advocating a relationship that would tolerate independence and national identity in contrast to one based on power, force and repression.

"We have never accepted a Soviet sphere of influence," he said.

The election-year controversy prompted President Ford to declare his support for the freedom and independence of Eastern Europe and his opposition to Soviet domination before an audience of representatives of 42 ethnic groups last Friday in Milwaukee. The State Department, meanwhile, affirmed Kissinger's backing for the aspirations of Eastern Europeans.

The "leaking" of the summary, a classified document, "is a very serious matter," Robert L. Funseth, the department spokesman, said in a statement approved by Kissinger.

Sonnenfeldt, meanwhile, said the quotations attributed to him in a number of newspaper articles were "reasonably accurate" but with some distortions based partly on the fact that his remarks were compressed by a note-taker for the summary sent to U.S. embassies and circulated within the department.

Harassment Of Diplomats Brings Diplomatic Protests

Moscow (UPI) — The United States and the Soviet Union traded diplomatic protests Tuesday over the harassment of diplomats in New York and Moscow, including the first violent incident in the Soviet capital.

A spokesman for the U.S. embassy said the American protest, the fourth in two weeks, was handed to the Soviet foreign ministry.

In the latest encounter Monday night, cultural counselor David Benson said he was stopped by a group of Russians outside a Moscow theater, jostled and grabbed by the lapels when he attempted to escape.

The Soviets announced in Moscow that the Soviet mission to the United Nations had protested over a demonstration near the building Sunday.

The Soviet note charged that a "group of hoodlums" had shouted abuse at Soviet diplomats and their families and attacked a bus carrying Soviet diplomatic couriers while New York police stood by without acting.

The Soviets demanded the United States "curb the rampant Zionist thugs and stop and prevent in the future hostile anti-Soviet actions."

The Moscow harassment has included threatening phone calls to diplomats and their families, a deluge of telegrams, and two bomb scares which led to the evacuation of the nine-story U.S. embassy building in downtown Moscow.

Russian Military Pilots In Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon spokesman said Tuesday there are Russian military pilots in Cuba, but the Defense Department does not know what they are doing there.

"We are aware of some Soviet pilots in Cuba," spokesman William Greener told newsmen at a briefing.

Greener said, "We are evaluating" the reports and that the Pentagon knows nothing more about the situation at this time.

He said, "I don't have anything on numbers."

Other sources said there are about 20 Russian pilots in Cuba at this time.

The Russians have been flying aircraft in and out of Cuba for years, and the Cuban Air Force is equipped almost entirely with Soviet-built MIG jet fighters and other Soviet aircraft.

There was no immediate indication whether or not the Russians had sent additional planes to Cuba to be flown by Soviet pilots.

Chops Were 11¢ A Pound

Washington (AP) — If you want to find the average retail price for pork chops in 1890, the federal government has a new publication where you can look it up and discover that chops were selling at 11 cents a pound then.

The new publication is Historical Statistics of the United States, Colonial Times to 1970 — a revised edition published for the Bicentennial by the Census Bureau. A previous second edition was issued 16 years ago. The present one contains half as many more figures.

The new publication is in two volumes and has 1,298 pages of tables and notations, the page size is about 9 by 11 inches. The two-volume works sells for $26.

Systematic federal gathering of statistics didn't start until after the Civil War, but the new work draws on commercial and other records dating back to early colonial times.

Women Inmates Not Women's Libbers

Jacksonville, Fla. (UPI) — Female criminals are "worlds apart ideologically" from feminists, and women's lib cannot be blamed for the recent, dramatic rise of women criminals, according to a University of North Florida sociologist.

Dr. Chris Rasche, a criminal justice scholar, interviewed 62 women at the Duval County prison farm over a period of six months concerning their feminist leanings. Her conclusion: the feminist criminal is almost non-existent.

Women have traditionally been a small percentage of the criminal population — less than 5% of the country's total prisoners. But last year, female arrests increased 9% compared with a 2% increase for men.

"People grasped the most obvious conclusion," Dr. Rasche said — and that was that the women's movement was somehow responsible.

But the image of the women's libber who decides she can be every bit as criminal as a man is a myth, the researcher said.

"We couldn't find any women who talked in feminist terms at all," Dr. Rasche said. "They would love to have a man support them. They would love to stay home and take care of kids."

Most of the women prisoners interviewed didn't understand the feminist movement, she said. "They see it as threatening. They see it as telling them to go to work."

$851,000 Robbery Occurs Inside Newspaper Building

New York (UPI) — Three masked gunmen Tuesday burst from a stairwell in the basement of the Daily News building, surprised two Wells Fargo guards making a bank delivery and escaped with $851,000 in cash.

Police said the gunmen who carried out the well-planned robbery ambushed the guards and two Daily News employes shortly after 9 a.m. near the basement vault of a Citibank branch on 42nd Street in midtown Manhattan.

The suspects, who all wore multicolored ski masks, grabbed three money bags containing $851,000 and fled without firing a shot.

Detective Joseph Pellicane said he felt the robbery was an inside job. "Someone knew the layout of the building and the time of the shipment. I think definitely this could be an inside job," Pellicane said.

While authorities were uncertain of how the men made their escapes, police later broadcast an alert for two private garbage trucks seen leaving the scene about the time of the robbery.

According to police, the Wells Fargo guards parked their armored truck in front of the news building and entered the lobby dragging a dolly laden with some 20 money bags.

They got into a first-floor elevator with Betts Bresson, 54, an employe in the Classified Ads department at the News who said she was on her way to the basement to "pick up a check."

Mrs. Bresson said the two guards, Peter Ruppert and Arthur Tres, got off the elevator first. "They were right in front of me and when they walked around the corner, the stairway door burst open," she said. "I thought, 'Oh my God, it's someone from the Composing Department fooling around again.' "

The gunmen came at the guards from behind and they apparently had no time to use their revolvers, police said.

Jim Fitzpatrick, 53, assistant cashier at the News, said he was heading back to his office when he heard a scuffle at the end of the hall. He said the men spotted him and told him to line up against the wall and not make any noise. "They didn't make any threats," Fitzpatrick said.

Deputy Chief Martin Duffy of the Manhattan detective zone was asked how he would classify the robbery.

"Successful," he replied.

Firefighters Win Some, Lose Some In Court

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

There were winners and losers on both sides Tuesday in the State Court of Industrial Relations ruling on Lincoln firefighters demands for higher pay.

Newly-hired firefighters had something to cheer about. The minimum salary was increased 12.3% to $10,090.

Veteran firefighters at the top of the scale, however, had something to cry about. The maximum salary was raised only 8.6% to $11,850.60.

The city had offered a 10% across-the-board increase to all city workers. The Lincoln Firefighter's Association, Local 644, however, voted to reject the offer and to go to court.

The court refused to grant additional fringe benefits, stating that insufficient evidence had been presented on that point.

The court said, however, that the firefighters could ask again for more fringe benefits. Last fall the city had offered to pay for some of the equipment fire fighters had been paying for, an offer the firefighters rejected.

City government was a big loser in its attempts to establish a two-week lag in giving employe's their paychecks.

The court said the conversion to the lag, which the city was accomplishing by taking a small bite out of employe paychecks, could be done only after negotiation with employes, not unilaterally.

The court ordered city government to refund firefighters the amount the city government has been withholding from their paychecks.

There were hints Tuesday from city officials that this provision in the ruling may result in an appeal to the Nebraska Supreme Court.

City officials say the city payroll has grown too cumbersome to continue with the present system of issuing paychecks immediately after a pay period ends.

Converting to the two-week lag became an issue in wage negotiations last fall.

City employes objected that withholding small amounts from paychecks to establish the lag in effect reduced the amount of the pay increase they were being offered.

The argument was a factor in the city agreeing to the 10% wage hike which they had been fighting early in negotiations.

The bite being taken out of paychecks, however, will eventually be turned over to city employes, but only when they change employment, die or retire.

And while the payroll lag conversion resulted in reducing employe income during the first fiscal year, employes will realize the full benefit of 10% increase in subsequent years.

City Attorney Dana Roper, who handled much of the case for city government, said he does not yet know whether the taxpayers won or lost a a result of the court's ruling.

He said he believes, however, that most of the firefighters on the Lincoln Fire Department are veterans at the top of the scale, meaning that the total payroll increase would be closer to 8.6% than 12.3%.

City officials are studying personnel records to determine whether the salary cost under the court decision is less or more than would have resulted from an across-the-board 10% increase.

Manslaughter Charges Filed In Overdose Death

A charge of manslaughter was filed Tuesday against Robert W. Lindhurst, 25, in connection with the death Sunday afternoon of a 24-year-old Lincolnite.

Robert D. Way died from an overdose of morphine apparently injected by someone else at a party, according to police.

The charge of manslaughter carries a possible penalty of one to 10 years in the Nebraska Penal Complex. A preliminary hearing on the charge will be set on April 20. Bond was set at $10,000.

Lindhurst is already facing charges in connection with a burglary late Saturday or early Sunday of the Plaza Pharmacy, 333 N. Cotner. Police believe the morphine which caused Way's death was taken from the pharmacy.

Police said they recovered the rest of the drugs taken in the burglary from an abandoned car near 37th and Cornhusker.

District Court Upholds Auto Dealers Law

District Court Judge Herbert Ronin has upheld the constitutionality of a state law requiring state approval before an auto manufacturer can terminate an individual dealer's franchise.

Ronin affirmed the State Motor Vehicle Industry Licensing Board's decision refusing American Motors permission to terminate Perkins New and Used Cars' franchise in Columbus.

American Motors contended the 1972 state law, requiring state approval for franchise termination, was an unjustifiable impairment of contracts and that it bore no reasonable relation to public safety and welfare.

In his ruling, Ronin said: "The court is of the opinion that this regulation of the motor vehicle industry is in the public interest. One of its stated purposes is to insure post-sales warranty service. The requirement of good cause for termination of a dealer's franchise would appear to substantially aid this purpose . . ."

American Motors also alleged that the licensing board, which consists of dealers, was not an impartial decision-maker by its very nature.

Ronin said, "The allegation of bias and deprivation of a fair hearing must fail for lack of adquate evidence to overcome the presumption of impartiality."

The fact that Nebraska law is stricter than federal law on the subject does not create an irreconcilable conflict, he said.

Fremont Voters Face Bond Issue For New School

Fremont (AP) — The Fremont Board of Education has decided to put another school bond issue before the voters.

The board voted 4-2 to a referendum on a $5 million issue.

Should the issue win approval, money from the bonds would be used to finance the construction of a new junior high school and for the renovation of the current downtown junior high facility.

The new issue is very similar to one rejected by voters in 1972, except that it's more expensive. Last June, voters also rejected an $8 million issue for the construction of two new junior high centers.

While the board voted to put the issue to the people, no date was set.

Firefighters Win Some, Lose Some In Court

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

There were winners and losers on both sides Tuesday in the State Court of Industrial Relations ruling on Lincoln firefighters demands for higher pay.

Newly-hired firefighters had something to cheer about. The minimum salary was increased 12.3% to $10,090.

Veteran firefighters at the top of the scale, however, had something to cry about. The maximum salary was raised only 8.6% to $11,850.60.

The city had offered a 10% across-the-board increase to all city workers. The Lincoln Firefighter's Association, Local 644, however, voted to reject the offer and to go to court.

The court refused to grant additional fringe benefits, stating that insufficient evidence had been presented on that point.

The court said, however, that the firefighters could ask again for more fringe benefits. Last fall the city had offered to pay for some of the equipment fire fighters had been paying for, an offer the firefighters rejected.

City government was a big loser in its attempts to establish a two-week lag in giving employe's their paychecks.

The court said the conversion to the lag, which the city was accomplishing by taking a small bite out of employe paychecks, could be done only after negotiation with employes, not unilaterally.

The court ordered city government to refund firefighters the amount the city government has been withholding from their paychecks.

There were hints Tuesday from city officials that this provision in the ruling may result in an appeal to the Nebraska Supreme Court.

City officials say the city payroll has grown too cumbersome to continue with the present system of issuing paychecks immediately after a pay period ends.

Converting to the two-week lag became an issue in wage negotiations last fall.

City employes objected that withholding small amounts from paychecks to establish the lag in effect reduced the amount of the pay increase they were being offered.

The argument was a factor in the city agreeing to the 10% wage hike which they had been fighting early in negotiations.

The bite being taken out of paychecks, however, will eventually be turned over to city employes, but only when they change employment, die or retire.

And while the payroll lag conversion resulted in reducing employe income during the first fiscal year, employes will realize the full benefit of 10% increase in subsequent years.

City Attorney Dana Roper, who handled much of the case for city government, said he does not yet know whether the taxpayers won or lost a a result of the court's ruling.

He said he believes, however, that most of the firefighters on the Lincoln Fire Department are veterans at the top of the scale, meaning that the total payroll increase would be closer to 8.6% than 12.3%.

City officials are studying personnel records to determine whether the salary cost under the court decision is less or more than would have resulted from an across-the-board 10% increase.

Manslaughter Charges Filed In Overdose Death

A charge of manslaughter was filed Tuesday against Robert W. Lindhurst, 25, in connection with the death Sunday afternoon of a 24-year-old Lincolnite.

Robert D. Way died from an overdose of morphine apparently injected by someone else at a party, according to police.

The charge of manslaughter carries a possible penalty of one to 10 years in the Nebraska Penal Complex. A preliminary hearing on the charge will be set on April 20. Bond was set at $10,000.

Lindhurst is already facing charges in connection with a burglary late Saturday or early Sunday of the Plaza Pharmacy, 333 N. Cotner. Police believe the morphine which caused Way's death was taken from the pharmacy.

Police said they recovered the rest of the drugs taken in the burglary from an abandoned car near 37th and Cornhusker.

Red Tape Called 'Almost Major Crisis'

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Rep. Frank Horton of New York sees himself as "sort of a voice in the wilderness." But he'd better be careful. If the Environmental Protection Agency finds out, he may have to fill out an impact statement.

Horton, chairman of the Congressional Commission on Federal Paperwork, said in Lincoln Tuesday the amount of bureaucratic red tape is "almost to the point where there is a major crisis . . . The American people are fed up to here with bureaucracy."

Horror stories about federal paper shuffling have become legendary. As illustration, Horton said governmental agencies spend $40 billion printing an average of 10 forms for every man, woman and child in the country.

Recently officials of Omaha television station WOWT testified at a commission hearing that it cost them $100,000 to answer Federal Communication Commission inquiries about live telecasts.

Later they learned a new FCC commissioner was "just curious."

Little Unaffected

The creeping arm of bureaucracy has left very little of public life untouched, the Republican congressman said.

"In the 14 years I've been in Congress, the federal government has become much more involved in your life, every way you turn . . . some (regulations) are right, some aren't."

Recently he became aware of federal forms home buyers and sellers must fill out at closing. "I asked myself, 'How did the federal government get involved in this?' But there we are."

Horton traces the paper chase back about 10 or 15 years, when the country faced a number of crises and the American people were demanding quick answers.

'Massive Drug Store'

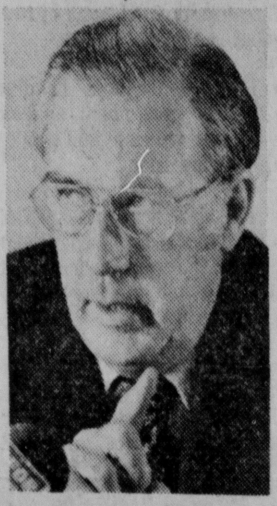
"'Most of these well-intentioned new laws prescribed a neat package of federal tax dollars, to be taken annually, under the supervision of some new optimistically titled federal agency or office whose job it would be to see that the disease was cured."



Rep. Frank Horton

It was "breathtaking" in 1972 to vote for a bill that required all U.S. waterways to be drinkable and swimmable by 1981, Horton recalled. The "War on Poverty" was little short of patriotic; workers were protected from on-the-job safety hazards; little children were safe from dangerous and shoddy goods; discrimination would be washed away . . .

While he didn't belittle any of the agencies or their goals, Horton did indicate the "solutions" have gotten far out of hand.

Collaborating On Bill

He said he and Nebraska Rep. Charles Thone are collaborating on a bill to reform Uncle Sam's method of keeping records.

Another bill Horton and Thone are "putting the finishing touches on" would require every proposed regulation to be weighed — costs versus benefits.

Other attempts at curbing bureaucracy have failed.

Four or five years ago, Horton's Committee on Governmental Operations undertook the monumental task of reorganizing various departments of the federal government.

They had numerous grandiose schemes to do away with the Department of Agriculture, revamp the Department of Housing and Urban Development, combine various other agencies, and so on.

"These proposals would have altered some pretty well-established bureaucracies in Washington, and would have stepped on some pretty powerful political bailiwicks," he told the Nebraska League of Women Voters at its Tuesday noon luncheon.

Howls of protest rose up across the land.

"Try as we might, we could not generate much interest or excitement. The plain fact was that the topic of government organizations and management was not sexy enough to attract much attention, let alone support."

The first reorganization bill cleared the Government Operations Committee only to die a quick death in the House Rules Committee.

There it has been resting peacefully since. The proposals were never revived.

"Until we have a very strong president and a Congress willing to stick its neck out, we're not going to get those changes," he predicted.

Federal Revenue Sharing Bill Would Attach String

A federal revenue sharing bill being considered by a House subcommittee would not increase funds available for the program, but would attach at least one string, according to Rep. Frank Horton of New York.

Horton, an ex-officio member of the government organization subcommittee, said Tuesday he doesn't expect the measure to reach the House floor until May or June.

Horton was in Lincoln to speak before a League of Women Voters conference on "American Government: Growth of Bureaucracy."

The idea behind revenue sharing is to give cities and states a share of tax money collected and let them spend it where it's needed with very few restrictions.

Changes in the bill Horton introduced would allow revenue-sharing funds to be cut off if a state or municipality were guilty of discrimination. The revised version would extend the $6.5 billion program for three years and nine months.

Horton's original bill would have raised funding by $150 million annually and would have extended the program for more than five years.

A key change, Horton said, would make revenue sharing appropriations separate from authorization. Previously the program has been authorized and financed in a single package.

Putting the proposal through the appropriations process "means that cities and states won't know if the proposed authorization will match the appropriation," Horton said.

He expressed opposition to suggestions that more federal strings be tied to revenue sharing money.

"The localities should be able to do with this money whatever it is they need to do," he said. "I'm not concerned how they spend it. It's their money."

Rep. Frank Horton of New York sees himself as "sort of a voice in the wilderness." But he'd better be careful. If the Environmental Protection Agency finds out, he may have to fill out an impact statement.

Horton, chairman of the Congressional Commission on Federal Paperwork, said in Lincoln Tuesday the amount of bureaucratic red tape is "almost to the point where there is a major crisis . . The American people are fed up to here with bureaucracy."

Horror stories about federal paper shuffling have become legendary. As illustration, Horton said governmental agencies spend $40 billion printing an average of 10 forms for every man, woman and child in the country.

Recently officials of Omaha television station WOWT testified at a commission hearing that it cost them $100,000 to answer Federal Communication Commission inquiries about live telecasts.

Later they learned a new FCC commissioner was "just curious."

Little Unaffected

The creeping arm of bureaucracy has left very little of public life untouched, the Republican congressman said.

"In the 14 years I've been in Congress, the federal government has become much more involved in your life, every way you turn . . . some (regulations) are right, some aren't."

Recently he became aware of federal forms home buyers and sellers must fill out at closing. "I asked myself, 'How did the federal government get involved in this?' But there we are."

Horton traces the paper chase back about 10 or 15 years, when the country faced a number of crises and the American people were demanding quick answers.

'Massive Drug Store'

"Most of these well-intentioned new laws prescribed a neat package of federal tax dollars, to be taken annually, under the supervision of some new optimistically titled federal agency or office whose job it would be to see that the disease was cured."

Rep. Frank Horton

It was "breathtaking" in 1972 to vote for a bill that required all U.S. waterways to be drinkable and swimmable by 1981, Horton recalled. The "War on Poverty" was little short of patriotic; workers were protected from on-the-job safety hazards; little children were safe from dangerous and shoddy goods; discrimination would be washed away . . .

While he didn't belittle any of the agencies or their goals, Horton did indicate the "solutions" have gotten far out of hand.

Collaborating On Bill

He said he and Nebraska Rep. Charles Thone are collaborating on a bill to reform Uncle Sam's method of keeping records.

Another bill Horton and Thone are "putting the finishing touches on" would require every proposed regulation to be weighed — costs versus benefits.

Other attempts at curbing bureaucracy have failed.

Four or five years ago, Horton's Committee on Governmental Operations undertook the monumental task of reorganizing various departments of the federal government.

They had numerous grandiose schemes to do away with the Department of Agriculture, revamp the Department of Housing and Urban Development, combine various other agencies, and so on.

"These proposals would have altered some pretty well-established bureaucracies in Washington, and would have stepped on some pretty powerful political bailiwicks," he told the Nebraska League of Women Voters at its Tuesday noon luncheon.

Howls of protest rose up across the land.

"Try as we might, we could not generate much interest or excitement. The plain fact was that the topic of government organizations and management was not sexy enough to attract much attention, let alone support."

The first reorganization bill cleared the Government Operations Committee only to die a quick death in the House Rules Committee.

There it has been resting peacefully since. The proposals were never revived.

"Until we have a very strong president and a Congress willing to stick its neck out, we're not going to get those changes," he predicted.

Federal Revenue Sharing Bill Would Attach String

A federal revenue sharing bill being considered by a House subcommittee would not increase funds available for the program, but would attach at least one string, according to Rep. Frank Horton of New York.

Horton, an ex-officio member of the government organization subcommittee, said Tuesday he doesn't expect the measure to reach the House floor until May or June.

Horton was in Lincoln to speak before a League of Women Voters conference on "American Government: Growth of Bureaucracy."

The idea behind revenue sharing is to give cities and states a share of tax money collected and let them spend it where it's needed with very few restrictions.

Changes in the bill Horton introduced would allow revenue-sharing funds to be cut off if a state or municipality were guilty of discrimination. The revised version would extend the $6.5 billion program for three years and nine months.

Horton's original bill would have raised funding by $150 million annually and would have extended the program for more than five years.

A key change, Horton said, would make revenue sharing appropriations separate from authorization. Previously the program has been authorized and financed in a single package.

Putting the proposal through the appropriations process "means that cities and states won't know if the proposed authorization will match the appropriation," Horton said.

He expressed opposition to suggestions that more federal strings be tied to revenue sharing money.

"The localities should be able to do with this money whatever it is they need to do," he said. "I'm not concerned how they spend it. It's their money."

A Hot Easter Egg

Years before the birth of Christ the egg was a symbol of new life. Thus the Easter egg has become the symbol of the re-birth of Christ. At one time in church history, eggs were a forbidden food during Lent. At the end of Lent they became a sign of joy and were blessed, painted and given as Easter gifts.

The Easter eggs at the Crowley house are multi-colored and various designs, but not always a work of art. The older children help in the late hours with the coloring of the eggs. Every member of the family will have a colored egg with his name engraved on it. These are placed on their plates at the Easter morning breakfast. The other gaily colored eggs are in a basket in the center of the table.

Eggs are such a good nutritious food that none should be wasted. One medium egg provides approximately six grams of protein and six grams of fat. The protein is of a high biological value. Most of the fat is found in the yolk. The egg yolk is also a good source of iron and vitamin A. The yolk is high in cholesterol, a type of fat. For those individuals who must restrict their intake of cholesterol, only a limited amount of egg yolk is allowed in the diet.

2 Tbls. flour
2 Tbls. butter
½ C. grated cheddar cheese
2 C. milk
salt
nutmeg
1 Tbls. chopped parsley

Melt butter in saucepan. Add flour and stir until blended. Add milk, a small amount at a time, continue cooking and stir continuously to prevent lumping. When cooked, add cheese and stir until melted. Add salt and nutmeg. Heat until bubbling, garnish with parsley. Serve over sliced hard cooked eggs and toast. Serves four.

FACT Wants Vote On Federal Judges

Omaha (AP) — The leader of Free Americans for Constitutional Taxation (FACT), an Omaha group challenging the power of the federal courts to, in effect, order the levying of taxes, says the group will propose an amendment to the U.S. Constitution which would put all federal judges up for a vote of confidence at least every four years.

John Dumke, founder and president of FACT, told a news conference Tuesday that "we believe the time has come for all people to demand that our courts limit their scope of power."

FACT was formed to fight the expenditure of tax dollars for the purchase of the buses needed to implement court-ordered integration of the Omaha School District.

Last Friday, U.S. District Court Judge Albert G. Schatz of Omaha dealt FACT a setback when he refused to issue a temporary restraining order to prevent the school district from buying buses until the courts resolve FACT's claims.

Monday, the Omaha School District Board of Education voted to contract for the buses needed, rather that purchasing the buses.

Dumke said FACT backers consider the board's decision a "substantial victory," and complimented board members.

"We are elated," said Dumke, adding that the decision indicated that board members have heard the "people's voices," and have saved in excess of $2 million by not buying the estimated 125 buses that would be needed to implement integration next fall.

Dumke estimated that such pursuit will cost about $20,000, and said about $5,000 has been contributed to the campaign thus far.

"It is imperative that the people, who in a democracy have the supreme power of government, have this question of taxation addressed by our courts," said Dumke. "Our Constitution states that only Congress has the power to levy taxes. In our state only the state legislature and governmental subdivisions, as authorized by the state legislature, have the power to tax. Therefore, by the courts ordering the taxpayers to bear the cost of their order, they have usurped the power of the legislative branch of government to levy taxes.

"Our judiciary has, year after year, extended their powers until today we have our federal judges attempting to legislate their own salaries by bringing a law suit before a federal judge."

As a result of the increasing power being taken over by the courts, Durnke said that within two weeks, FACT will announce a petition drive for a proposed amendment which would put all federal judges, including those sitting on the U.S. Supreme Court, up for a "yea or nay vote every four years."

Cengas Giving Users Refund

Cengas customers in Lincoln and 36 other Nebraska communities supplied by Northern Natural Gas Co. will be refunded a total of $717,300 beginning in April, according to C. L. Wilcox, Lincoln division manager.

The refunds will appear as gas cost credits on customer statements over a period of about 12 months.

The refund results from a Federal Power Commission order, and Cengas estimates the average residential customer will receive about $6.50 including 7% interest.

The soils data booklets will be formally presented to county residents during an educational program in the Pawnee City Chamber Hall at 8 p.m. Tuesday, conducted by University of Nebraska and SCS soil scientists.

A Hot Easter Egg

Years before the birth of Christ the egg was a symbol of new life. Thus the Easter egg has become the symbol of the birth of Christ. At one time in church history, eggs were a forbidden food during Lent. At the end of Lent they became a sign of joy and were blessed, painted and given as Easter gifts.

The Easter eggs at the Crowley house are multi colored and various designs, but not always a work of art. The older children help in the late hours with the coloring of the eggs. Every member of the family will have a colored egg with his name engraved on it. These are placed on their plates at the Easter morning breakfast. The other gaily colored eggs are in a basket in the center of the table.

Eggs are such a good nutritious food that none should be wasted. One medium egg provides approximately six grams of protein and six grams of fat. The protein is of a high biological value. Most of the fat is found in the yolk. The egg yolk is also a good source of iron and vitamin A. The yolk is high in cholesterol, a type of fat. For those individuals who must restrict their intake of cholesterol, only a limited amount of egg yolk is allowed in the diet.

2 Tbls. flour
2 Tbls. butter
½ C. grated cheddar cheese
2 C. milk
1 Tbls. chopped parsley

Melt butter in saucepan. Add flour and stir until blended. Add milk, a small amount at a time, continue cooking and stir continuously to prevent lumping. When cooked, add cheese and stir until melted. Add salt and nutmeg. Heat until bubbling, garnish with parsley. Serve over sliced hard cooked eggs and toast. Serves four.

LINEMEN . . . careful to ground wires.

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

York — All that remains of the snowy-white enemy are a few puddles, but the battle to restore power to south-central Nebraska rages furiously from dawn to dusk.

While the utility company generals fight the war of materials and dollars, the linemen confront the enemy — pole after pole from sunup to sundown.

As in any war, forces have been mobilized from diverse areas to risk their lives 40 feet above the plains.

"I volunteered to come out here knowing something like this could happen to us someday," said Dick Chappell, lineman for the Wheatbelt Public Power Dist. of Sidney.

The crew is careful to ground the section of wire they are working on from both ends, but they face a danger as unusual as the storm that did the damage.

Many farmers are using power generators to supply electricity to their homes, and if they don't disconnect their line at the meter box, there is a danger linemen could be electrocuted.

The linemen laugh about the danger, but the underlying tensions make it clear the crew is thankful no one has been hurt.

Wheatbelt is one of five Rural Electrification Administration (REA) districts assisting the York County Public Power Dist. to restore power in hard hit Fillmore and York counties.

"We change off jobs everyday so we don't get bored," Chappell said. "But the worst thing is that I'd like to see my wife and kids one of these days."

The crew has developed a sense of pride and realize they are working to put life blood into the rich agricultural area.

"Our crew alone has eight or ten miles restrung just in the first week," Chappell said.

So far supplies have been adequate, he said, but very little can be salvaged besides the line.

"We can save some of the metal hardware that you can half way straighten out, and that's about it," he said.

There were some minor differences in techniques between crews at first, but Stinson said those have been ironed out and work is progressing steadily.

The 13-man crew leapfrogs its way down the seemingly endless rows of smashed poles in three basic groups: those who prepare the poles, those who dig the holes and those who rig the lines.

It's not just the linemen who are out doing battle. Don Winkelman, planning and construction superintendent for Wheatbelt, was right in the trenches with his men.

"The mud was our biggest problem at first," he said. "But we also have a communication problem because our radios are on different frequencies" than the other crews.

Part of the reason power crews are working so hard, Winkelman said, was because of the warm greeting area farmers have given them.

"The farmers used their tractors to pull us out of the mud. They're at our disposal, all we have to do is holler," he said. "In fact they came out and cleaned up some of the mess, which helped out a lot."

If farmers had any doubts they were in a combat zone, the heavy thwack-thwack-thwack of helicopters overhead Monday made the scene complete.

The Nebraska Public Power Dist. and the Norris Public Power Dist. were using National Guard and private helicopters to assist them in the field.

Winkelman said he isn't sure how much longer the Sidney crew can stay before going back to meet commitments at home, but they'll give York all the help they can.

"I've never seen any destruction on quite so broad an area that occurred so fast," he said. "We've got 10 or 12 miles in already, and it's not a dent in what they say they got down — and I believe them."

Irrigators In Storm Area To Have Enough Power

Late Tuesday, Nebraska Public Power District officials at Columbus announced they are "confident the NPPD high voltage and extra voltage transmission system will be completely rebuilt and in service prior to the summer's peak demand for electricity."

There has been concern about irrigation among farmers in south central Nebraska, which suffered severe damage to power facilities during last week's ice and wind storm.

The March 29 storm knocked out power in a 12,000-square-mile area; about a dozen towns were still without electricity Tuesday.

"Before the end of the week, NPPD will sign contracts with contracting firms with reconstruction expected to begin by the middle of the month," according to NPPD spokesman Ron Bogus.

Power lines to be rebuilt by contractors are those that would strengthen the NPPD transmission system for this summer's high loads, but were not required to be in service to restore electricity to the stricken area," Bogus stressed.

"Completion of the work by mid to late June will allow farmers in the area to plan for crop irrigation as normally becomes necessary during the hot summer months," Bogus explained.

"Once NPPD has power restored to the rural power districts in the area, farmers may begin to plan for their regular irrigating program, even before all of the reconstruction work is completed," Bogus added.

Meanwhile, power was restored to Strang, Hubbell, Deshler and Mahaska, Kan., Tuesday, leaving about a dozen of the more than 60 towns blacked out by the storm still without electricity Tuesday.

Most schools in the area are back in session, although a few were without hot lunches this week.

A state official said Tuesday that students in some of the schools forced to close during the power outage may face Saturday classes, or a lengthened school term.

Omaha Wins But Doubts Remain

Omaha (AP) — After a long legal battle, the City of Omaha has won a $5.3 million judgment, but the question now is how the money can be collected.

The decision was made by U.S. District Court Judge Bruce M. Van Sickle of Minot, N.D., in the trial which began in 1973. However, the trial was stopped and restarted after the original judge in the case, U.S. District Court Judge Richard Robinson of Omaha, disqualified himself from the case.

The city filed the suit against Carver-Greenfield, Inc., a firm based in Newark, N.J., which had a plan to turn waste from the city's paunch manure plant into an asset.

However, those plans didn't pan out, and the city is now holding the bag for more than $7 million owed on the paunch manure plant.

The judgment is for $5.3 million, but Carver-Greenfield may not have the assets to pay the judgment, city hall officials have said.

A spokesman for the company said a decision on whether an appeal would be filed has not been made.

The spokesman, John T. Dolan, an attorney, had "no comment" when asked if the company could pay the judgment.

Dolan, in a telephone interview from New Jersey, said only that his client is "viable."

Mayor Edward Zorinsky is also among those doubting whether the firm can pay, but said he will see that an effort is made in that direction.

City officials thought the Carver-Greenfield plans looked great on paper in the late 1960s. They called it "unique" and "revolutionary."

Under the plan, the city would take a liability — the packinghouse wastes — and turn it into an asset.

Not only would the wastes no longer pollute the Missouri River, but the city was to sell the paunch manure and grease for a profit.

However, in August 1970, city officials evicted Carver-Greenfield from the plant — the plan had turned into a failure.

But the city's taxpayers are continuing to pay for the ill-fated project, and will continue to do so for a long time to come. Already, $2.16 million in taxes has been paid on bonds issued to build the plant and it will take another 22 years to pay the remaining debt — $7.29 million.

The taxpyaers also have paid $1.2 million to build a sewer system to take the paunch manure from the various packing plants to the city's plant.

FACT Wants Vote On Federal Judges

Omaha (AP) — The leader of Free Americans for Constitutional Taxation (FACT), an Omaha group challenging the power of the federal courts to, in effect, order the levying of taxes, says the group will propose an amendment to the U.S. Constitution which would put all federal judges up for a vote of confidence at least every four years.

John Dumke, founder and president of FACT, told a news conference Tuesday that "we believe the time has come for all people to demand that our courts limit their scope of power."

FACT was formed to fight the expenditure of tax dollars for the purchase of the buses needed to implement court-ordered integration of the Omaha School District.

Last Friday, U.S. District Court Judge Albert G. Schatz of Omaha dealt FACT a setback when he refused to issue a temporary restraining order to prevent the school district from buying buses until the courts resolve FACT's claims.

Monday, the Omaha School District Board of Education voted to contract for the buses needed, rather that purchasing the buses.

Dumke said FACT backers consider the board's decision a "substantial victory," and complimented board members.

"We are elated," said Dumke, adding that the decision indicated that board members have heard the "people's voices," and have saved in excess of $2 million by not buying the estimated 125 buses that would be needed to implement integration next fall.

Dumke estimated that such pursuit will cost about $20,000, and said about $5,000 has been contributed to the campaign thus far.

"It is imperative that the people, who in a democracy have the supreme power of government, have this question of taxation addressed by our courts," said Dumke. "Our Constitution states that only Congress has the power to levy taxes. In our state only the state legislature and governmental subdivisions, as authorized by the state legislature, have the power to tax. Therefore, by the courts ordering the taxpayers to bear the cost of their order, they have usurped the power of the legislative branch of government to levy taxes.

"Our judiciary has, year after year, extended their powers until today we have our federal judges attempting to legislate their own salaries by bringing a law suit before a federal judge."

As a result of the increasing power being taken over by the courts, Dumke said that within two weeks, FACT will announce a petition drive for a proposed amendment which would put all federal judges, including those sitting on the U.S. Supreme Court, up for a "yea or nay vote every four years."

Cengas Giving Users Refund

Cengas customers in Lincoln and 36 other Nebraska communities supplied by Northern Natural Gas Co. will be refunded a total of $717,300 beginning in April, according to C. L. Wilcox, Lincoln division manager.

The refunds will appear as gas cost credits on customer statements over a period of about 12 months.

The refund results from a Federal Power Commission order, and Cengas estimates the average residential customer will receive about $6.50 including 7% interest.

Omaha Wins But Doubts Remain

Omaha (AP) — After a long legal battle, the City of Omaha has won a $5.3 million judgment, but the question now is how the money can be collected.

The decision was made by U.S. District Court Judge Bruce M. Van Sickle of Minot, N.D., in the trial which began in 1973. However, the trial was stopped and restarted after the original judge in the case, U.S. District Court Judge Richard Robinson of Omaha, disqualified himself from the case.

The city filed the suit against Carver-Greenfield, Inc., a firm based in Newark, N.J., which had a plan to turn waste from the city's paunch manure plant into an asset.

However, those plans didn't pan out, and the city is now holding the bag for more than $7 million owed on the paunch manure plant.

The judgment is for $5.3 million, but Carver-Greenfield may not have the assets to pay the judgment, city hall officials have said.

A spokesman for the company said a decision on whether an appeal would be filed has not been made.

The spokesman, John T. Dolan, an attorney, had "no comment" when asked if the company could pay the judgment.

Dolan, in a telephone interview from New Jersey, said only that his client is "viable."

Mayor Edward Zorinsky is also among those doubting whether the firm can pay, but said he will see that an effort is made in that direction.

City officials thought the Carver-Greenfield plans looked great on paper in the late 1960s. They called it "unique" and "revolutionary."

Under the plan, the city would take a liability — the packinghouse wastes — and turn it into an asset.

Not only would the wastes no longer pollute the Missouri River, but the city was to sell the paunch manure and grease for a profit.

However, in August 1970, city officials evicted Carver-Greenfield from the plant — the plan had turned into a failure.

But the city's taxpayers are continuing to pay for the ill-fated project, and will continue to do so for a long time to come. Already, $2.16 million in taxes has been paid on bonds issued to build the plant and it will take another 22 years to pay the remaining debt — $7.29 million.

The taxpyaers also have paid $1.2 million to build a sewer system to take the paunch manure from the various packing plants to the city's plant.

LINEMEN . . . careful to ground wires.

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

York — All that remains of the snowy-white enemy are a few puddles, but the battle to restore power to south-central Nebraska rages furiously from dawn to dusk.

While the utility company generals fight the war of materials and dollars, the linemen confront the enemy — pole after pole from sunup to sundown.

As in any war, forces have been mobilized from diverse areas to risk their lives 40 feet above the plains.

"I volunteered to come out here knowing something like this could happen to us someday," said Dick Chappell, lineman for the Wheatbelt Public Power Dist. of Sidney.

The crew is careful to ground the section of wire they are working on from both ends, but they face a danger as unusual as the storm that did the damage.

Many farmers are using power generators to supply electricity to their homes, and if they don't disconnect their line at the meter box, there is a danger linemen could be electrocuted.

The linemen laugh about the danger, but the underlying tensions make it clear the crew is thankful no one has been hurt.

Wheatbelt is one of five Rural Electrification Administration (REA) districts assisting the York County Public Power Dist. to restore power in hard hit Fillmore and York counties.

"We change off jobs everyday so we don't get bored," Chappell said. "But the worst thing is that I'd like to see my wife and kids one of these days."

The crew has developed a sense of pride and realize they are working to put life blood into the rich agricultural area.

"Our crew alone has eight or ten miles restrung just in the first week," Chappell said.

So far supplies have been adequate, he said, but very little can be salvaged besides the line.

"We can save some of the metal hardware that you can half way straighten out, and that's about it," he said.

There were some minor differences in techniques between crews at first, but Stinson said those have been ironed out and work is progressing steadily.

The 13-man crew leapfrogs its way down the seemingly endless rows of smashed poles in three basic groups: those who prepare the poles, those who dig the holes and those who rig the lines.

It's not just the linemen who are out doing battle. Don Winkelman, planning and construction superintendent for Wheatbelt, was right in the trenches with his men.

"The mud was our biggest problem at first," he said. "But we also have a communication problem because our radios are on different frequencies" than the other crews.

Part of the reason power crews are working so hard, Winkelman said, was because of the warm greeting area farmers have given them.

"The farmers used their tractors to pull us out of the mud. They're at our disposal, all we have to do is holler," he said. "In fact they came out and cleaned up some of the mess, which helped out a lot."

If farmers had any doubts they were in a combat zone, the heavy thwack-thwack-thwack of helicopters overhead Monday made the scene complete.

The Nebraska Public Power Dist. and the Norris Public Power Dist. were using National Guard and private helicopters to assist them in the field.

Winkelman said he isn't sure how much longer the Sidney crew can stay before going back to meet commitments at home, but they'll give York all the help they can.

"I've never seen any destruction on quite so broad an area that occurred so fast," he said. "We've got 10 or 12 miles in already, and it's not a dent in what they say they got down — and I believe them."

Irrigators In Storm Area To Have Enough Power

Late Tuesday, Nebraska Public Power District officials at Columbus announced they are "confident the NPPD high voltage and extra voltage transmission system will be completely rebuilt and in service prior to the summer's peak demand for electricity."

There has been concern about irrigation among farmers in south central Nebraska, which suffered severe damage to power facilities during last week's ice and wind storm.

The March 29 storm knocked out power in a 12,000-square-mile area; about a dozen towns were still without electricity Tuesday.

"Before the end of the week, NPPD will sign contracts with contracting firms with reconstruction expected to begin by the middle of the month," according to NPPD spokesman Ron Bogus.

Power lines to be rebuilt by contractors are those that would strengthen the NPPD transmission system for this summer's high loads, but were not required to be in service to restore electricity to the stricken area," Bogus stressed.

"Completion of the work by mid to late June will allow farmers in the area to plan for crop irrigation as normally becomes necessary during the hot summer months," Bogus explained.

"Once NPPD has power restored to the rural power districts in the area, farmers may begin to plan for their regular irrigating program, even before all of the reconstruction work is completed," Bogus added.

Meanwhile, power was restored to Strang, Hubbell, Deshler and Mahaska, Kan., Tuesday, leaving about a dozen of the more than 60 towns blacked out by the storm still without electricity Tuesday.

Most schools in the area are back in session, although a few were without hot lunches this week.

A state official said Tuesday that students in some of the schools forced to close during the power outage may face Saturday classes, or a lengthened school term.

Governor Thinks 17% Increase Enough

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

A 17% increase in tax support for state government operations and assistance to local government is enough, Gov. J. James Exon said Tuesday.

That's the 1976-77 budget hike accepted by Exon after his $30 million in veto reductions and rejections.

"It's a reasonable increase," he told newsmen at a press conference where he outlined the details of his appropriations vetoes.

Most of the major increments of the veto package were learned Monday when several bills were returned to the Legislature with line item reductions attached.

The $15 million in increased state aid to schools was sliced from LB691, the state agency budget bill.

$6.8 Million Scythed

A $6.8 million swath was cut out of the University of Nebraska budget in LB690, the higher education appropriations measure.

Among other cuts revealed by Exon Tuesday were nearly $1 million in reductions from agency budgets in LB691 and $100,000 from LB984, the capital construction appropriations package.

One of the cuts in LB984 was the $25,000 appropriation to develop preliminary plans for construction of a cardiovascular treatment, research and education facility at NU's Medical Center in Omaha.

That project could cost up to $15 million, Exon warned.

Amount Reduced

The governor reduced a $145,000 appropriation to build a swine and beef facility at the Curtis School of Agriculture to $75,000 — enough, he said, for "a most adequate" facility.

Thirteen agency budgets were sliced in LB691, the deepest cuts applied to the Supreme Court, the Department of Public Welfare, the Game and Parks Commission, the Department of Education and the governor's emergency fund.

Exon accepted the Unicameral's recommended salary policy for state employes — a 6% wage hike on July 1, and an additional 1% boost in salary budgets to fund merit pay increases.

The proposed $15 million increase in school aid would "certainly mandate increases" in state tax rates, Exon told the Legislature.

Into Second Place

Discussing university budget cuts, the governor told newsmen his recommendations (a 13.8% increase in tax support) would boost NU into second place among Big Eight institutions in terms of tax support.

"I would hope (the university) would call off its high pressure lobbying techniques . . . and accept the figure in good faith," Exon said.

His $87.6 million recommendation would "adequately fund" the institution, he said. The Legislature had approved a $94.4 million general fund total.

Asked about his sharp cut in tax support for Sports Center operations in Lincoln, Exon said NU should be able to generate enough money to maintain the facility "if they work at it."

In his deepest line item cut in the NU budget, the governor reduced Sports Center tax support from $90,000 to $200,000.

In other action, Exon reduced university deficiency appropriations for the current fiscal year contained in LB972.

That wiped out the authority to spend $773,000 in cash funds on the Lincoln campuses and $500,000 in replacement money for lost federal funds at the Medical Center prior to July 1.

Among bills vetoed in their entirety were proposals to launch a coal byproducts research program, establish a deputy public counsel for corrections, purchase a dormitory at Peru State College and transfer benefits for employes transferred from state control to a mental health region or community center.

LB1011, the bill to purchase the dormitory from bondholders, is unconstitutional, Exon said.

Exon Opposes Coal Research By State

By United Press International

If coal byproduct research is needed, it should be done by the five-state Old West Regional Commission instead of the state of Nebraska, Gov. J. James Exon said Tuesday.

Exon said in his veto message to the Unicameral on North Platte Sen. Myron Rumery's LB826 the last place such a research program should be is under the state gasohol committee.

The gasohol unit was created to conduct research on the use of a grain alcohol-blended gasoline as a replacement for leaded motor fuels.

LB826 would appropriate $10,000 to help finance coal byproduct research. The objective of the legislation was to find a way to turn pollution ino clean air byproducts and money. The bill was aimed specifically at solving the Nebraska Public Power District's Sutherland plan and its problems with the Sierra Club.

"I question whether Nebraska state government can or should take on such a project by itself," Exon said, adding $10,000 would likely be only the beginning of research appropriations.

The governor said while his initial reaction was to turn to the regional commission, if it was deemed important enough for Nebraska to take full responsibility then the University of Nebraska should handle it directly.

"We also must first determine what similar and perhaps duplicating research has already been undertaken or planned elsewhere," Exon said.

Dr. George Scheller of the University of Nebraska tesified during committee hearings on the bill coal waste could be turned into synthetic materials.

Douglas' Action Asked For Malpractice Bill

By The Associated Press

Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers, claiming malpractice legislation was not read properly, asked Tuesday that Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas take whatever action is necessary to strike down the major malpractice bill of the 1976 Unicameral.

The bill, LB434, sets a limit on the amount a person can recover for damages in a medical malpractice lawsuit. The limit is $500,000.

In a letter to the head of the state's Justice Department, Chambers said he has a tape recording of the supposed reading of the bill just before final passage.

Chambers said the state constitution requires that bills be read before passage and cited a dictionary definition of the word "read."

"Clearly this indicates that one who is reading must intelligibly articulate the words being read in the language in which they are written," Chambers said in his letter.

"A hum, buzz or mumble consisting of no intelligible words cannot be properly considered reading," he said.

The Omaha lawmaker asked that Douglas, because the bill was not read, "take whatever action is necessary to formally announce as null and void this null and void act."

Sen. Douglas Bereuter

Legislature Said Alerted By Bereuter

Utica Sen. Douglas Bereuter said Tuesday that he alerted members of the Public Works Committee to the potential problem with speed limit laws "six or eight week ago."

"Obviously I'm unhappy if it turns out that we have to have a special session on the matter," Bereuter said in a telephone interview.

Bereuter said Public Works Committee members he spoke with "said federal law would pre-empt the state law."

"I didn't pursue it any further," Bereuter said.

The Utica lawmaker said he has been asking members of Congress to consider an alternative to 55 m.p.h. which would allow people to drive faster in sparsely populated states.

"The more populous states oppose any kind of a change," he said.

NU Rodeo Is This Weekend

The University of Nebraska Rodeo Association hosts its ninth annual inter-collegiate rodeo Friday and Saturday at the State Fairgrounds.

Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday and 1:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. Saturday in the Fairgrounds Coliseum. Men's events include bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, bull riding, calf roping, team roping and steer wrestling. Women's events are goat tying, barrel racing and breakaway roping.

Tickets purchased in advance from rodeo club members are $2 for adults and $1 for children. Prices at the door ate $2.50 and $1.25.

The Saturday night finals will be televised live and rebroadcast one week later by Nebraska ETV.

Special Ed Veto Draws Criticism Of Ex-Senator

Former Omaha Sen. David Stahmer said Tuesday Gov. J. James Exon has reneged on his earlier commitment to special education services by vetoing LB761.

The bill, which would provide $960,000 to help school districts diagnose children's learning disabilities, is an attempt to rewrite a bill passed in 1973 but since disqualified by a technicality.

Stahmer said when he testified before the Legislature in favor of LB761, he said the worst course the Legislature could take would be to fail to provide funds for diagnosis.

Exon has reneged on his original commitment to diagnostic services for children, Stahmer claims, since he approved LB403 in 1973, and in fact, had his aide, Jon Oberg, help write it.

Centralized Library Network Studied

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Board members of the Nebraska Library Commission Tuesday discussed the possibility of establishing a centralized processing network for libraries in Nebraska.

Although there have been several feasibility studies and attempts to set up such a library process during past years, Commission Director Mrs. Jane Geske said, none is as promising as the Ohio College Library Center (OCLC) at Columbus, Ohio.

OCLC, a computerized data process, was initially established for use by Ohio's college libraries, but it has expanded to over 30 states, Mrs. Geske said.

She added the computerized process would aid in the cataloging of a library's books, serials and other materials and would help in locating materials in other library facilities.

An OCLC program in Nebraska, she said, may be contingent on organizing a statewide library network. Since many of Nebraska's state colleges and public libraries operate on a small volume basis, they probably would not be individually accepted for service by OCLC.

However, rather than contracting individually with OCLC, the libraries could combine their volume by forming a network and then apply for OCLC services, Mrs. Geske said.

The board deferred any action on the OCLC proposal until a formal presentation can be given at the next meeting.

At the meeting, Mrs. Geske also announced a change in the procedure of handling funding for library services to institutions.

This year, for the first time, the commission is asking institutions to submit proposals of needed library services, Mrs. Geske said, "instead of us using this institutional funding to provide resources."

Services are provided to 17 mental, medical, educational and correctional institutions, Mrs. Geske said.

Governor Thinks 17% Increase Enough

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

A 17% increase in tax support for state government operations and assistance to local government is enough, Gov. J. James Exon said Tuesday.

That's the 1976-77 budget hike accepted by Exon after his $30 million in veto reductions and rejections.

"It's a reasonable increase," he told newsmen at a press conference where he outlined the details of his appropriations vetoes.

Most of the major increments of the veto package were learned Monday when several bills were returned to the Legislature with line item reductions attached.

The $15 million in increased state aid to schools was sliced from LB691, the state agency budget bill.

$6.8 Million Scythed

A $6.8 million swath was cut out of the University of Nebraska budget in LB690, the higher education appropriations measure.

Among other cuts revealed by Exon Tuesday were nearly $1 million in reductions from agency budgets in LB691 and $100,000 from LB984, the capital construction appropriations package.

One of the cuts in LB984 was the $25,000 appropriation to develop preliminary plans for construction of a cardiovascular treatment, research and education facility at NU's Medical Center in Omaha.

That project could cost up to $15 million, Exon warned.

Amount Reduced

The governor reduced a $145,000 appropriation to build a swine and beef facility at the Curtis School of Agriculture to $75,000 — enough, he said, for "a most adequate" facility.

Thirteen agency budgets were sliced in LB691, the deepest cuts applied to the Supreme Court, the Department of Public Welfare, the Game and Parks Commission, the Department of Education and the governor's emergency fund.

Exon accepted the Unicameral's recommended salary policy for state employes — a 6% wage hike on July 1, and an additional 1% boost in salary budgets to fund merit pay increases.

The proposed $15 million increase in school aid would "certainly mandate increases" in state tax rates, Exon told the Legislature.

Into Second Place

Discussing university budget cuts, the governor told newsmen his recommendations (a 13.8% increase in tax support) would boost NU into second place among Big Eight institutions in terms of tax support.

"I would hope (the university) would call off its high pressure lobbying techniques . . . and accept the figure in good faith," Exon said.

His $87.6 million recommendation would "adequately fund" the institution, he said. The Legislature had approved a $94.4 million general fund total.

Asked about his sharp cut in tax support for Sports Center operations in Lincoln, Exon said NU should be able to generate enough money to maintain the facility "if they work at it."

In his deepest line item cut in the NU budget, the governor reduced Sports Center tax support from $90,000 to $200,000.

In other action, Exon reduced university deficiency appropriations for the current fiscal year contained in LB972.

That wiped out the authority to spend $773,000 in cash funds on the Lincoln campuses and $500,000 in replacement money for lost federal funds at the Medical Center prior to July 1.

Among bills vetoed in their entirety were proposals to launch a coal byproducts research program, establish a deputy public counsel for corrections, purchase a dormitory at Peru State College and transfer benefits for employes transferred from state control to a mental health region or community center.

LB1011, the bill to purchase the dormitory from bondholders, is unconstitutional, Exon said.

Sen. Douglas Bereuter

Legislature Said Alerted By Bereuter

Utica Sen. Douglas Bereuter said Tuesday that he alerted members of the Public Works Committee to the potential problem with speed limit laws "six or eight week ago."

"Obviously I'm unhappy if it turns out that we have to have a special session on the matter," Bereuter said in a telephone interview.

Bereuter said Public Works Committee members he spoke with "said federal law would pre-empt the state law."

"I didn't pursue it any further," Bereuter said.

The Utica lawmaker said he has been asking members of Congress to consider an alternative to 55 m.p.h. which would allow people to drive faster in sparsely populated states.

"The more populous states oppose any kind of a change," he said.

Douglas' Action Asked For Malpractice Bill

By The Associated Press

Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers, claiming malpractice legislation was not read properly, asked Tuesday that Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas take whatever action is necessary to strike down the major malpractice bill of the 1976 Unicameral.

The bill, LB434, sets a limit on the amount a person can recover for damages in a medical malpractice lawsuit. The limit is $500,000.

In a letter to the head of the state's Justice Department, Chambers said he has a tape recording of the supposed reading of the bill just before final passage.

Chambers said the state constitution requires that bills be read before passage and cited a dictionary definition of the word "read."

"Clearly this indicates that one who is reading must intelligibly articulate the words being read in the language in which they are written," Chambers said in his letter.

"A hum, buzz or mumble consisting of no intelligible words cannot be properly considered reading," he said.

The Omaha lawmaker asked that Douglas, because the bill was not read, "take whatever action is necessary to formally announce as null and void this null and void act."

NU Rodeo Is This Weekend

The University of Nebraska Rodeo Association hosts its ninth annual inter-collegiate rodeo Friday and Saturday at the State Fairgrounds.

Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday and 1:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. Saturday in the Fairgrounds Coliseum. Men's events include bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, bull riding, calf roping, team roping and steer wrestling. Women's events are goat tying, barrel racing and breakaway roping.

Tickets purchased in advance from rodeo club members are $2 for adults and $1 for children. Prices at the door are $2.50 and $1.25.

The Saturday night finals will be televised live and rebroadcast one week later by Nebraska ETV.

Exon Opposes Coal Research By State

By United Press International

If coal byproduct research is needed, it should be done by the five-state Old West Regional Commission instead of the state of Nebraska, Gov. J. James Exon said Tuesday.

Exon said in his veto message to the Unicameral on North Platte Sen. Myron Rumery's LB826 the last place such a research program should be is under the state gasohol committee.

The gasohol unit was created to conduct research on the use of a grain alcohol-blended gasoline as a replacement for leaded motor fuels.

LB826 would appropriate $10,000 to help finance coal byproduct research. The objective of the legislation was to find a way to turn pollution ino clean air byproducts and money. The bill was aimed specifically at solving the Nebraska Public Power District's Sutherland plan and its problems with the Sierra Club.

"I question whether Nebraska state government can or should take on such a project by itself," Exon said, adding $10,000 would likely be only the beginning of research appropriations.

The governor said while his initial reaction was to turn to the regional commission, if it was deemed important enough for Nebraska to take full responsibility then the University of Nebraska should handle it directly.

"We also must first determine what similar and perhaps duplicating research has already been undertaken or planned elsewhere," Exon said.

Dr. George Scheller of the University of Nebraska tesified during committee hearings on the bill coal waste could be turned into synthetic materials.

Catholic Women Name Officers

Mrs. James Anderson of Exeter Tuesday was elected president of the Lincoln Diocesan Council of Catholic Women for 1976-78.

Other new officers are:

Mrs. Roy Loudon, first vice president; Mrs. Gerhardt Lux of Osceola, second vice president; Mrs. Carl Hansen of Edgar, third vice president; Mrs. Edward Pratt, fourth vice president; Mrs. Edwin Souchek of DeWeese, recording secretary; Mrs. Eugene Schreiner of Nebraska City, financial secretary; Mrs. Howard Schroedl of Falls City, treasurer; and Mrs. Ray Meysenburg of Seward, auditor.

Special Ed Veto Draws Criticism Of Ex-Senator

Former Omaha Sen. David Stahmer said Tuesday Gov. J. James Exon has reneged on his earlier commitment to special education services by vetoing LB761.

The bill, which would provide $960,000 to help school districts diagnose children's learning disabilities, is an attempt to rewrite a bill passed in 1973 but since disqualified by a technicality.

Stahmer said when he testified before the Legislature in favor of LB761, he said the worst course the Legislature could take would be to fail to provide funds for diagnosis.

Exon has reneged on his original commitment to diagnostic services for children. Stahmer claims, since he approved LB403 in 1973, and in fact, had his aide, Jon Oberg, help write it.

PEPPERMINT FLAVORED CHEWING GUM

"New Freedent® gum won't stick to my dental work."

"I had to give up chewing ordinary gum because of the sticking problem. But Freedent, the new gum from Wrigley's, is specially formulated not to stick to most dental work. So I'm free to enjoy chewing again."

And now Freedent comes in a new peppermint flavor, too. Try some yourself. Spearmint in the blue pack. Or new peppermint in the green pack. You'll like both.

Centralized Library Network Studied

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Board members of the aska Library Commission has discussed the possibility stablishing a centralized ssing network for libraries braska

hough there have been al feasibility studies and pts to set up such a library s during past years Com- ion Director Mrs Jane s said none is as promising he Ohio College Library r (OCLC) at Columbus Ohio

OCLC a computerized data process was initially established for use by Ohio s college libraries but it has expanded to over 30 states Mrs Geske said

She added the computerized process would aid in the cataloging of a library s books serials and other materials and would help in locating materials in other library facilities

An OCLC program in Nebraska she said may be contingent on organizing a statewide library network Since many of Nebraska s state colleges and public libraries operate on a small volume basis, they probably would not be individually accepted for service by OCLC

However rather than contracting individually with OCLC the libraries could combine their volume by forming a network and then apply for OCLC services Mrs Geske said

The board deferred any action on the OCLC proposal until a formal presentation can be given at the next meeting

At the meeting, Mrs Geske also announced a change in the procedure of handling funding for library services to institutions

This year, for the first time, the commission is asking institutions to submit proposals of needed library services Mrs Geske said, ' instead of us using this institutional funding to provide resources "

Services are provided to 17 mental, medical, educational and correctional institutions, Mrs Geske said

KNOW YOUR FOOD

WHAT ABOUT THIAMINE ... NIACIN ...?
© '73

Q. I'm reading a lot about the key nutrients such as proteins, carbohydrates, fats, calcium, vitamins A and C. But how about nutrients such as thiamine? What does thiamine do for me and what are its sources?

A. Thiamine helps body cells obtain energy from food and helps keep nerves in healthy condition. It also promotes good appetite and digestion. Some important sources are lean pork, heart, kidney, liver, dry beans and peas; whole grain and enriched cereals and breads, and some nuts.

Q. What can you tell me about the function of riboflavin?

A. Riboflavin helps cells use oxygen to release energy from food and helps keep eyes healthy. It also keeps skin around mouth and nose smooth. Important sources are milk, liver, kidney, heart, lean meat, eggs, and dark leafy greens.

Q. How about the importance of niacin?

A. Niacin helps maintain health of skin, tongue, digestive tract and nervous system. It also helps body cells use oxygen to produce energy. Important sources are liver, yeast, lean meat, poultry, fish, leafy greens, peanuts and peanut butter, beans and peas, and whole grain and enriched breads and cereals.

Q. How important is iron?

A. Iron combines with a specific body protein to make hemoglobin. Hemoglobin is the red substance of blood that carries oxygen from the lungs to muscles, brain and other parts of the body. Iron also helps cells use oxygen. Some important sources of iron are liver, kidney, heart, oysters, lean meat, egg yolk, dry beans; dark-green leafy vegetables; dried fruit; whole grain and enriched breads and cereals, and molasses.

Local Lover's Lanes Lack Usual Legends—But Not Any More

By JIM CAMDEN
Star Staff Writer

There once was a time-honored tradition that after two teenagers went out on a date, but before they went home, they would drive to the town's one romantic spot — Lover's Leap, Inspiration Point or Moonlight Bay — and engage in what is generally referred to as "making out."

It would be a spot with which every teen in town was familiar, a spot that would serve as a place to exchange vows of undying passion — several times a week with different partners.

Part of the glamour of such a place would be in a romantic story, 90% of which was a blatant lie, that young men would recount to their dates. The young ladies would sit starry-eyed and listen with fast-pounding hearts, even though they had heard the story a hundred times before.

These passion pits would be well-known to local law authorities — most of whom could remember spending nights there themselves — and would generally be neglected on the nightly tour of duty. The only problem the spots ever caused, anyway, was a traffic jam at 1 a.m. (11 p.m. on weeknights) when there was a rush to get the girls home on time.

Unfortunately, Lincoln does not have a universally accepted romantic spot, let alone a romantic legend.

There is no Lover's Leap, where an Indian princess jumped to her death because her father the chief said she couldn't marry a white fur trapper. This is not because the area was short of Indian princesses or passing fur trappers; it's just that there's no place where an injury worse than a sprained ankle could be inflicted by hurling oneself from the top.

Nor is there a spot where two gentlemen fought a duel for the hand of a fair maiden and where the blood spilled by the loser forever prevents vegetation from growing. Unfortunately, at the time duelling was popular, any arguments over a woman in Nebraska were usually settled by one party sneaking up and shooting the other in the back.

Nor is there a spot where the ghost of a jilted suitor appears at night to bemoan the loss of an unfaithful lover. Since the advent of Alfred Hitchcock and Rod Sterling, ghosts have become unionized and refuse to do night work.

Local authorities — law enforcement and otherwise — report that there are three rather popular spots for teenagers to go "park": Holmes Lake, Pioneers Park and any country road that's handy. But it is clear that Lincoln needs some romantic legends to help the teen-age boy establish a rapport with his date, thus make it seem like he's interested in more than making out, (which is all he's interested in anyway, but appearances are the important thing).

So here are a few made-to-order legends that can be used in their pure form, or mixed and matched, whatever sounds good at the time.

The Holmes Lake Tragedy

Marvin Cornblower and Miranda Goodbody were desperately in love. But his father was a street widening opponent from Havelock and her father was a Cadillac salesman from Piedmont. They wanted to get married, but Miranda's father didn't approve of Marvin. So every night they strolled around Holmes Lake, trying to figure a way out of their plight.

One day, Marvin decided to beg Miranda's father to let them be married. He confronted Mr. Goodbody on the Holmes Park golf course.

"Let me marry your daughter," Marvin demanded.

"Get out of my way, punk. I have a four-foot putt to sink to win the first game ever from by business partner," Mr. Goodbody said.

"I'm not moving until I can marry your daughter!" Marvin said as he lay down between the ball and the 18th hole. In a fit of anger, Mr. Goodbody drive the ball through Marvin's skull and into the 18th hole. He was so grateful for winning the game that he would have consented to the marriage.

But alas, despite the efforts of a dozen doctors on the course at the time, Marvin died shortly afterwards at the St. Elizabeth Hole-in-the-Head Unit.

That night, Miranda went down to Holmes Lake and threw herself from a rented paddle boat. Although the water wasn't deep enough to drown, she got her head stuck in the mud and suffocated.

County Road Tragedy

Two best friends, Damon and Runyon, were in love with the same girl, Esmeralda. This quickly put a strain on their friendship, of course. And that was unfortunate because they were both star backs for the school football team.

Whenever Damon was supposed to open a hole in the line for Runyon to scamper through, Damon would mysteriously miss his man and Runyon would get clobbered. Similarly, when Runyon was supposed to block for Damon on a screen pass, Runyon would slip and Damon would get creamed out in the flat.

This rivalry was beginning to affect the whole team's play, so the school's cheerleaders went to Esmeralda and told her she'd best choose between the two if she wanted to live long enough to see her braces removed.

But Esmeralda couldn't make up her mind, so the two boys decided to play chicken to see who deserved Esmeralda.

They started toward each other, a mile apart on the gravel road, quickly reaching 120 miles per hour. When they were fifty feet apart, both realized that no girl was worth one or both ending up as a Nebraska traffic statistic, so they tried to swerve, but it was too late. They collided head on in a crashing of glass, a rending of metal and a pillar of flame. They were both killed instantly, and up until last year, nothing grew on that spot (here the narrator can point out to any area nearby with sparse vegetation). The gas burned it all out. Esmeralda was so shaken up by this that she opened a massage parlor in Council Bluffs and spent the rest of her life being needed.

Ghost of Pioneers Park

This story concerns two young lovers who wanted to get married, but the war intervened. Philbert and Natasha always went for long walks in Pioneers Park and made plans for the future. They sat under the statue of the buffalo and discussed marriage, raising a family and being in love. But Philbert was 1-A and a pacifist, so when his number came up he had to go to Sweden. He promised Natasha that he would come back secretly in two years and meet Natasha at the base of the statue. Then they would run off and be married.

Before the time was up, however, Natasha married a wealthy industrialist's son, who happened to be 4-F, and moved to New Jersey. Before she left, she sent a "Dear Philbert" letter to Sweden.

Philbert went into traumatic shock, and decided to undergo a sex change. He died on the operating table, however, because his heart just wasn't in it.

On the appointed day, Philbert's ghost returned to the statue, but Natasha wasn't there. Now every year on that night, his ghost returns, wailing for Natasha in a strange mixture of baritone and soprano moans. (This is especially effective if the narrator mentions that this is the night, and says, "Did you hear something?")

These three, with a few minor variations to keep from getting outdated, should be enough to get the normal high schooler through three years of parking.

After that time, adolescents usually rent apartments and can get by with, "You wanna come up and listen to records?"

Ex-Italian Truck Driver Now Totem Pole Carver

Santa Clara, Calif. (UPI) — If you happen to need a totem pole, fresh-carved in cedar and 30 feet high, the man to see is George Gulli, an Italian truck driver turned pole carver.

The Coast Guard in Alaska, where the Indians carved totem poles centuries ago, is importing Gulli to do a 30-foot totem, complete with spread-winged eagle.

"I've never been face to face with a real Indian totem pole," says George. "I'm going to look all around when I'm up there."

He says he will take pictures and try to buy some Indian totem pole carving tools.

"I make my own tools now," he says, "because you can't buy them here."

Gulli has been chiseling totem poles for about 16 years. He got into it when he looked at some carvings his brother had and decided to try his hand at it, using a wooden flagpole for his first sculpture.

He is now carving at Great America, a new recreation park here, where people watch him hack away at the logs that become intricate totems with authentic Indian legendary figures.

Since he took up the avocation, Gulli has been studying the history and folklore of totem poles. He can tell the tale of the sun raven, or the unrequited love of the fog woman. He knows what's behind the meaning of his carved leaping frog as well as the mighty eagle.

The 52-year-old Carver says he has whittled a "a couple of hundred" totem poles to date. He has already carved 33 for Great America.

When he goes to Kodiak, Alaska, soon to carve the pole for the Coast Guard station there, Gulli expects the job to take about a week. He has already done the wings of the eagle which will go on the totem.

Tiny Plastic Lens May Transform Cataract Surgery

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

A tiny plastic lens, much smaller than the tip of a surgeon's little finger, has added a new dimension to cataract surgery.

Ophthalmologists who favor the use of the lens — inserted into the eye during a procedure known as an "intraocular lens implant" — say it has tremendous potential for some cataract sufferers.

Other eye surgeons are less enthusiastic about the implant procedure which, though not new, is still relatively rare compared to traditional cataract surgery.

A cataract is an abnormality of the eye in which the crystalline lens becomes clouded. Located behind the iris (a membrane which contracts and expands to let in light), the lens is, in its natural state, a clear, disc-like structure.

In traditional cataract sugery, the surgeon simply removes the crystalline lens. Vision in the eye can then be corrected with glasses.

However, because the eye is missing a lens, the glasses must be very powerful. As a result, the images seen by the eye are enlarged as much as 30 to 33%, and peripheral vision is absent.

One of the primary advantages of a successful intraocular lens implant is that it eliminates the impairment of perhipheral vision, according to Lincoln ophthalmologist Dr. Aziz Y. Anis, who performs lens implants.

An intraocular lens implant involves the insertion of a small, purified plastic lens directly behind the cornea. The lens is supported by the iris, held in place by two supporting loops and a suture which attaches the lens to the iris.

However, because of their design and the way in which they were secured, the early "lenses didn't work and gave the procedure a bad reputation," Dr. Anis said.

The first iris-supported lens was developed in the Netherlands during the early 1960s. And since that time, a number of lenses using the iris-supported principle have been developed and are in use today.

In the United States, the iris-supported intraocular lens implant came into use toward the end of the 1960's.

Although lens implants are still rather rare compared to traditional cataract surgery, Dr. Anis emphasized the fact that the procedure has gone far beyond the experimental stage.

"It is getting more and more popular," and new discoveries relative to the operation "are being made every day."

The procedure is "not free of complications," and opponents who base their comments on the early, unsuccessful lenses, have valid criticisms, Dr. Anis said.

It is "a very delicate and precise surgery that can be done by any competent eye surgeon," Dr. Anis said.

The operation, per se, is no more dangerous than traditional cataract surgery, he continued. However, more time is required for an implant, and, as is the case with any surgery, increasing the time increases the risk.

Among the complications that can occur during or after an implant are improper placement of the lens, dislocation of the lens (more common with the earlier type of lens), damage to the inside of the cornea during placement and clouding of the cornea.

Yet Dr. Anis noted the complications can arise with any kind of cataract surgery.

The procedure has its limitations, based on the patient and the competence of the surgeon, said Dr. Anis, who has performed about 40 implants.

"A patient has to be thoroughly assessed" before a decision to do an implant can be made.

In order to undergo an implant, a patient should have healthy eyes, free of glaucoma; be in general good physical condition, and preferably be over 60 years of age (due to the length of time known safe for leaving the lens in the eye).

When properly done, the lens implant is practically inert, and the percentage of success is "very high," Dr. Anis said.

Most people will still need to wear glasses after an implant. But the glasses do not have to be as strong as those required following traditional cataract surgery.

In treating any abnormal condition, physicians aim at bringing the organ to "as near its natural condition as possible," Dr. Anis said. And he feels the intraocular lens implant is a step in that direction.

Opposition to the procedure may result, in part, he said, from the fact that conventional cataract surgery is considered to be highly successful. Consequently, there is, in some quarters, a reluctance to change.

Abby Reprints Reply To Question On Death

DEAR ABBY: I am a Sunday Schol teacher. One of my pupils' mothers told me that a few years ago you had something in your column in reply to a child who had lost his baby brother. She said your answer explained death beautifully on a child's level. If you recall such a letter, I would appreciate your printing it again.

LOVES CHILDREN

DEAR LOVES CHILDREN: I do recall such a letter because of the many requests I had from clergymen requesting permission to reprint it in their church bulletins. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: My Sunday School teacher says that God is everywhere. Please put this letter in the paper and maybe he will see it:

Dear God: Why did you let my brother die? When he was hit by the car my mother prayed to you to let him live but you wouldn't. My little brother was only 2 years old, and he couldn't have sinned so bad that you had to punish him that way. Everyone says you are good and can do anything you want to do. You could have saved my little brother, but you let him die. You broke my mother's heart. How can I love you?

PETER

DEAR PETER: Your question is one that has troubled religious men for thousands of years. One great thinker wrote a book about it. It is called "Job" and is part of the Bible. It says that the suffering of innocent people is something we cannot understand.

But this much is sure: Death is not a punishment. It is one of life's mysteries. Speak to your minister, Peter. Communicate with God by praying, and He will help you in your search for wisdom and goodness, and make your Mommy happy again.

DEAR ABBY: My husband plays cards with the boys one night a week. Whenever I ask him how he came out, he says, "Oh, I broke even."

Abby, it's not possible to break even every time. Do you think he keeps his losses a secret because he's ashamed or because he thinks I'll try to keep him from playing if he loses too much? On the other hand, could he keep his winnings a secret because he's afraid I'll ask him for part of his winnings?

FAYE

DEAR FAYE: Both

DEAR ABBY: Can you tell me why I change my handwriting from day to day? It's beginning to bother me.

One day I'll slant my writing to the left, and the next day I'll slant it to the right. Some days it's straight up and down.

Then there are days when I feel like spreading the letters out, and other days I write with the letters all crunched up close together. It's to the point where I can't identify my own handwriting.

I'm a legal secretary for a reputable law firm, and I've been asked lately, "Is this your handwriting?"

WORRIED OUT EAST

DEAR WORRIED: Graphologists tell us that one's handwriting reflects one's personality and character, and possibly the state of one's mind. If I were you I'd consult a psychiatrist.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 36-year-old white woman who is married to a 57-year-old Modoc Indian. We have been married almost nine years. and as far as I'm concerned, he has the white man beat all to heck.

I was married to two white men before so I know what I'm talking about.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	4♠	5♦	Dble

Opening lead - nine of spades.

There is no doubt that some plays run against the grain, but this does not mean that they are taboo. For example, consider this deal where South gets to five diamonds doubled on the bidding shown.

It certainly seems natural to win the spade lead in dummy and return a trump. That is what one would normally do with such a trump holding, but it is not what declarer should do in the present case.

West's double indicates that he may very well have all four missing trumps, and in that case a trump play from dummy at trick two is sure to result in the loss of three trump tricks.

Instead, South should play a heart to the ace at trick two and lead a low trump towards dummy's 10-4.

This unusual play cuts West down to size. If he follows low, dummy's ten wins and South loses two trump tricks, period.

And if West, instead, goes up with the jack of trumps, dummy of course follows low. Whatever West returns, declarer concedes the ten of diamonds to the king and, in that way, also restricts his losses to two trump tricks.

The hand demonstrates once more why it is impossible in bridge to lay down hard and fast rules to cover all situations. The general rule followed by a declarer is to lead from weakness towards strength — for example, from x-x towards A-Q — and not to lead from strength towards weakness.

But in this case, due to the special circumstances, it is clear that the better method of play is to lead from strength towards weakness and in that way absolutely guarantee the contract.

KNOW YOUR FOOD

WHAT ABOUT
THIAMINE ... NIACIN ...?

Q. I'm reading a lot about the key nutrients such as proteins, carbohydrates, fats, calcium, vitamins A and C. But how about nutrients such as thiamine? What does thiamine do for me and what are its sources?

A. Thiamine helps body cells obtain energy from food and helps keep nerves in healthy condition. It also promotes good appetite and digestion. Some important sources are lean pork, heart, kidney, liver, dry beans and peas; whole grain and enriched cereals and breads, and some nuts.

Q. What can you tell me about the function of riboflavin?

A. Riboflavin helps cells use oxygen to release energy from food and helps keep eyes healthy. It also keeps skin around mouth and nose smooth. Important sources are milk, liver, kidney, heart, lean meat, eggs, and dark leafy greens.

Q. How about the importance of niacin?

A. Niacin helps maintain health of skin, tongue, digestive tract and nervous system. It also helps body cells use oxygen to produce energy. Important sources are liver, yeast, lean meat, poultry, fish, leafy greens, peanuts and peanut butter, beans and peas, and whole grain and enriched breads and cereals.

Q. How important is iron?

A. Iron combines with a specific body protein to make hemoglobin. Hemoglobin is the red substance of blood that carries oxygen from the lungs to muscles, brain and other parts of the body. Iron also helps cells use oxygen. Some important sources of iron are liver, kidney, heart, oysters, lean meat, egg yolk, dry beans, dark green leafy vegetables, dried fruit, whole grain and enriched breads and cereals and molasses.

Why Isn't There Any Organized Help For Readaholics?

Today's contributor to "Write On" has one husband, seven children and two grandchildren. She was born and raised in Fairbury, but has lived on a farm near Sidney for 29 years.

By MARIAN LENZEN

Do you occasionally sneak into bed at 2 a.m. because you became so engrossed in a Perry Mason mystery you couldn't put it down?

Have you ever turned on the radio for the specific purpose of hearing the weather forecast only to hear it physically but not mentally because you picked up the paper at the same time?

Do you read the back of programs?

Have you read a steak sauce label in its entirity? If you answer yes to any of the above, you are a readaholic.

There are rehabilitation clinics for the alcoholic, equilibria houses for the drug addict, self help clubs for the compulsive gambler. There are psychiatrists, sociologists, counselours, clergymen, and therapists specializing in various disorders and neuroses, but I haven't heard of anyone interested in readaholics. Therefore I have concluded that self help and self evaluation is the only recourse.

The disease starts in childhood. Good intentioned people pushed me into compulsive reading. Sister Josina impressed upon my 12-year-old mind that not finishing a book was nothing short of a mortal sin. "Discipline is good for the soul," she would say. "Finish the book even if it is boring." I am still reading books from cover to cover. To combat this compulsion I have been forcing myself to read two or three chapters of a book, then return it immediately to the library.

My parents contributed to my condition. It was family custom to go for a Sunday afternoon drive. My folks enjoyed the spacious comfort of the front seat in our new 1936 Plymouth. In the back seat I was crowded in on one side of Grandma and brother Wayne was squashed in on the other. Bobby had to stand. "Get off my feet." "Can't you stand still one minute?" Grandma would scream, as she picked Bobby up and deposited him in front of me. To keep Bobby's nose pressed against the window we would play, "Who can see the Burma Shave sign first?"

It became a way of life. I missed the majesty of the Rocky Mountains. "Take This Scenic Route" or "THIS SHORCUT TO LAS VEGAS" demanded my attention. I spent three hours focusing a telescope on a directional sign in the bottom of the Grand Canyon. I buy many picture postcards so I can see what I missed while I was there. I even read those little signs with nothing on them but numbers, "107," "214", "308". No explanation, just numbers. They drive me bananas.

This is a hard habit to break. I tried taking a good book along, but found, crazy as it seems, that I can't read something enclosed in the car with me without getting nauseated. I would suppose that blinders, like those used on horses, might be effective, but I refuse to lay myself open to being referred to as "the old nag."

A readaholic reads anything and everything, even filler pieces in the newspaper. "Quebec is the only walled city in North America." I don't want to know that. I hate Dick Tracy and I don't need to know the techniques of bridge. I read somewhere (figures huh?) that everything we ever knew, we still know. We may not know we know it, but we do. Everything keeps crowding into our brain, gets computerized and filed away. Eventually something happens that triggers the machine and out pops that particular bit of information. I wouldn't mind if all the trivia I read would get filed away in the recesses of my mind if that were where all the trivia would go. What bothers is that I have no control over what gets filed away and what stays right out front for constant inspection and digression. I always forget my mother's birthday and I always remember the scintillating tidbit about hairy faced men having a higher percentage of frigid wives than clean shaven men do.

I suspect there are others out there like me. I see the same people in the library week after week. I have developed a nodding acquaintance with browers in the book store. Perhaps we should form a club.

The condition is not acute. We have to read for information and direction, so why not read for pleasure? I just need a little more self control. I want my eyes to feel rested. I want to talk to my children, we have been communicating with notes too long.

This is the final test. You are a readaholic.

'Psst' Of Aerosol Spray Can Is Gradually Being Supplanted

New York (AP) — The "psst" of the aerosol spray is being replaced in a number of households today by the "squoosh" of a finger pump or the silence of a roll-on.

Scientists are still arguing whether the fluorocarbons used as propellants in some aerosols — particularly personal grooming products — threaten to destroy the ozone layer of the atmosphere and thus increase the risk of skin cancer.

Manufacturers, however, are taking no chances of losing business. While continuing to produce the aerosols, they are also offering and promoting a variety of alternatives and are giving an increasing share of their advertising dollars to nonaerosols.

The Chemical Specialties Manufacturers Association reported that sales of aerosols in the first half of last year were 9 per cent less than in the same period a year earlier.

The Manufacturing Chemists Association reported that production of fluorocarbons — which had been growing by 10 per cent and more annually from 1967 to 1973 — increased only 5 per cent in 1974 and decreased 15 per cent in 1975.

The decrease appears to be due at least in part to the controversy. "Or to the economy," said John Van Horn of the Washington-based association. "We don't know which."

Studies by the New York market research firm of Towne-Oller Associates show nonaerosols have gained a steadily increasing share of the deodorant and hair-spray markets.

Mike Wallace, president of the firm, said a survey based on over 33,000 food stores doing more than $700 million in business in health and beauty aids showed that nonaerosols had a 4 per cent share of the women's hair-spray market, in dollar terms, in 1973. By the last quarter of 1975, the nonaerosols accounted for 23.5 per cent of all sales.

In the deodorant field, aerosol sprays, including antiperspirants and nonantiperspirants, dropped from a 71 per cent share of the market in dollar terms in the last quarter of 1974 to just over 66 per cent in the last quarter of 1975, Wallace said. The biggest gainers were sticks, roll-ons and nonaerosol sprays.

Another study by the A. C. Nielsen company produced similar findings. The company reported that nonaerosol deodorants had a 20 per cent share of the market in dollar terms two years ago and a 27 percent share by the beginning of 1976.

A Nielsen spokesman said that since nonaerosols are cheaper per item than aerosols, the 27 per cent share of dollar volume actually represents about a one-third share of the market in terms of number of units sold.

The finger-driven spray pump — the kind you push up and down — is among the most popular alternative containers and Bristol-Meyers Products, one of the first to jump off the aerosol bandwagon with its Final Net hairspray, has introduced what it claims is the first major nonaerosol, antiperspirant spray.

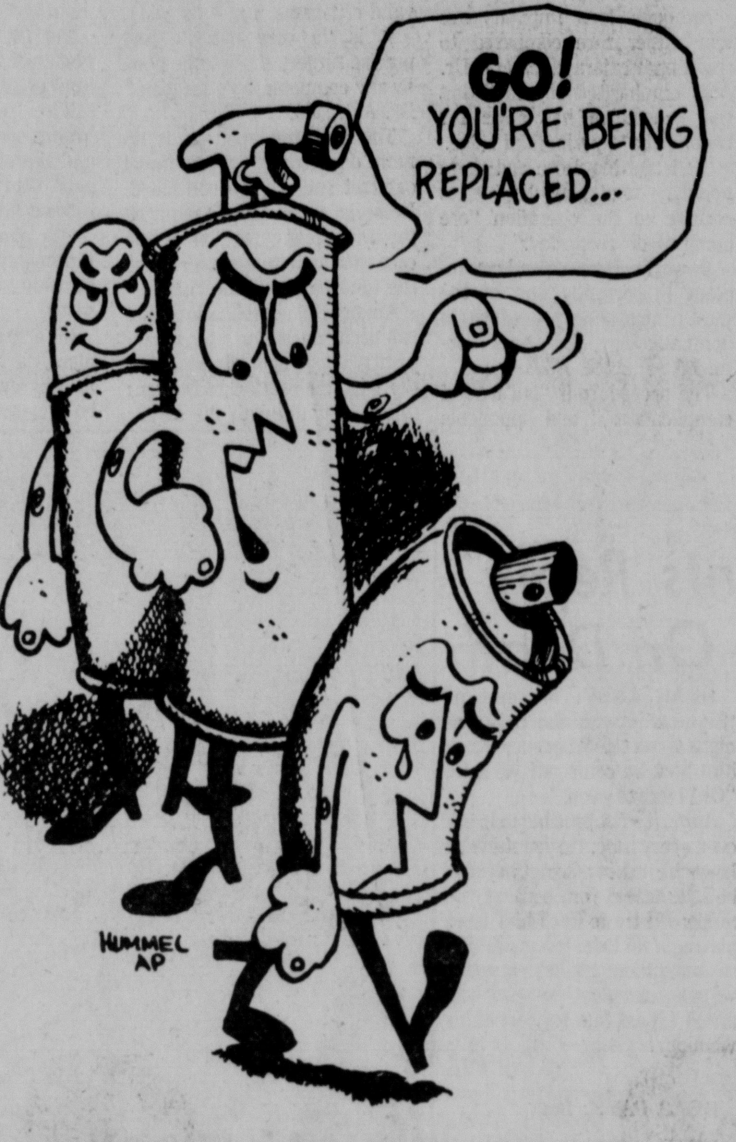
Risdon Manufacturing Co., which makes both aerosols and nonaerosols, said it had orders from hair spray makers for 4.5 million finger-driven pumps. The company also is producing aerosols powered by carbon dioxide and hydrocarbons instead of fluorcarbons.

Promoters of the nonaerosols say the finger-driven pumps have been improved so they deliver just as fine a spray as the aerosols. They also say the nonaerosols are cheaper since you do not pay for expensive propellants.

The advantage of fluorcarbons — about half of which are used as propellants in personal grooming products — is that they produce a very fine spray that does not feel cold to the skin. Manufacturers of items like household cleaners and spray paints generally use other propellants since they don't require the fineness.

The problem with fluorocarbons is the growing concern that they may damage the ozone layer that acts as a shield against the sun's radiation.

The National Academy of Science is still studying the issue. A report is expected later this year. A federal task force said last June that "there seems to be legitimate cause for serious concern" over the use of flurocarbons. At the same time, however, the task force said that consideration of any ban should wait until the academy finishes its study.



Illinois Kangaroo Spotted

Rock Island, Ill. (UPI) — The missing kangaroo that hippity-hopped through the Chicago area more than a year ago may have bobbed to the surface again in northwestern Illinois.

Rock Island police got the first word.

"I'm sorry I answered that damn phone this morning," said Katie Wise, veteran dispatcher for the Rock Island Police Department.

"This guys calls up and says, 'You're not going to believe me. I'm not drunk, I haven't been drinking. But I just saw a kangaroo hop through my neighbor's yard'."

Masterson said he was out walking his dog about 6:30 a.m. when a three-foot-tall kangaroo — "Well, it was either a kangaroo or a wallaby, they look a lot alike" — hopped over the hill across the street.

"We're new to the area," Harry explained, "and I didn't know if one of my neighbors had one for a pet.

"I saw it for about 60 seconds and dashed inside to get my mother-in-law and my wife," he said. "They didn't get a very good look at it but they did see what I saw."

Local Lover's Lanes Lack Usual Legends —But Not Any More

By JIM CAMDEN
Star Staff Writer

There once was a time-honored tradition that after two teenagers went out on a date, but before they went home, they would drive to the town's one romantic spot — Lover's Leap, Inspiration Point or Moonlight Bay — and engage in what is generally referred to as "making out."

It would be a spot with which every teen in town was familiar, a spot that would serve as a place to exchange vows of undying passion — several times a week with different partners

Part of the glamour of such a place would be in a romantic story 90% of which was a blatant lie, that young men would recount to their dates. The young ladies would sit starry-eyed and listen with fast-pounding hearts, even though they had heard the story a hundred times before.

These passion pits would be well-known to local law authorities — most of whom could remember spending nights there themselves — and would generally be neglected on the nightly tour of duty. The only problem the spots ever caused, anyway, was a traffic jam at 1 a.m. (11 p.m. on weeknights) when there was a rush to get the girls home on time.

Unfortunately, Lincoln does not have a universally accepted romantic spot, let alone a romantic legend.

There is no Lover's Leap, where an Indian princess jumped to her death because her father the chief said she couldn't marry a white fur trapper. This is not because the area was short of Indian princesses or passing fur trappers; it's just that there's no place where an injury worse than a sprained ankle could be inflicted by hurling oneself from the top.

Nor is there a spot where two gentlemen fought a duel for the hand of a fair maiden and where the blood spilled by the loser forever prevents vegetation from growing. Unfortunately, at the time duelling was popular, any arguments over a woman in Nebraska were usually settled by one party sneaking up and shooting the other in the back

Nor is there a spot where the ghost of a jilted suitor appears at night to bemoan the loss of an unfaithful lover. Since the advent of Alfred Hitchcock and Rod Sterling, ghosts have become unionized and refuse to do night work.

Local authorities — law enforcement and otherwise — report that there are three rather popular spots for teenagers to go "park": Holmes Lake, Pioneers Park and any country road that's handy. But it is clear that Lincoln needs some romantic legends to help the teen-age boy establish a rapport with his date, thus make it seem like he's interested in more than making out, (which is all he's interested in anyway, but appearances are the important thing).

So here are a few made-to-order legends that can be used in their pure form, or mixed and matched, whatever sounds good at the time.

The Holmes Lake Tragedy

Marvin Cornblower and Miranda Goodbody were desperately in love. But his father was a street widening opponent from Havelock and her father was a Cadillac salesman from Piedmont. They wanted to get married, but Miranda's father didn't approve of Marvin. So every night they strolled around Holmes Lake, trying to figure a way out of their plight.

One day, Marvin decided to beg Miranda's father to let them be married. He confronted Mr. Goodbody on the Holmes Park golf course.

"Let me marry your daughter," Marvin demanded.

"Get out of my way, punk. I have a four-foot putt to sink to win the first game ever from by business partner," Mr. Goodbody said.

"I'm not moving until I can marry your daughter!" Marvin said as he lay down between the ball and the 18th hole. In a fit of anger, Mr. Goodbody drive the ball through Marvin's skull and into the 18th hole. He was so grateful for winning the game that he would have consented to the marriage.

But alas, despite the efforts of a dozen doctors on the course at the time, Marvin died shortly afterwards at the St. Elizabeth Hole-in-the-Head Unit.

That night, Miranda went down to Holmes Lake and threw herself from a rented paddle boat. Although the water wasn't deep enough to drown, she got her head stuck in the mud and suffocated.

County Road Tragedy

Two best friends, Damon and Runyon, were in love with the same girl, Esmeralda. This quickly put a strain on their friendship, of course. And that was unfortunate because they were both star backs for the school football team.

Whenever Damon was supposed to open a hole in the line for Runyon to scamper through, Damon would mysteriously miss his man and Runyon would get clobbered. Similarly, when Runyon was supposed to block for Damon on a screen pass, Runyon would slip and Damon would get creamed out in the flat.

This rivalry was beginning to affect the whole team's play, so the school's cheerleaders went to Esmeralda and told her she'd best choose between the two if she wanted to live long enough to see her braces removed.

But Esmeralda couldn't make up her mind, so the two boys decided to play chicken to see who deserved Esmeralda.

They started toward each other, a mile apart on the gravel road, quickly reaching 120 miles per hour. When they were fifty feet apart, both realized that no girl was worth one or both ending up as a Nebraska traffic statistic, so they tried to swerve, but it was too late. They collided head on in a crashing of glass, a rending of metal and a pillar of flame. They were both killed instantly, and up until last year, nothing grew on that spot (here the narrator can point out to any area nearby with sparse vegetation). The gas burned it all out. Esmeralda was so shaken up by this that she opened a massage parlor in Council Bluffs and spent the rest of her life being needed.

Ghost of Pioneers Park

This story concerns two young lovers who wanted to get married, but the war intervened. Philbert and Natasha always went for long walks in Pioneers Park and made plans for the future. They sat under the statue of the buffalo and discussed marriage, raising a family and being in love. But Philbert was 1-A and a pacifist, so when his number came up he had to go to Sweden. He promised Natasha that he would come back secretly in two years and meet Natasha at the base of the statue. Then they would run off and be married.

Before the time was up, however, Natasha married a wealthy industrialist's son, who happened to be 4-F, and moved to New Jersey. Before she left, she sent a "Dear Philbert" letter to Sweden.

Philbert went into traumatic shock, and decided to undergo a sex change. He died on the operating table, however, because his heart just wasn't in it.

On the appointed day, Philbert's ghost returned to the statue, but Natasha wasn't there. Now every year on that night, his ghost returns, wailing for Natasha in a strange mixture of baritone and soprano moans. (This is especially effective if the narrator mentions that this is the night, and says, "Did you hear something?")

These three, with a few minor variations to keep from getting outdated, should be enough to get the normal high schooler through three years of parking.

After that time, adolescents usually rent apartments and can get by with, "You wanna come up and listen to records?"

Ex-Italian Truck Driver Now Totem Pole Carver

Santa Clara, Calif. (UPI) — If you happen to need a totem pole, fresh-carved in cedar and 30 feet high, the man to see is George Gulli, an Italian truck driver turned pole carver.

The Coast Guard in Alaska, where the Indians carved totem poles centuries ago, is importing Gulli to do a 30-foot totem, complete with spread-winged eagle.

"I've never been face to face with a real Indian totem pole," says George. "I'm going to look all around when I'm up there."

He says he will take pictures and try to buy some Indian totem pole carving tools

"I make my own tools now," he says, "because you can't buy them here"

Gulli has been chiseling totem poles for about 16 years He got into it when he looked at some carvings his brother had and decided to try his hand at it, using a wooden flagpole for his first sculpture

He is now carving at Great America, a new recreation park here where people watch him [illegible]k away at the logs that become intricate totems with authentic Indian legendary figures

Since he took up the avocation, Gulli has been studying the history and folklore of totem poles. He can tell the tale of the sun raven, or the unrequited love of the fog woman. He knows what's behind the meaning of his carved leaping frog as well as the mighty eagle.

The 52-year-old Carver says he has whittled a "a couple of hundred" totem poles to date. He has already carved 33 for Great America

When he goes to Kodiak, Alaska, soon to carve the pole for the Coast Guard station there. Gulli expects the job to take about a week He has already done the wings of the eagle which will go on the totem.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — My grandfather got up at 6. He shaved with a straight razor.

He went out to the kitchen and said: "Nothing like the smell of coffee in the morning."

He was a coffee wholesaler. He brought men home to dinner who spoke familiarly about their homes in Brazil, which was much farther away in those days.

He inspected the pan of frying bacon. He said he guessed he would have a piece of mince pie, too.

He grabbed grandma and kissed her. He said mince pie was the very thing for breakfast. He said to give me some, too.

He said he felt bully.

Up with the cats and the twittering birds these sunny mornings. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more. (A little coffee first though, if you please.)

The household rises rumbling and grumbling. Like a car starting on a cold mornng. "What time is it?"

The morning has begun at Shelter Bay condominiums.

At my grandfather's office he had a round table that revolved. There were small brass scales in the center.

He sat there with other coffee men. They tasted coffee in little cups, swinging the table around so that different coffees could be compared.

They were dignified looking men. High stiff collars. Tailored suits. They wore gold watch chains across their vests.

Each seat had a polished brass cuspidor alongside. They tasted the coffee and spit it out. They made notes about the roast and where the coffee came from.

Grandfather was a Republican. He was against the free silver policies of William Jennings Bryan. He admired Theodore Roosevelt. He had no use for Socialism. Democrats didn't do much better either, he said.

He believed in hard work and the gold standard. He was against liquor and gambling and people who didn't get up early and get a good start on the day.

He said: "If you get to work by 8, you've got most of it done by noon. Then you've got the afternoon to get ahead of the other fellow."

Grandma said: "Now don't mess up my kitchen or breakfast'll never be on the table."

My grandfather poked me in the ribs and sang: "Throw out the lifeline."

The early bird gets the worm," said my grandfather. He rose at dawn. Splashed in the tub while singing hymns — "Je-sus is my Sa-vior."

He was not overly religious. He simply like to sing.

He was raised on an Illinois farm in what was called a God-fearing family. Meaning they went to church Sundays. Said grace before meals. And great-grandmother had the preacher in once a month for fried chicken dinner.

It was hellfire and damnation futures that came down from the pulpit on Sunday. People in those sleepy Bible belt towns wanted their religion strong. strong.

"Those who follow the rule will be called up higher," said grandma. "And the others will go Below."

☆ ☆ ☆

With God to be feared on all sides, you would think people would turn gloomy, But no. They were a cheerful bunch.

On holidays my grandfather would ask a blessing on our dinner.

Then he would hold the carving knife over the turkey and ask: "Who gets the part - that - went - over - the - fence - last?"

Everybody giggled. They said my grandfather should be ashamed of himself.

Tiny Plastic Lens May Transform Cataract Surgery

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

A tiny plastic lens, much smaller than the tip of a surgeon's little finger, has added a new dimension to cataract surgery.

Ophthalmologists who favor the use of the lens — inserted into the eye during a procedure known as an "intraocular lens implant" — say it has tremendous potential for some cataract sufferers.

Other eye surgeons are less enthusiastic about the implant procedure which, though not new, is still relatively rare compared to traditional cataract surgery.

A cataract is an abnormality of the eye in which the crystalline lens becomes clouded. Located behind the iris (a membrane which contracts and expands to let in light), the lens is, in its natural state, a clear, disc-like structure.

In traditional cataract sugery, the surgeon simply removes the crystalline lens. Vision in the eye can then be corrected with glasses.

However, because the eye is missing a lens, the glasses must be very powerful. As a result, the images seen by the eye are enlarged as much as 30 to 33%, and peripheral vision is absent.

One of the primary advantages of a successful intraocular lens implant is that it eliminates the impairment of perhipheral vision, according to Lincoln ophthalmologist Dr. Aziz Y. Anis, who performs lens implants.

An intraocular lens implant involves the insertion of a small, purified plastic lens directly behind the cornea. The lens is supported by the iris, held in place by two supporting loops and a suture which attaches the lens to the iris.

However, because of their design and the way in which they were secured, the early "lenses didn't work and gave the procedure a bad reputation," Dr. Anis said.

The first iris-supported lens was developed in the Netherlands during the early 1960s. And since that time, a number of lenses using the iris-supported principle have been developed and are in use today.

In the United States, the iris-supported intraocular lens implant came into use toward the end of the 1960's.

Although lens implants are still rather rare compared to traditional cataract surgery, Dr. Anis emphasized the fact that the procedure has gone far beyond the experimental stage.

"It is getting more and more popular," and new discoveries relative to the operation "are being made every day."

The procedure is "not free of complications," and opponents who base their comments on the early, unsuccessful lenses, have valid criticisms, Dr. Anis said.

It is "a very delicate and precise surgery that can be done by any competent eye surgeon," Dr. Anis said.

The operation, per se, is no more dangerous than traditional cataract surgery, he continued. However, more time is required for an implant, and, as is the case with any surgery, increasing the time increases the risk.

Among the complications that can occur during or after an implant are improper placement of the lens, dislocation of the lens (more common with the earlier type of lens), damage to the inside of the cornea during placement and clouding of the cornea.

Yet Dr. Anis noted the complications can arise with any kind of cataract surgery.

The procedure has its limitations, based on the patient and the competence of the surgeon, said Dr. Anis, who has performed about 40 implants.

"A patient has to be thoroughly assessed" before a decision to do an implant can be made.

In order to undergo an implant, a patient should have healthy eyes, free of glaucoma; be in general good physical condition, and preferably be over 60 years of age (due to the length of time known safe for leaving the lens in the eye).

When properly done, the lens implant is practically inert, and the percentage of success is "very high," Dr. Anis said.

Most people will still need to wear glasses after an implant. But the glasses do not have to be as strong as those required following traditional cataract surgery.

In treating any abnormal condition, physicians aim at bringing the organ to "as near its natural condition as possible," Dr. Anis said. And he feels the intraocular lens implant is a step in that direction.

Opposition to the procedure may result, in part, he said, from the fact that conventional cataract surgery is considered to be highly successful. Consequently, there is, in some quarters, a reluctance to change.

I Want Out

Even a horse hates to be cooped up inside when the weather is as nice as this. Where is that stable boy?

Abby Reprints Reply To Question On Death

DEAR ABBY: I am a Sunday School teacher. One of my pupils' mothers told me that a few years ago you had something in your column in reply to a child who had lost his baby brother. She said your answer explained death beautifully on a child's level. If you recall such a letter, I would appreciate your printing it again.

LOVES CHILDREN

DEAR LOVES CHILDREN: I do recall such a letter because of the many requests I had from clergymen requesting permission to reprint it in their church bulletins. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: My Sunday School teacher says that God is everywhere. Please put this letter in the paper and maybe he will see it:

Dear God: Why did you let my brother die? When he was hit by the car my mother prayed to you to let him live but you wouldn't. My little brother was only 2 years old, and he couldn't have sinned so bad that you had to punish him that way. Everyone says you are good and can do anything you want to do. You could have saved my little brother, but you let him die. You broke my mother's heart. How can I love you?

PETER

DEAR PETER: Your question is one that has troubled religious men for thousands of years. One great thinker wrote a book about it. It is called "Job" and is part of the Bible. It says that the suffering of innocent people is something we cannot understand.

But this much is sure: Death is not a punishment. It is one of life's mysteries. Speak to your minister, Peter. Communicate with God by praying, and He will help you in your search for wisdom and goodness, and make your Mommy happy again.

DEAR ABBY: My husband plays cards with the boys one night a week. Whenever I ask him how he came out, he says, "Oh, I broke even."

Abby, it's not possible to break even every time. Do you think he keeps his losses a secret because he's ashamed or because he thinks I'll try to keep him from playing if he loses too much? On the other hand, could he keep his winnings a secret because he's afraid I'll ask him for part of his winnings?

FAYE

DEAR FAYE: Both

DEAR ABBY: Can you tell me why I change my handwriting from day to day? It's beginning to bother me.

One day I'll slant my writing to the left, and the next day I'll slant it to the right. Some days it's straight up and down.

Then there are days when I feel like spreading the letters out, and other days I write with the letters all crunched up close together. It's to the point where I can't identify my own handwriting.

I'm a legal secretary for a reputable law firm, and I've been asked lately, "Is this your handwriting?"

WORRIED OUT EAST

DEAR WORRIED: Graphologists tell us that one's handwriting reflects one's personality and character, and possibly the state of one's mind. If I were you I'd consult a psychiatrist.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 36-year-old white woman who is married to a 57-year-old Modoc Indian. We have been married almost nine years, and as far as I'm concerned, he has the white man beat all to heck.

I was married to two white men before so I know what I'm talking about.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	4 ♠	5 ♦	Dble

Opening lead - nine of spades.

There is no doubt that some plays run against the grain, but this does not mean that they are taboo. For example, consider this deal where South gets to five diamonds doubled on the bidding shown.

It certainly seems natural to win the spade lead in dummy and return a trump. That is what one would normally do with such a trump holding, but it is not what declarer should do in the present case.

West's double indicates that he may very well have all four missing trumps, and in that case a trump play from dummy at trick two is sure to result in the loss of three trump tricks.

Instead, South should play a heart to the ace at trick two and lead a low trump towards dummy's 10-4.

This unusual play cuts West down to size. If he follows low, dummy's ten wins and South loses two trump tricks, period.

And if West, instead, goes up with the jack of trumps, dummy of course follows low. Whatever West returns, declarer concedes the ten of diamonds to the king and, in that way, also restricts his losses to two trump tricks.

The hand demonstrates once more why it is impossible in bridge to lay down hard and fast rules to cover all situations. The general rule followed by a declarer is to lead from weakness towards strength — for example, from x-x towards A-Q — and not to lead from strength towards weakness.

But in this case, due to the special circumstances, it is clear that the better method of play is to lead from strength towards weakness and in that way absolutely guarantee the contract.

County Board Accepts Road Planning Criteria

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Despite a heated plea from the county engineer to delay any action for one week, the County Board sent the broad guidelines called the County Road Planning Program Criteria on their way to inclusion in the Comprehensive Plan.

"Don't adopt something that will tie our hands in getting tax money back from the federal government," said Engineer Marv Nuernberger as he asked for the "courtesy" of at least a week's delay.

"We've spent a year trying to get you and Doug (Brogden, planning director) together to get the Comprehensive Plan moving ahead," replied Commissioner Jan Gauger. She then outlined the basic philosophic differences between herself and Nuernberger.

"I think we should have a county road plan which can accommodate other funding sources. You want to design the road program for whatever federal or state aid is available at the time."

Chairman Bruce Hamilton cut off Nuernberger as he started to go through the criteria point by point in an effort to show discrepancies with state statutes and differing interpretations of the criteria.

Marv Nuernberger

Nuernberger asked for more time so that others, including the technical group associated with the road planning process, could offer amendments.

"We can take amendments into consideration at a later time," said Mrs. Gauger as the board voted 2-1 to approve the current criteria. Commissioner Bob Colin voted against the motion.

"Cooperation is a two-way street. I don't think I've seen a lot of willingness on your part to do anything but talk and make arguments," Mrs. Gauger told Nuernberger.

In other action, the board approved a 1976-77 Juvenile Attention Center budget of about $326,000, a drop of $58,000 from the original request. At least $114,000 of the budget will come from county taxes. The remainder is under a federal grant.

The board also approved the hiring of the Rev. Kenneth C. Vetter as conciliation court counselor at an annual salary of $17,659. The conciliation court counselor works with couples getting divorces in the county.

The Rev. Mr. Vetter is currently minister of the Prince of Peace Lutheran Church in Lincoln.

The board also created an advisory committee on child care to work on county-wide day care needs. Appointed to the committee were Dr. Karen Dinsmore, Mary Jo Ryan, Dr. G. Millicent Savery, Linda Douglas, Robert C. Connell, Sanford H. Nelson, George A. Preece, Gaylord L. Blanc, Michael Shaefer, Arthel Eugene Crump, Sandra J. Knopf, Susan H. Kalish, Carol Kubert, Carol Yoakum and Alan Little.

Meyer Challenges Exemptions

The Lancaster County Board of Equalization violated state laws when it exempted four nursing homes from the property tax rolls, County Assessor Fritz Meyer said this week.

In a letter to State Tax Commissioner William E. Peters, Meyer asked that the local tax exemption decision on Madonna Professional Care Center, Tabitha Home, Clark Jeary Memorial Manor and Firth's Lakeview Rest Home be reviewed.

The county commissioners, sitting as the Board of Equalization, exempted the four nursing homes after March hearings.

Meyer, who had recommended that the homes be put on the tax rolls, then asked the county attorney's office what procedures he had available to "correct what is believed to be erroneous exemptions."

The only alternative was to appeal to the state tax commissioner, he was told.

Peters, who received the letter Tuesday, said that his staff will review the request and "any decision will be a couple of weeks at least."

Meyer's request is similar to Douglas County Assessor Frank Bemis's request in late March, Peters said.

Bemis challenged 10 exemptions, including church bowling alleys, vacant land and labor union buildings. No decision on a state review of these exemptions has yet been made, Peters said.

County Board Vents Anger At Unicam, Exon

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Frustrated at the state government for giving the county new jobs to do but no help on the funding, Lancaster County commissioners verbally vented their anger Tuesday.

Nearing the maximum mill levy allowed under the state constitution, the board took a look at the impact of two recent state laws and the governor's veto of a third piece of legislation.

The new laws give added responsibility to the county attorney's office without any financial reimbursement.

One makes the county responsible for many civil child support proceedings including contempt, establishing paternity, modifying child support decrees and running garnishments.

The second, a new mental health law, makes the county attorney's office responsible for prosecution on all mental health commitments to the regional center.

Extra Attorney Needed

It will take an additional attorney to cover the added workload, said Chief Deputy Bernie McGinn, who asked the board to approve the new position.

"The state is expanding our areas of duties without expanding our resources," said Commissioner Jan Gauger. "What's the state going to do if we can't pay for this? Sue us?"

More than 40 counties in the state are already at the 14.28 mill levy limit, she pointed out. "What are these counties doing to do?"

"With great reluctance," Mrs. Gauger and Bruce Hamilton agreed to the new position. Commissioner Bob Colin dissented.

The governor's veto of a bill which would have helped ease the transfer of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Mental Health Center from a state agency to county control also raised hackles of board members.

$66,500 Over 5 years

The bill would authorize about $61,500 in state tax dollars for the next five years to pay mental health center employes' vacationand sick leave benefits above what the county employe plan offers.

Even without the bill, the state will still have to pay about $30,000 to the longtime employes who have accumulated vacation leave, Mrs. Gauger said.

The transfer from state to county control, which officially takes place Monday, was mandated by the Legislature two years ago.

This latest bill would have allowed the long-time center employes to retain some of the provisions of the more liberal state personnel plan.

Without the state legislation, the employes will simply lose sick leave benefits, said County Personnel Officer Wayne Hart.

The board approved the budget transfer necessary to make the agency a county operation and also sent off a letter to all state senators urging their support for a veto override.

"The state government is doing a very good job of shifting off duties to other levels of government," said Hamilton. It makes the state look good — fiscally responsible — and puts the financial problem at the county level, he said.

Exiled Historian Back In Spain

Zaragoza, Spain — Historian Salvador de Madariaga, 90, has returned to Spain for the first time since the civil war and will make his acceptance speech as a member of the Royal Academy of the Spanish language May 2, the national news agency Cifra said.

Madariaga, a liberal and former education minister under the Spanish Republic, flew here from Lugano, Switzerland, where he has been living in exile.

After fleeing Spain during the civil war, Madariaga taught history at Oxford and in Mexico. He is one of many exiles returning to their native country after Generalissimo Francisco Franco's death last November.

Extra Days Planned

Oslo, Norway (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will spend two extra days in Norway after the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's ministerial meeting in Oslo next month, the foreign ministry said.

Mass Gathering Rules Made More Lenient

The Lancaster County Board took the sting out of some of the mass gathering rules Tuesday when the commissioners went through the proposed rules point by stringent point.

Working from a city-drawn proposal, the county commissioners raised the crowd size rules, dropped the square-feet-per-person requirement, lowered parking requirements and dropped some noise level rules.

The county's mass gathering resolution will cover events with more than 2,500 people which last at least four hours or more and are held out doors. Government-sponsored events or events on government-owned land are exempted.

The city's original proposal, aimed primarily at outdoor concerts, covered any gathering of more than 500 people, lasting at least three hours.

The city's proposal that band noise levels over 90 decibels be outlawed were stricken by the board.

"If we play Big Brother for the people in front of the equipment in the open air, we need to play Big Brother to those at Pershing Auditorium," Jan Gauger said.

As commissioners tried to reach a compromise on some of the rules, they also discussed the possibility of throwing the whole resolution out and taking each request on a "case by case basis."

And that decision is still a possibility. The board will continue to hammer out its version Thursday morning and is expected to vote on a final mass gathering resolution or no resolution at next Tuesday's afternoon meeting.

County's Deferred Pay Plan Cleared

Writing for Douglas, Asst. Atty. Gen. Ralph Gillan said the county has the authority to establish such a plan and to fund it through an annuity contract executed with a life insurance company.

Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners requested the opinion concerning a plan established in May 1974.

Under the plan, an employe authorizes a certain amount of his wages withheld which is invested by the insurance company and paid back to the employe later, usually after retirement.

The advantage of the system for employes is that the income is not taxed until the employes actually are paid.

Gillan wrote: "We find nothing in the statutes which limits the terms of (counties') employment contracts. If it wishes to enter into a contract with an employe that a part of his compensation shall be paid to him at a later date, we find no impediment to such a contract . . .

"It is a fringe benefit for the employes (that) costs the county virtually nothing and no doubt helps to recruit and retain employes."

Why Isn't There Any Organized Help For Readaholics?

Today's contributor to "Write On" has one husband, seven children and two grandchildren. She was born and raised in Fairbury, but has lived on a farm near Sidney for 29 years.

By MARIAN LENZEN

Do you occasionally sneak into bed at 2 a m because you became so engrossed in a Perry Mason mystery you couldn t put it down?

Have you ever turned on the radio for the specific purpose of hearing the weather forecast only to hear it physically but not mentally because you picked up the paper at the same time?

Do you read the back of programs?

Have you read a steak sauce label in its entirity? If you answer yes to any of the above, you are a readaholic

There are rehabilitation clinics for the alcoholic, equilibria houses for the drug addict, self help clubs for the compulsive gambler There are psychiatrists, sociologists, counselours, clergymen, and therapists specializing in various disorders and neuroses, but I haven't heard of anyone interested in readaholics. Therefore I have concluded that self help and self evaluation is the only recourse

The disease starts in childhood Good intentioned people pushed me into compulsive reading Sister Josina impressed upon my 12-year-old mind that not finishing a book was nothing short of a mortal sin ' Discipline is good for the soul,' she would say. "Finish the book even if it is boring " I am still reading books from cover to cover To combat this compulsion I have been forcing myself to read two or three chapters of a book, then return it immediately to the library.

My parents contributed to my condition It was family custom to go for a Sunday afternoon drive. My folks enjoyed the spacious comfort of the front seat in our new 1936 Plymouth. In the back seat I was crowded in on one side of Grandma and brother Wayne was squashed in on the other Bobby had to stand. "Get off my feet." "Can't you stand still one minute?" Grandma would scream, as she picked Bobby up and deposited him in front of me To keep Bobby's nose pressed against the window we would play, "Who can see the Burma Shave sign first?"

It became a way of life. I missed the majesty of the Rocky Mountains. "Take This Scenic Route' or "THIS SHORCUT TO LAS VEGAS" demanded my attention. I spent three hours focusing a telescope on a directional sign in the bottom of the Grand Canyon I buy many picture postcards so I can see what I missed while I was there I even read those little signs with nothing on them but numbers, "107," "214", "308". No explanation, just numbers. They drive me bananas.

This is a hard habit to break I tried taking a good book along, but found, crazy as it seems, that I can't read something enclosed in the car with me without getting nauseated I would suppose that blinders, like those used on horses, might be effective, but I refuse to lay myself open to being referred to as "the old nag."

A readaholic reads anything and everything, even filler pieces in the newspaper. "Quebec is the only walled city in North America." I don't want to know that I hate Dick Tracy and I don't need to know the techniques of bridge. I read somewhere (figures huh?) that everything we ever knew, we still know We may not know we know it, but we do. Everything keeps crowding into our brain, gets computerized and filed away. Eventually something happens that triggers the machine and out pops that particular bit of information. I wouldn't mind if all the trivia I read would get filed away in the recesses of my mind if that were where all the trivia would go. What bothers is that I have no control over what gets filed away and what stays right out front for constant inspection and digression. I always forget my mother's birthday and I always remember the scintillating tidbit about hairy faced men having a higher percentage of frigid wives than clean shaven men do.

I suspect there are others out there like me. I see the same people in the library week after week. I have developed a nodding acquaintance with browers in the book store. Perhaps we should form a club.

The condition is not acute. We have to read for information and direction, so why not read for pleasure? I just need a little more self control. I want my eyes to feel rested. I want to talk to my children, we have been communicating with notes too long

'Psst' Of Aerosol Spray Can Is Gradually Being Supplanted

New York (AP) — The "psst" of the aerosol spray is being replaced in a number of households today by the "squoosh" of a finger pump or the silence of a roll-on.

Scientists are still arguing whether the fluorocarbons used as propellants in some aerosols — particularly personal grooming products — threaten to destroy the ozone layer of the atmosphere and thus increase the risk of skin cancer.

Manufacturers, however, are taking no chances of losing business. While continuing to produce the aerosols, they are also offering and promoting a variety of alternatives and are giving an increasing share of their advertising dollars to nonaerosols

The Chemical Specialties Manufacturers Association reported that sales of aerosols in the first half of last year were 9 per cent less than in the same period a year earlier.

The Manufacturing Chemists Association reported that production of fluorocarbons — which had been growing by 10 per cent and more annually from 1967 to 1973 — increased only 5 per cent in 1974 and decreased 15 per cent in 1975.

The decrease appears to be due at least in part to the controversy. "Or to the economy," said John Van Horn of the Washington-based association. "We don't know which."

Studies, by the New York market research firm of Towne-Oller Associates show nonaerosols have gained a steadily increasing share of the deodorant and hair-spray markets.

Mike Wallace, president of the firm, said a survey based on over 33,000 food stores doing more than $700 million in business in health and beauty aids showed that nonaerosols had a 4 per cent share of the women's hairspray market, in dollar terms, in 1973. By the last quarter of 1975, the nonaerosols accounted for 23.5 per cent of all sales.

In the deodorant field, aerosol sprays, including antiperspirants and nonantiperspirants, dropped from a 71 per cent share of the market in dollar terms in the last quarter of 1974 to just over 66 per cent in the last quarter of 1975, Wallace said. The biggest gainers were sticks, roll-ons and nonaerosol sprays.

Another study by the A. C. Nielsen company produced similar findings. The company reported that nonaerosol deodorants had a 20 per cent share of the market in dollar terms two years ago and a 27 percent share by the beginning of 1976.

A Nielsen spokesman said that since nonaerosols are cheaper per item than aerosols, the 27 per cent share of dollar volume actually represents about a one-third share of the market in terms of number of units sold.

The finger-driven spray pump — the kind you push up and down — is among the most popular alternative containers and Bristol-Meyers Products, one of the first to jump off the aerosol bandwagon with its Final Net hairspray, has introduced what it claims is the first major nonaerosol, antiperspirant spray.

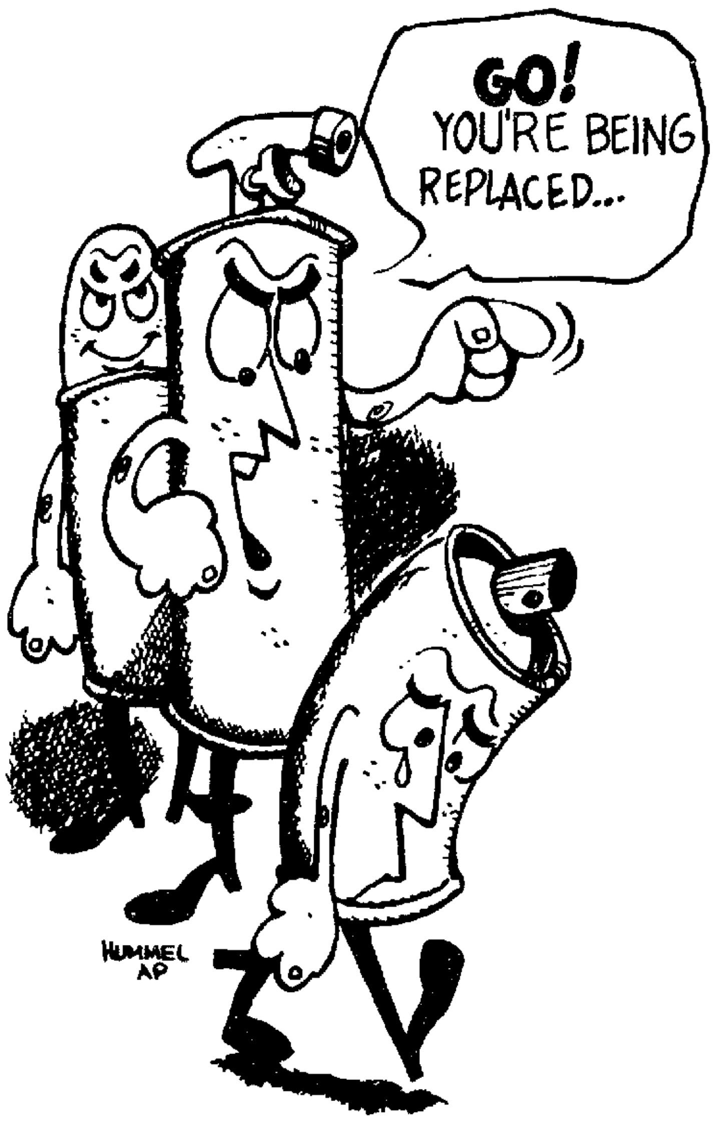
Risdon Manufacturing Co., which makes both aerosols and nonaerosols, said it had orders from hair spray makers for 4.5 million finger-driven pumps. The company also is producing aerosols powered by carbon dioxide and hydrocarbons instead of fluorcarbons.

Promoters of the nonaerosols say the finger-driven pumps have been improved so they deliver just as fine a spray as the aerosols. They also say the nonaerosols are cheaper since you do not pay for expensive propellants.

The advantage of fluorcarbons — about half of which are used as propellants in personal grooming products — is that they produce a very fine spray that does not feel cold to the skin. Manufacturers of items like household cleaners and spray paints generally use other propellants since they don't require the fineness.

The problem with fluorocarbons is the growing concern that they may damage the ozone layer that acts as a shield against the sun's radiation.

The National Academy of Science is still studying the issue. A report is expected later this year. A federal task force said last June that "there seems to be legitimate cause for serious concern" over the use of flurocarbons. At the same time, however, the task force said that consideration of any ban should wait until the academy finishes its study.



Illinois Kangaroo Spotted

Rock Island, Ill. (UPI) — The missing kangaroo that hippity-hopped through the Chicago area more than a year ago may have bobbed to the surface again in northwestern Illinois.

Rock Island police got the first word.

"I'm sorry I answered that damn phone this morning," said Katie Wise, veteran dispatcher for the Rock Island Police Department.

"This guys calls up and says, 'You're not going to believe me. I'm not drunk. I haven't been drinking. But I just saw a kangaroo hop through my neighbor's yard'."

Masterson said he was out walking his dog about 6:30 a.m. when a three-foot-tall kangaroo — "Well, it was either a kangaroo or a wallaby, they look a lot alike" — hopped over the hill across the street.

"We're new to the area," Harry explained, "and I didn't know if one of my neighbors had one for a pet.

"I saw it for about 60 seconds and dashed inside to get my mother-in-law and my wife," he said. "They didn't get a very good look at it but they did see what I saw."

NETV Commissioner Scores Fiscal Analyst

Legislative directives on how Nebraska Educational Television should spend a nickel here and dime there drew a verbal slap on state fiscal analysts' wrists Tuesday, when an NETV commissioner said they "erode" the panel's authority.

Commissioner Steven B. Sample, a University of Nebraska executive vice president, said "I seriously question the constitutionality of including policy directives in an appropriations bill."

Sample said enabling legislation vests in the NETV Commission the authority for employe hiring, firing and pay. If the commission follows directives in its fiscal 1977 appropriations bills, he said, "We have given up a fundamental responsibility of this board."

The issue arose in discussing NETV Commission appropriations for staff pay raises, 6% across the board and 1% for merit increases not to exceed $1,200 per individual.

"That kind of comment in an appropriations bill erodes the authority of this commission," Sample declared, labeling the language in the bill "gratuitous comments."

Sample said the legislative fiscal staff focuses on state lawmakers' interest in total dollar figures, rather than the commission's determination of how to spend each best. And the enabling legislation is never mentioned.

"We have long felt handicapped as administrators" under the practice, said NETV General Manager Jack McBride. He cited previously insufficient allowances for deserved merit increases, and no authority to deny across-the-board pay boosts for employes who didn't deserve them.

In denying that management tool, McBride said, it gives "quite a sense of security for a worker in any (state) agency" who knows he can work little or lot and still get more pay.

Sample also groused about the commission's appropriations bill expanded this year to include "little cubbyholes" dictating how public funds will be budgeted. In effect, he said, that means funding decisions reside with the legislative fiscal analyst and not the commission, "which makes its decisions in public."

Commissioner James Johnson of Kearney said more specified budgeting lines means "more danger" of NETV program control by the Legislature.

Sample said identical legislative dollar prescriptions in the past two to three years were "seriously damaging" NU, which finally succeeded now "in getting out from under that."

Commission Chairman Philip Heckman of Crete directed NETV staff study of Sample's suggestion that an informal consortium of state agencies with the same budgeting problems might register formal complaints. No action was taken on the comments by Sample, who said he was speaking only for himself.

The Legislature appropriated the NETV Commission $2.5 million in general fund (state tax) money. Commissioners will review that, still subject to gubernatorial action, for acceptance in June.

Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — My grandfather got up at 6. He shaved with a straight razor.

He went out to the kitchen and said: "Nothing like the smell of coffee in the morning."

He was a coffee wholesaler. He brought men home to dinner who spoke familiarly about their homes in Brazil, which was much farther away in those days.

He inspected the pan of frying bacon. He said he guessed he would have a piece of mince pie, too.

He grabbed grandma and kissed her. He said mince pie was the very thing for breakfast. He said to give me some, too.

He said he felt bully.

Up with the cats and the twittering birds these sunny mornings. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more. (A little coffee first though, if you please.)

The household rises rumbling and grumbling. Like a car starting on a cold mornng. "What time is it?"

At my grandfather's office he had a round table that revolved. There were small brass scales in the center.

He sat there with other coffee men. They tasted coffee in little cups, swinging the table around so that different coffees could be compared.

They were dignified looking men. High stiff collars. Tailored suits. They wore gold watch chains across their vests.

Each seat had a polished brass cuspidor alongside. They tasted the coffee and spit it out. They made notes about the roast and where the coffee came from.

Grandfather was a Republican. He was against the free silver policies of William Jennings Bryan. He admired Theodore Roosevelt. He had no use for Socialism. Democrats didn't do much better either, he said.

He believed in hard work and the gold standard. He was against liquor and gambling and people who didn't get up early and get a good start on the day.

He said: "If you get to work by 8, you've got most of it done by noon. Then you've got the afternoon to get ahead of the other fellow."

Grandma said: "Now don't mess up my kitchen or breakfast'll never be on the table."

My grandfather poked me in the ribs and sang: "Throw out the lifeline."

The early bird gets the worm," said my grandfather. He rose at dawn. Splashed in the tub while singing hymns — "Je-sus is my Sa-vior."

He was not overly religious. He simply like to sing.

He was raised on an Illinois farm in what was called a God-fearing family. Meaning they went to church Sundays. Said grace before meals. And great-grandmother had the preacher in once a month for fried chicken dinner.

It was hellfire and damnation futures that came down from the pulpit on Sunday. People in those sleepy Bible belt towns wanted their religion strong. strong.

"Those who follow the rule will be called up higher," said grandma. "And the others will go Below."

☆ ☆ ☆

With God to be feared on all sides, you would think people would turn gloomy. But no. They were a cheerful bunch.

On holidays my grandfather would ask a blessing on our dinner.

Then he would hold the carving knife over the turkey and ask: "Who gets the part - that - went - over - the - fence - last?"

Everybody giggled. They said my grandfather should be ashamed of himself.

New Beef Grade Standards . . .

Beef grading standards have been changed—as they have been every 7-10 years since grading was established in 1927 as a voluntary program by U.S.D.A. Uniform standards make buying and selling meat more equitable in determining relative values. The new standards were held up in various hearings and court proceedings for almost a year before finally being implemented on February 23 by U.S.D.A.

Presently the top three grades are: Prime—produced in limited amounts from grain-fed beef and primarily available to the restaurant trade and specialty shops. It's the most expensive. Choice—generally comes from grain-fed cattle and is available at the supermarket. It has enough fat marbling to be tender and flavorful. Good—is a leaner meat because of less grain feeding and sometimes is available at the supermarket under distinctive names such as Flavor Mark.

Under the new standards the amount of Prime beef will be slightly enlarged to include some previously graded Choice. However, the major change will result in the enlarged Choice class to include some from the "high side" of USDA Good. Good will be more restrictive but will still be available for those who want very lean but relatively tender beef.

You can rely on our Personally Selected USDA Choice label to bring you consistently high quality choice beef. The new standards make it more important than ever before to learn more about meat selection and preparation. Get to know our meat men, or drop me a note, we'll be glad to help.

County Board Accepts Road Planning Criteria

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Despite a heated plea from the county engineer to delay any action for one week, the County Board sent the broad guidelines called the County Road Planning Program Criteria on their way to inclusion in the Comprehensive Plan.

Marv Nuernberger

"Don't adopt something that will tie our hands in getting tax money back from the federal government," said Engineer Marv Nuernberger as he asked for the "courtesy" of at least a week's delay.

"We've spent a year trying to get you and Doug (Brogden, planning director) together to get the Comprehensive Plan moving ahead," replied Commissioner Jan Gauger. She then outlined the basic philosophic differences between herself and Nuernberger.

"I think we should have a county road plan which can accommodate other funding sources. You want to design the road program for whatever federal or state aid is available at the time."

Chairman Bruce Hamilton cut off Nuernberger as he started to go through the criteria point by point in an effort to show discrepancies with state statutes and differing interpretations of the criteria.

Nuernberger asked for more time so that others, including the technical group associated with the road planning process, could offer amendments.

"We can take amendments into consideration at a later time," said Mrs. Gauger as the board voted 2-1 to approve the current criteria. Commissioner Bob Colin voted against the motion.

"Cooperation is a two-way street. I don't think I've seen a lot of willingness on your part to do anything but talk and make arguments," Mrs. Gauger told Nuernberger.

In other action, the board approved a 1976-77 Juvenile Attention Center budget of about $326,000, a drop of $58,000 from the original request. At least $114,000 of the budget will come from county taxes. The remainder is under a federal grant.

The board also approved the hiring of the Rev. Kenneth C. Vetter as conciliation court counselor at an annual salary of $17,659. The conciliation court counselor works with couples getting divorces in the county.

The board also created an advisory committee on child care to work on county-wide day care needs. Appointed to the committee were Dr. Karen Dinsmore, Mary Jo Ryan, Dr. G. Millicent Savery, Linda Douglas, Robert C. Connell, Sanford H. Nelson, George A. Preece, Gaylord L. Blanc, Michael Shaefer, Arthel Eugene Crump, Sandra J. Knopf, Susan H. Kalish, Carol Kubert, Carol Yoakum and Alan Little.

Meyer Challenges Exemptions

Fritz Meyer

The Lancaster County Board of Equalization violated state laws when it exempted four nursing homes from the property tax rolls, County Assessor Fritz Meyer said this week.

In a letter to State Tax Commissioner William E. Peters, Meyer asked that the local tax exemption decision on Madonna Professional Care Center, Tabitha Home, Clark Jeary Memorial Manor and Firth's Lakeview Rest Home be reviewed.

The county commissioners, sitting as the Board of Equalization, exempted the four nursing homes after March hearings.

Meyer, who had recommended that the homes be put on the tax rolls, then asked the county attorney's office what procedures he had available to "correct what is believed to be erroneous exemptions."

The only alternative was to appeal to the state tax commissioner, he was told.

Peters, who received the letter Tuesday, said that his staff will review the request and "any decision will be a couple of weeks at least."

Meyer's request is similar to Douglas County Assessor Frank Bemis's request in late March, Peters said.

Bemis challenged 10 exemptions, including church bowling alleys, vacant land and labor union buildings. No decision on a state review of these exemptions has yet been made, Peters said.

County Board Vents Anger At Unicam, Exon

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Frustrated at the state government for giving the county new jobs to do but no help on the funding, Lancaster County commissioners verbally vented their anger Tuesday.

Nearing the maximum mill levy allowed under the state constitution, the board took a look at the impact of two recent state laws and the governor's veto of a third piece of legislation.

The new laws give added responsibility to the county attorney's office without any financial reimbursement.

One makes the county responsible for many civil child support proceedings including contempt, establishing paternity, modifying child support decrees and running garnishments.

The second, a new mental health law, makes the county attorney's office responsible for prosecution on all mental health commitments to the regional center.

Extra Attorney Needed

It will take an additional attorney to cover the added workload, said Chief Deputy Bernie McGinn, who asked the board to approve the new position.

"The state is expanding our areas of duties without expanding our resources," said Commissioner Jan Gauger. "What's the state going to do if we can't pay for this? Sue us?"

More than 40 counties in the state are already at the 14.28 mill levy limit, she pointed out. "What are these counties doing to do?"

"With great reluctance," Mrs. Gauger and Bruce Hamilton agreed to the new position. Commissioner Bob Colin dissented.

The governor's veto of a bill which would have helped ease the transfer of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Mental Health Center from a state agency to county control also raised hackles of board members.

$66,500 Over 5 years

The bill would authorize about $61,500 in state tax dollars for the next five years to pay mental health center employes' vacation and sick leave benefits above what the county employe plan offers.

Even without the bill, the state will still have to pay about $30,000 to the longtime employes who have accumulated vacation leave, Mrs. Gauger said.

The transfer from state to county control, which officially takes place Monday, was mandated by the Legislature two years ago.

This latest bill would have allowed the long-time center employes to retain some of the provisions of the more liberal state personnel plan.

Without the state legislation, the employes will simply lose sick leave benefits, said County Personnel Officer Wayne Hart.

The board approved the budget transfer necessary to make the agency a county operation and also sent off a letter to all state senators urging their support for a veto override.

"The state government is doing a very good job of shifting off duties to other levels of government," said Hamilton. It makes the state look good — fiscally responsible — and puts the financial problem at the county level, he said.

Exiled Historian Back In Spain

Zaragoza, Spain — Historian Salvador de Madariaga, 90, has returned to Spain for the first time since the civil war and will make his acceptance speech as a member of the Royal Academy of the Spanish language May 2, the national news agency Cifra said.

Madariaga, a liberal and former education minister under the Spanish Republic, flew here from Lugano, Switzerland, where he has been living in exile.

After fleeing Spain during the civil war, Madariaga taught history at Oxford and in Mexico. He is one of many exiles returning to their native country after Generalissimo Francisco Franco's death last November.

Extra Days Planned

Oslo, Norway (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will spend two extra days in Norway after the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's ministerial meeting in Oslo next month, the foreign ministry said.

Mass Gathering Rules Made More Lenient

The Lancaster County Board took the sting out of some of the mass gathering rules Tuesday when the commissioners went through the proposed rules point by stringent point.

Working from a city-drawn proposal, the county commissioners raised the crowd size rules, dropped the square-feet-per-person requirement, lowered parking requirements and dropped some noise level rules.

The county's mass gathering resolution will cover events with more than 2,500 people which last at least four hours or more and are held out doors. Government-sponsored events or events on government-owned land are exempted.

The city's original proposal, aimed primarily at outdoor concerts, covered any gathering of more than 500 people, lasting at least three hours.

The city's proposal that band noise levels over 90 decibels be outlawed were stricken by the board.

"If we play Big Brother for the people in front of the equipment in the open air, we need to play Big Brother to those at Pershing Auditorium," Jan Gauger said.

As commissioners tried to reach a compromise on some of the rules, they also discussed the possibility of throwing the whole resolution out and taking each request on a "case by case basis."

And that decision is still a possibility. The board will continue to hammer out its version Thursday morning and is expected to vote on a final mass gathering resolution or no resolution at next Tuesday's afternoon meeting.

County's Deferred Pay Plan Cleared

Writing for Douglas, Asst. Atty. Gen. Ralph Gillan said the county has the authority to establish such a plan and to fund it through an annuity contract executed with a life insurance company.

Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners requested the opinion concerning a plan established in May 1974.

Under the plan, an employe authorizes a certain amount of his wages withheld which is invested by the insurance company and paid back to the employe later, usually after retirement.

The advantage of the system for employes is that the income is not taxed until the employes actually are paid.

Gillan wrote: "We find nothing in the statutes which limits the terms of (counties') employment contracts. If it wishes to enter into a contract with an employe that a part of his compensation shall be paid to him at a later date, we find no impediment to such a contract . . .

"It is a fringe benefit for the employes (that) costs the county virtually nothing and no doubt helps to recruit and retain employes."

Lincoln Could Convert Refuse To Fuel—Study

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Tons of raw refuse could be converted into fuel and used by the Lincoln Electric System or the Nebraska Public Power District, a consultant said Tuesday.

Plans to build a steam generating plant to burn the shredded fuel are also detailed in a report by the Ralph M. Parsons Co. of Pasadena, Calif.

The firm evaluated the potential for recovering resources from solid waste and converting the material to some form of energy. The report was requested by the City Council and County Board.

If LES builds a coal-fired plant, project director Bob Mitchell said Lincoln should burn its garbage there.

However, if LES axes those plans, the garbage should be hauled to NPPD's Hallam Station at Sheldon. NPPD officials haven't said whether they're interested in taking Lincoln's garbage.

Mitchell said the firm's third recommendation is the construction of a steam generating plant burning shredded fuel.

Steam Cheaper

Should a steam plant be built, the steam bill will be cheaper than what downtown customers are paying now. The new system would cost about $5 per 1,000 pounds of steam. LES charged $7.61 last year and will charge an estimated $17 next year at the K St. power plant.

The K St. plant will be phased out in 1977. It was LES's plans to cut off the steam that prompted city officials to wonder whether garbage could be converted into steam.

The Parson firm recommended building a new steam generating plant between 2nd and 3rd Sts. from M to K Sts.

Similarly, the consultants recommended the best place to build LES's proposed 400 megawatt plant is near the proposed Northeast wastewater treatment plant, at 70th and Salt Creek.

Effluent Use Possible

Water from the effluent at the sewage treatment plant could be used for cooling at the power plant. Additional treatment of the effluent would be required and a study is underway to determine how costly that would be.

The city can sell ferrous metals and aluminum recovered from the garbage, Mitchell said.

The best market for ferrous metals is the Northwestern Metal Co. in Lincoln which has indicated it will buy the metals for $35 a ton.

Sale Could Make Millions

Over a 20-year period, Mitchell said the city could take in $16.9 million from the sale of ferrous metals, aluminum and steam.

Mitchell said the city could finance a plant either with general obligation bonds, which require voter approval, or with revenue bonds, which do not.

The consultants estimated it would cost $11.9 million to build a supplementary fuel processing plant. A steam generation plant would be added onto the processing plant. Cost to construct a steam generating plant would be $35.5 million.

Decision Urged

Mitchell urged local officials to decide what kind of garbage burning plant they want — the sooner the better.

Since it takes about three years to plan and build a plant, Mitchell recommended the city begin developing design criteria this July. The plant could then be opened in July, 1979.

Shotgun Brakes 3 Runaway Girls

Grand Island (UPI) — Three runaway teen-age girls involved in a high-speed chase in a stolen car on the wrong lane of Interstate 80 were taken into custody Tuesday, the State Patrol said.

Also taken into custody were a man and a fourth runaway girl. All were being held at the Hall County Jail. None was identified.

Hall County Attorney Sam Grimminger said the driver of the car was wanted by authorities in her home town. Local charges against her could include juvenile charges or possession of a stolen vehicle, Grimminger said.

The three other girls might be released in their parents' custody, he said. Grimminger said authorities were checking if the man was wanted on criminal charges in Douglas County.

The State Patrol said one of the girls and the man, who apparently had hitched a ride with the four girls, told the manager of a restaurant on an I-80 stop near the Giltner interchange the car was stolen. They stayed at the restaurant and the other girls went on.

He was joined by about 12 others, including Shelton police and Hall County deputies.

The car, zipping along at speeds of 75 to 80 miles an hour, was pursued for 12 to 15 miles — five of those miles on the eastbound lane. Officers said 50 to 60 eastbound vehicles had to pull off the highway to avoid collisions.

The chase ended when Shelton Police Chief George Svoboda used a shotgun to blow out two tires of the car carrying the three girls.

Svoboda and other officers had set up a roadblock in the eastbound lane, about four miles west of the Wood River interchange. The girl's car came to a stop in the median and was struck in the rear by Robertson's car.

Tornado Remembrance

A sculpture containing 11,000 pounds of twisted steel will be dedicated May 6, the anniversary of Omaha's 1975 tornado. The 22-foot sculpture by Sidney Buchanan of Omaha will be placed on the west side of Pipal Park. Buchanan said some people may see a tornado in it but the work "has no particular message." He said he will receive no pay for the sculpture. Materials were donated.

No Dog-Goned Luck For Malone Campaign

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

Malone area residents are looking for some bite to their campaign to end barking, straying and biting dogs in the community.

But they were apparently barking up the wrong tree when they presented a list of seven demands to Mary Rogge, chairperson of the Humane Society, during a public meeting Tuesday night. Ms. Rogge and society board member Charlie Wilcox couldn't address themselves directly to the demands without consulting their policy review committee, according to Wilcox.

So, the Malone people heard responses of "Impossible, I'm not familiar with the procedure, makes sense to me and I can't promise," from Ms. Rogge to demands ranging from an animal control officer on patrol at least three times a week to a follow-up on dog bite cases.

Ms. Rogge gave the "no promises" response to the officer patrol demand and one asking that an officer respond in 10 minutes to the calls of residents. She said that current manpower, with only two men on the street during the mornings two or three days a week, won't allow it.

The "makes sense" came on a request that Humane Society personnel identify themselves when they take a complainant's call so the caller has something to fall back on in case of lack of response.

Ms. Rogge admitted she wasn't familiar with the procedure involving dog bite cases and said she would study that matter.

The "impossible" came from Wilcox and caused a brief plea for citizen support in helping the Humane Society solve the problem of enforcement. He explained that only the city police have power to issue citations for violation of dog ordinances and the society would like to have one officer from the police who would respond to the animal problems full time.

"We're not trying to make excuses," Wilcox said, "we need authority, tools and manpower, not just money."

Wilcox also asked for support in asking the City Council for an increase in pound fees from the current $6, $8 and $10 to $10, $15 and $25. He also said neutered animals should be charged the same as others for city tags.

Wilcox emphasized the job of the Humane Society is to aid and protect all animals. Because of this, he added, members of the city council and the police department should meet with the group to make any definite decisions.

Members of the group decided to call another meeting for that purpose in the near future.

NETV Commissioner Scores Fiscal Analyst

Legislative directives on how Nebraska Educational Television should spend a nickel here and dime there drew a verbal slap on state fiscal analysts' wrists Tuesday, when an NETV commissioner said they "erode" the panel's authority.

Commissioner Steven B. Sample, a University of Nebraska executive vice president, said "I seriously question the constitutionality of including policy directives in an appropriations bill."

Sample said enabling legislation vests in the NETV Commission the authority for employe hiring, firing and pay. If the commission follows directives in its fiscal 1977 appropriations bills, he said, "We have given up a fundamental responsibility of this board."

The issue arose in discussing NETV Commission appropriations for staff pay raises, 6% across the board and 1% for merit increases not to exceed $1,200 per individual.

"That kind of comment in an appropriations bill erodes the authority of this commission," Sample declared, labeling the language in the bill "gratuitous comments."

Sample said the legislative fiscal staff focuses on state lawmakers' interest in total dollar figures, rather than the commission's determination of how to spend each best. And the enabling legislation is never mentioned.

"We have long felt handicapped as administrators" under the practice, said NETV General Manager Jack McBride. He cited previously insufficient allowances for deserved merit increases, and no authority to deny across-the-board pay boosts for employes who didn't deserve them.

In denying that management tool, McBride said, it gives "quite a sense of security for a worker in any (state) agency" who knows he can work little or lot and still get more pay.

Sample also groused about the commission's appropriations bill expanded this year to include "little cubbyholes" dictating how public funds will be budgeted. In effect, he said, that means funding decisions reside with the legislative fiscal analyst and not the commission, "which makes its decisions in public."

Commissioner James Johnson of Kearney said more specified budgeting lines means "more danger" of NETV program control by the Legislature.

Sample said identical legislative dollar prescriptions in the past two to three years were "seriously damaging" NU, which finally succeeded now "in getting out from under that."

Commission Chairman Philip Heckman of Crete directed NETV staff study of Sample's suggestion that an informal consortium of state agencies with the same budgeting problems might register formal complaints. No action was taken on the comments by Sample, who said he was speaking only for himself.

The Legislature appropriated the NETV Commission $2.5 million in general fund state tax money. Commissioners will review that, still subject to gubernatorial action, for acceptance in June.

Rationale Offered For Large Package

New York (UPI) — A large package for a small item has an economic purpose, according to S. Bruce Smart Jr., president of Continental Can Inc.

In a recent food and drug packaging article, Smart said, "The answer is very simple. We have yet to teach people not to shoplift. The packaging is there to be pilfer-resistant."

New Beef Grade Standards . . .

Beef grading standards have been changed – as they have been every 7-10 years since grading was established in 1927 as a voluntary program by U.S.D.A. Uniform standards make buying and selling meat more equitable in determining relative values. The new standards were held up in various hearings and court proceedings for almost a year before finally being implemented on February 23 by U.S.D.A.

Presently the top three grades are: Prime – produced in limited amounts from grain-fed beef and primarily available to the restaurant trade and specialty shops. It's the most expensive. Choice – generally comes from grain-fed cattle and is available at the supermarket. It has enough fat marbling to be tender and flavorful. Good – is a leaner meat because of less grain feeding and sometimes is available at the supermarket under distinctive names such as Flavor Mark.

Under the new standards the amount of Prime beef will be slightly enlarged to include some previously graded Choice. However, the major change will result in the enlarged Choice class to include some from the "high side" of USDA Good. Good will be more restrictive but will still be available for those who want very lean but relatively tender beef.

You can rely on our Personally Selected USDA Choice label to bring you consistently high quality choice beef. The new standards make it more important than ever before to learn more about meat selection and preparation. Get to know our meat men, or drop me a note, we'll be glad to help.

Counselling Assistance

I have a problem. I drink too much. One night last week when I was drunk I decided to try to get some help. After looking in the phone book for some numbers I called the Lincoln Action Program's Alcohol Counselling Program number and was put on hold. Being put on hold didn't help my problem. Is this the correct number to call? Or is there some other places I can call for assistance when I need it?

— R.P.P., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Calling the Lincoln Action Program's alcohol counselling number was one of many alternatives you had. According to the director of the program, Willie Coleman, your call was not being ignored when you were put on hold. He explained that the program currently does not have enough personnel to man the line 24 hours a day. The number listed in the Lincoln directory connects the caller to an answering service after hours. A caller is temporarily placed on hold while the operator pages either Coleman or other workers in the alcohol program. The operator explains the situation to the program worker and the caller is either referred to the hospital, (if emergency medical services are necessary), or the call is transferred through to a program worker. Coleman said often people don't realize that while they are on hold the operator is paging someone in the program to assist the caller and often the people hang up or even leave the phone to go do other things. Coleman added that anyone who has had problems with the line should contact him at the Lincoln Action Program offices. Another alternative might be to call the Alcoholics Anonymous number also listed in the directory. A spokesman for the group said they would be willing to have someone assist any caller who is having a problem.

Adult Reading Program

Where can I find an adult reading program in Lincoln?

—R. E., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Curt Sederburg with Southeast Community College's Adult Guided Studies Program says the college has an adult reading program. The guided studies program includes reading, social studies, science and other basic academic areas. You can register at any time for day or evening classes. Tuition and books are free. To register contact the Lincoln campus of Southeast Community College. The number is listed in the Lincoln phone book.

Gun Certificate

Last fall I took a gun class held in the Armory on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln East Campus. It was sponsored by the State Games and Parks Commission. I passed all the tests yet I never received my certificate. I've made calls to the commission, but so far I can't seem to get my certificate. Can you help?

—Doug Thatcher, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A spokesman for the Games and Parks Commission said he talked to the man who taught your class and the registration certificate was mailed to you this week. You should have your card by Friday.

Extra Copies

A student here is doing a report on mental institutions and would like a copy of recent articles published on the Lincoln Regional Center. How do we go about getting a copy of the newspapers that articles were in?

—B. M. P., Spencer

ACTION LINE: To obtain a copy of any daily edition of the Journal or the Star newspaper send 15¢ per copy to the Journal-Star Circulation Dept. 926 P, Lincoln, Neb. 68508.

ACTION TIP: The food we eat and the medicine we take can affect our lives. To help consumers keep in touch with the Food and Drug Administration findings, the FDA publishes the "FDA Consumer" magazine. HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Individual sensitivity to soaps and detergents varies, reports the Nebraska Medical Association.

Actually, water alone, especially if hot, will remove significant quantities of skin oils.

The chief difference between soaps and detergents is that synthetic detergents do not deposit 'hard water scum' on the skin, bathtubs or fabrics. Synthetic detergents are made of petroleum derivatives.

Soaps are non-synthetic detergents made of animal and vegetable fats. Soaps combine with the minerals that make water hard, to form an unattractive and insoiluable scum.

Each individual should learn to read labels and be aware of the affect of individual soaps or detergents upon his or her skin.

To Your Good Health:

Shoulder Pains Not Symptoms Of Peripheral Neuritis

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please tell me about peripheral neuritis? I have had this pain under my right shoulder for some time now and I have been told it could be that. Would high blood pressure be a factor in peripheral neuritis? — Mrs. R.L.

Since you report localized symptoms (shoulder pain) I would doubt it is peripheral neuritis. This usually involves nerves of the extremities. The pain would be accompanied by a numbness, a tingling and a disturbance of both sensation and movement.

One would suspect, rather, some local disorder such as muscle inflammation or bursitis under the shoulder blade. High blood pressure would not be a contributing factor.

Nerves could be involved, however. Disturbances in the spine can cause pressure to be exerted on a nerve root. A focus of infection from such unlikely quarters as the teeth, the sinuses, the tonsils, even the rectum, can be related to the painful symptoms you report.

This condition generally responds well to treatment, which is aimed at the removal of the cause of the neural disturbance. Heat application in the affected area and aspirin are usually sufficient. An X-ray of the neck spine would reveal any arthritic problem there. If this is present then head traction should be considered. Your doctor can advise you on it. This treatment can be done at home.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me what is meant by the term "anginal syndrome." Is it something to be concerned about? — Mrs. D. K.

A syndrome is a combination of symptoms associated with a specific disease or condition. An anginal syndrome includes symptoms of chest pain provoked by exertion or the eating of a large meal. There is usually an element of coronary artery disease at the base of the trouble.

It may eventually lead to a coronary heart attack if not treated, or in many cases it can follow such an attack.

You should be concerned about this, sufficiently concerned to adjust your mode of living to avoid future attacks. This adjustment would include avoidance of excessive exertion and emotional and generally tense situations. You should also lose weight if you need to.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A doctor told me I have an enlarged gall bladder. In fact, I can feel it with my hand. It is not sore. What can be the cause of this? — Mrs. B.R.L.

It is unusual to be able to feel the gall bladder because of its location (under the liver). Your physician may have surmised from various sumptoms that you have an enlarged bladder. This would have to be verified by X-ray.

If yours is enlarged, it would be difficult to say which of several factors could be involved — stones, obstruction, etc. The thing to do now is to ask your doctor what you should do about it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am worried about my husband. He is 22. For about a year now he has been having sharp pains in his stomach. It happens mostly at night.

He goes to bed and the pain is gone the next morning. He gets these pains about once a month or two months. But when he gets them he wants to ball up in a knot. Can you suggest anything? — Mrs. L.W.

Stomach pain like your husband's can have several causes. He could have an ulcer or hiatal hernia. It is not uncommon for a peptic ulcer to occur at his age. Gallstones can behave this way, causing opisodic pain like this.

He should keep a record of his food and drink, or at least to recall what he has eaten or drunk the day before an attack.

It goes without saying that your husband should be examined throughly. Any pain that causes a person to double up into a knot demands attention, and the sooner the better. Be sure he gets this. An X-ray would determine the presence of an ulcer or any of the other possible factors I mentioned.

West German Brewers Fear For 460-Year-Old Purity Of Beer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Pure Teutonic beer — its pedigree backed by Europe's oldest brewing law — is threatened by adulterated brands from other Common Market countries, West German brewers complain.

Their European rivals want to "harmonize" brewing regulations and adopt a standard formula "chemical beer" that could be sold throughout the Common Market and escape West German import restrictions.

The West Germans regard this as a threat to their 460-year-old "beer purity" law, which limits brewing ingredients to barley, hops, yeast and water, and forbids other additives.

The purity law applies to all beer brewed in West Germany or imported for domestic sale. It has enabled German producers to maintain a 99 per cent domestic monopoly because few foreign beers meet the stringent standard. Most use carbonation and chemicals to improve color and taste and to shorten the brewing process.

West Germany is a tempting market for foreign breweries. The 61 million West Germans lead the world in annual beer consumption with 155 quarts per capita, and beer consumption is on the rise.

Czechoslovaks are second among the beer lovers with 147 quarts per person, followed by Belgians with 142, Irish with 137, Danes, 130, and British, 120, the West German Brewery Association reports. U.S. per capita consumption of beer is about 125 quarts, of which about one quart is imported beer, based on the 18-year and over population.

West Germany also brews the most beer in the Common Market — 2.46 billion gallons or about 40 per cent of the nine-nation output in 1975, and annually exports over 52 million gallons, mostly to the United States and Asia, the association said.

The European-wide process of concentration in the industry has also been felt in West Germany, where the number of breweries declined 21.5 per cent over the last 10 years to the current total of 1,600.

The German beer drinker has shown remarkable loyalty to his local brewery and only half a dozen brands have achieved nationwide popularity.

In Britain, by comparison, seven brewery companies account for 90 per cent of the beer sales, two control the Dutch and Danish markets and three groups are dominant in France.

Wilhelm IV of Bavaria, seeking a steady market for his barley and hops, proclaimed the beer purity law in 1516 in the beer-making center of south Germany. The basic statute was adopted throughout the country in 1871 when Bavaria made it a condition for joining the German Reich.

But in Bavaria, the law retains special provisions that have proven a hindrance for export-minded brewers. Unlike beer makers in the other West German states, the Bavarians are forbidden from using preservatives to keep beer from going flat during overseas transport.

Munich's Lowenbrau brewery, which has lost ground to Dutch export beers in the U.S. market, was recently turned down in its bid to add Vitamin C as a preservative and thereby improve its chances in foreign markets.

Lowenbrau has since announced it will open a subsidiary brewery in New York next year — the first such venture by a West German company — to improve its sales in America.

The key to German brewing is the so-called "malt process." Dried, germinated barley is mixed with aromatic hops and stirred into boiling water to produce maltose sugar. Yeast is then added, turning the maltose into alcohol end producing carbon dioxide to give the beer its foam.

New Faces Spur LHS 16-1 Win

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Dean Carstens, Dan Vontz and Rick Thomassen turned their varsity baseball debuts into a fireworks display Tuesday afternoon as Lincoln High blitzed Lincoln Pius X, 16-1, in a five-inning season opener for both teams at Pius' diamond.

Carstens clubbed a pair of two-run homers, Vontz unleashed a three-run shot in the first inning and Thomassen applied the finishing touch with a two-run blast in the fifth inning.

"All three of those kids are up from last year's reserve team," Lincoln High coach Bill Zuspan said after the power display.

"None of the homers surprised me," he added. "The kids call Vontz 'Little Babe Ruth' because he's 5-8, 185 pounds and can get wood on the ball."

Carstens is a much lankier 6-1, 150. "But he strokes the ball real well, too," according to Zuspan. "He hits with real authority all the time and always seems to get a piece of the ball."

Another Homer

Carstens stroked another two-run homer in almost identical fashion in the fifth inning off Thunderbolt reliever Bob Charland.

While the Links collected 12 hits in the onslaught, senior fireballer Charlie Metzger quieted 'Bolt bats, spinning a four-hitter while striking out nine and walking only one.

"I'm real pleased with Chuck," Zuspan said. "We've worked real hard on his control this spring and he had it all together out there today."

It was the only blemish in the Lincoln High opener. The Links played errorless ball in support of Metzger. Pius was guilty of seven miscues.

Pius coach Larry Culhane, insisting "we're a much better ball club than we showed today," received a setback Monday when Bob Navratil, a returning letterman pitcher, injured a leg in a parking lot accident.

Almost Scarey

Everything went so well for the Links in the opener, it was almost scarey, according to Zuspan.

"We've still got to show we can hit a fast ball," the Lincoln High coach said. "We should find out Wednesday. Omaha South always has someone who can throw hard."

"We really wanted this first game," Zuspan said. "This group has worked as hard as any group I've had. They don't have a lot of experience, but they like to compete."

Huskers Gain Split With Kansas State

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

The Nebraska baseball team proved that even if everything isn't going the way it was planned, you can win half of the time.

The Huskers split a doubleheader with Kansas State, winning the opener 5-2 and losing the nightcap 6-2 Tuesday afternoon at the NU Diamond.

In the first game, righthander Boyd Batenhorst didn't have his fast ball working to form and centerfielder Paul Haas wasn't swinging the way he usually does.

But the two Huskers got the job done with Batenhorst going the distance for his third win against no losses and giving up seven hits. Meanwhile Haas slammed a three-run home run in the sixth inning to break a 2-2 tie and boost NU's record to 8-12.

Six Husker errors and a strong pitching performance by Wildcat Craig Tuttle, now 5-0, eliminated Nebraska's hope of a sweep over the powerful Wildcats, now 18-6.

"K-State is a fastball-hitting team and I couldn't get my fastball working today. So I stuck with the curve and used my knuckleball sparingly," Batenhorst said.

Batenhorst, now 4-0 and pitching in his first starting assignment of the year, was staked to a one run lead in the first inning when designated hitter Bobby Thomas singled and scored on a double play after gaining second on an error.

But K-State jumped on Batenhorst for two runs on three singles and a walk in the top of the second inning. No Wildcats got past second base until the sixth inning as Batenhorst kept the K-State batters guessing, switching on almost every pitch from a slider to curve to knuckleball.

Then in the bottom of the sixth, McManaman led off the inning with a double followed by a Winum single. Winum was forced at second on a ground ball hit by Dick Anderson, moving McManaman to third.

"It wasn't a good swing," Haas said of his home run. "I'm not a long ball hitter and I figured it would be a routine fly ball. But I guess the wind carried it a bit."

Shortstop Miller halted a late scoring threat by the Wildcats in the top of the seventh inning when he fielded a line drive by Kevin Bacon stepped on second base for the force out and threw a perfect strike to first baseman Larry Winum to get Bacon.

The Huskers also proved to be very efficient with the baserunners allowed by the Wildcats stranding only four runners in the first game.

In the second game, Thomas led off with a single and scored on an error and a double play to tie the game at 1-1.

But Tuttle took command of the game, and with the exception of a triple by Haas, he held the Huskers hitless until the fifth inning.

A two-run home run by Wildcat first baseman Steve Anson, who went five for eight for the day, in the third inning gave K-State all the runs they needed for the win.

The Wildcats added a run in the fourth on three errors, and one hit, and two more runs in the seventh on one hit and an error.

NU tallied in the sixth when Randy Benish, who walked and gained second on a single by Miller, scored on a ground ball by Gary Healey, but that was all, as Tuttle struck out the side in the seventh inning.

"I thought we played pretty well overall," said NU coach Tony Sharpe, whose team is now 2-3 in Big Eight competition. "That first game was one of our better games but I don't know why we got all the errors in the second one."

"We had the opportunities to score when we had the bases loaded and one out in the fourth and when Haas led off with a triple and couldn't score," Sharpe said.

"We need to fill some gaps defensively and with the return of Jeff King, who was injured at Kansas last weekend, we'll be more solid," Sharpe said.

The Huskers will host Wayne State in a doubleheader Wednesday afternoon at 2 p.m. at the NU Diamond. Kirk Eymann (1-1) and Dave Buehrer (1-3) are expected to start for the Huskers. The only common opponent the two teams have played is K-State, which swept a four-game series with Wayne earlier this season.

Back In Cleveland

Browns Regain Warfield

The preseason football game between the Baltimore Colts and Cleveland Browns got an early boost Tuesday when the Browns regained superstar wide receiver Paul Warfield. There also appeared to be a chance they could sign bruising fullback Larry Csonka.

The game, which will open the National Football League's exhibition season, will be played July 31 in NU's Memorial Stadium.

Paul Warfield
Home Again

Warfield began his pro career at Cleveland but was traded to the Miami Dolphins in 1970 so the Browns could use Miami's No. 1 selection in the college draft. That pick was quarterback Mike Phipps of Purdue, still with the club.

The former Ohio State running back, a 1964 Buckeye graduate, was converted to wide receiver and almost immediately began setting records. He caught 50 passes for 920 yards and 10 touchdowns in his rookie season. In 1968, he set a team record with 1,067 yards on 50 receptions for 12 touchdowns.

In his last year at Cleveland, 1969, he was second in receptions with 42 catches for 886 yards and 10 touchdowns. His 82-yard TD pass reception that year ranked as one of the longest in Browns' history.

He still holds the Browns' club record with a lifetime average gain of 20.2 yards per catch. His acquisition changes the Browns' draft plans. Instead of going for a deep receiving threat in the lottery Thursday, Cleveland, owner Art Modell said the top priority will be a running back.

Browns' Attack Balanced

Warfield, who was knocked out of football when the World Football League folded, said he watched the Browns last season and observed that they have a very balanced attack.

Warfield, who has worked with Phipps during the past two off-seasons, said, "I'm very impressed — his accuracy is uncanny."

He thinks Phipps has matured as a quarterback. "I saw him do things few other quarterbacks can do on the field," Warfield said. Phipps failure until last year to establish himself as the leader the Browns needed caused criticism of Warfield's trade. Now, they're both on the same team and perhaps Warfield now can help Phipps continue to improve.

Warfield, Csonka and running back Jim Kiick caused a national stir when they left the Dolphins and signed a $3.5 million package deal to play for Memphis in the WFL. The Browns still are trying to get Csonka to sign, but say they aren't interested in Kiick.

"I understand Csonka has decided he won't sign before the draft," Modell said Tuesday. "For all intents and purposes we have withdrawn our offer and will go about our business although we may be in touch after the draft. Our interest is still there, but it is not as intense as if he would sign before the draft."

If Csonka would sign, the Browns undoubtedly would again switch priorities for the draft. Their first-round choice comes up after Tampa, Seattle, New Orleans, San Diego, New England and the New York Jets have had a pick.

Islanders Open With Victory

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Lorne Henning and Bill MacMillan scored their first Stanley Cup playoff goals Tuesday night and goaltender Glenn Resch earned his first victory ever against Vancouver as the New York Islanders whipped the Cancucks 5-3 in the first game of their preliminary round series.

The second game of the best-of-three mathcup will be played Thursday night at Vancouver, with the third — if necessary — here Saturday afternoon.

The Islanders, who hadn't beaten the Canucks since March 8, 1975, captured only their third home win against Vancouver in four years.

Henning's goal came only 10 seconds into the second period and gave the Islanders, shy one man, a 3-2 lead. Taking the puck from Ed Westfall at the top of the left faceoff circle, Henning lofted it past Vancouver goalie Curt Ridley for his fifth shorthanded goal of the season.

At 5:36 of the same period, MacMillan, filling Westfall's place after the Islander captain had killed off a penalty, made the score 4-2 when he backhanded the puck past Ridley, who was appearing in his first playoff contest. The loss was Ridley's first this year and only his second ever in 12 career National Hockey League games.

In three games this year and one last season Resch had never beaten the Canucks. The 27-year old rookie netminder appeared shaky in the first period, when Vancouver scored its first two goals on a power play by Dennis Ververgaert and John Gould's shorthanded tally.

Resch proved magificent, however, in the crucial second period when the Islanders scored three times. He made six outstanding saves, including four during the Islanders' only penalty of the period —three on Rick Blight and the other on Mike Walton.

East Rebounds For Triumph

Southeast Stopped, 7-1

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

A practice and a meeting.

That's all Lincoln East baseball coach Rudy Stoehr had time for to prepare his Spartans for intra-city rival Southeast after Papillion handed East a 3-0 loss Saturday.

The results of the practice and meeting were obviously pleasing to Stoehr as the Spartans shook off the effects of the season-opening loss at their home field and hammered Southeast 7-1 at Sherman Field Tuesday.

Fans attending the game were treated to an extra bit of excitment that kept them on their toes throughout the game.

The backstop screen that protects the bleachers from the field was in the process of being replaced, leaving spectators with just their reflexes to rely on.

The game itself kept the fans occupied from the start as Southeast's starting pitcher Rush Reynolds walked the first two batters he faced, Tim Mason and Brent Seaman.

Spartan pitcher Mark Steinberger held the Knights scoreless through three innings while East was able to pick up a second run in the second inning when Jay Rodenburg scored on an error after walking.

Steinberger found himself a in a little trouble in the bottom of the fourth and gave way to Dennis Mertens after giving up the lone Southeast run on four hits.

Mertens handcuffed the Knights without a hit for the duration while his supporting cast gave him five runs to work with, crediting the senior with the save of Steinberger's win.

Four of East's five finishing runs came in the top of the fifth after Reynolds had struck out Mason and forced Seaman to ground out.

Yowell singled to center, Tom Vergith walked and Brian Henzel reached base on an error. Then Brian Moreland doubled to center, scoring Yowell and Vergith and Watters singled to center scoring Hansel and Moreland to seal the win.

"That's a pretty good spread this early in the season," Stoehr said. "It's a great city win for us.

"One meeting and one practice was what it took," he added. "I know these kids are good ballplayers, so I told them after that Papillion game.

"I know what these kids can do. I ought to. I pitch 4,000 pitches to them in batting practice," Stoehr said. "They're as good as any team in the state. Maybe it just takes playing at a place like this to get them fired up.

"It's no fun to play out at East," Stoehr joked. "Heck, we practice there all the time. They like to play other places."

The batting of Yowell, Moreland and Watters was a key to East's success as the trio accounted for all six East hits after Papillion had held the Spartans to three hits in the shutout.

"The only thing about Sam (Yowell) that surprised me was that he didn't hit one out," Stoehr said. "And he almost did. And Watters played real well in his first start. Moreland hit well too."

Stoehr was also pleased with the early season pitching of junior Steinberger and Mertens.

The win evened East's season mark at 1-1 while the loss was the first game of the season for Charlie Gordon's Knights.

Lincoln Could Convert Refuse To Fuel—Study

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Tons of raw refuse could be converted into fuel and used by the Lincoln Electric System or the Nebraska Public Power District, a consultant said Tuesday.

Plans to build a steam generating plant to burn the shredded fuel are also detailed in a report by the Ralph M. Parsons Co. of Pasadena, Calif.

The firm evaluated the potential for recovering resources from solid waste and converting the material to some form of energy. The report was requested by the City Council and County Board.

If LES builds a coal-fired plant, project director Bob Mitchell said Lincoln should burn its garbage there.

However, if LES axes those plans, the garbage should be hauled to NPPD's Hallam Station at Sheldon. NPPD officials haven't said whether they're interested in taking Lincoln's garbage.

Mitchell said the firm's third recommendation is the construction of a steam generating plant burning shredded fuel.

Steam Cheaper

Should a steam plant be built, the steam bill will be cheaper than what downtown customers are paying now. The new system would cost about $5 per 1,000 pounds of steam. LES charged $7.61 last year and will charge an estimated $17 next year at the K St. power plant.

The K St. plant will be phased out in 1977. It was LES's plans to cut off the steam that prompted city officials to wonder whether garbage could be converted into steam.

The Parson firm recommended building a new steam generating plant between 2nd and 3rd Sts. from M to K Sts.

Similarly, the consultants recommended the best place to build LES's proposed 400 megawatt plant is near the proposed Northeast wastewater treatment plant, at 70th and Salt Creek.

Effluent Use Possible

Water from the effluent at the sewage treatment plant could be used for cooling at the power plant. Additional treatment of the effluent would be required and a study is underway to determine how costly that would be.

The city can sell ferrous metals and aluminum recovered from the garbage, Mitchell said.

The best market for ferrous metals is the Northwestern Metal Co. in Lincoln which has indicated it will buy the metals for $35 a ton.

Sale Could Make Millions

Over a 20-year period, Mitchell said the city could take in $16.9 million from the sale of ferrous metals, aluminum and steam.

Mitchell said the city could finance a plant either with general obligation bonds, which require voter approval, or with revenue bonds, which do not.

The consultants estimated it would cost $11.9 million to build a supplementary fuel processing plant. A steam generation plant would be added onto the processing plant. Cost to construct a steam generating plant would be $35.5 million.

Decision Urged

Mitchell urged local officials to decide what kind of garbage burning plant they want — the sooner the better.

Since it takes about three years to plan and build a plant, Mitchell recommended the city begin developing design criteria this July. The plant could then be opened in July, 1979.

Shotgun Brakes 3 Runaway Girls

Grand Island (UPI) — Three runaway teen-age girls involved in a high-speed chase in a stolen car on the wrong lane of Interstate 80 were taken into custody Tuesday, the State Patrol said.

Also taken into custody were a man and a fourth runaway girl. All were being held at the Hall County Jail. None was identified.

Hall County Attorney Sam Grimminger said the driver of the car was wanted by authorities in her home town. Local charges against her could include juvenile charges or possession of a stolen vehicle, Grimminger said.

The three other girls might be released in their parents' custody, he said. Grimminger said authorities were checking if the man was wanted on criminal charges in Douglas County.

The State Patrol said one of the girls and the man, who apparently had hitched a ride with the four girls, told the manager of a restaurant on an I-80 stop near the Giltner interchange the car was stolen. They stayed at the restaurant and the other girls went on.

He was joined by about 12 others, including Shelton police and Hall County deputies.

The car, zipping along at speeds of 75 to 80 miles an hour, was pursued for 12 to 15 miles — five of those miles on the eastbound lane. Officers said 50 to 60 eastbound vehicles had to pull off the highway to avoid collisions.

The chase ended when Shelton Police Chief George Svoboda used a shotgun to blow out two tires of the car carrying the three girls.

Svoboda and other officers had set up a roadblock in the eastbound lane, about four miles west of the Wood River interchange. The girl's car came to a stop in the median and was struck in the rear by Robertson's car.

Tornado Remembrance

A sculpture containing 11,000 pounds of twisted steel will be dedicated May 6, the anniversary of Omaha's 1975 tornado. The 22-foot sculpture by Sidney Buchanan of Omaha will be placed on the west side of Pipal Park. Buchanan said some people may see a tornado in it but the work "has no particular message." He said he will receive no pay for the sculpture. Materials were donated.

No Dog-Goned Luck For Malone Campaign

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

Malone area residents are looking for some bite to their campaign to end barking, straying and biting dogs in the community.

But they were apparently barking up the wrong tree when they presented a list of seven demands to Mary Rogge, chairperson of the Humane Society, during a public meeting Tuesday night. Ms. Rogge and society board member Charlie Wilcox couldn't address themselves directly to the demands without consulting their policy review committee, according to Wilcox.

So, the Malone people heard responses of "Impossible, I'm not familiar with the procedure, makes sense to me and I can't promise," from Ms. Rogge to demands ranging from an animal control officer on patrol at least three times a week to a follow-up on dog bite cases.

Ms. Rogge gave the "no promises" response to the officer patrol demand and one asking that an officer respond in 10 minutes to the calls of residents. She said that current manpower, with only two men on the street during the mornings two or three days a week, won't allow it.

The "makes sense" came on a request that Humane Society personnel identify themselves when they take a complainant's call so the caller has something to fall back on in case of lack of response.

Ms. Rogge admitted she wasn't familiar with the procedure involving dog bite cases and said she would study that matter.

The "impossible" came from Wilcox and caused a brief plea for citizen support in helping the Humane Society solve the problem of enforcement. He explained that only the city police have power to issue citations for violation of dog ordinances and the society would like to have one officer from the police who would respond to the animal problems full time.

"We're not trying to make excuses," Wilcox said, "we need authority, tools and manpower, not just money."

Wilcox also asked for support in asking the City Council for an increase in pound fees from the current $6, $8 and $10 to $10, $15 and $25. He also said neutered animals should be charged the same as others for city tags.

Wilcox emphasized the job of the Humane Society is to aid and protect all animals. Because of this, he added, members of the city council and the police department should meet with the group to make any definite decisions.

Members of the group decided to call another meeting for that purpose in the near future.

Seward — Nebraska Wesleyan scored 12 runs in the sixth inning Tuesday to defeat Concordia 12-2 and sweep the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference doubleheader.

NWU's nightcap victory, coupled with a 6-3 first-game triumph, extended the Plainsmen's NIAC winning streak to 25 games. Wesleyan upped its conference record to 6-0 while evening its overall ledger at 8-8 with its seventh straight success.

Larry Abel silenced Concordia's batters for six innings in the nightcap by allowing only two runs on two hits.

NWU, scoreless for five frames, bounced back for 12 scores to end the game with the 10-run rule.

Bruce Reed started the Plainsmen rally with a double and scored on a single by Bob Blake. Mike Reta punched a two-run home run to put Wesleyan ahead 3-2.

Reed blasted his second extra-base hit of the inning by tripling in all three runners to give NWU a 6-2 lead. Blake followed with a run-scoring single.

In the first game, Wesleyan jumped to a 4-0 lead in the first inning and held on for the win.

Doug Votava opened the ballgame with a single and scored on brother Scott Votava's fifth home run in five ballgames.

Doug Neill drove in the inning's final run when he walked with the bases loaded after Stallworth and Jim Hamersky had singled.

Lessman homered for Wesleyan in the fourth inning and Mark Weber and Mark Greatens had solo blasts for Concordia.

New Racing Secretary Crockett Leaving Gates

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Grand Island — For someone who has spent so much time around starting gates at horse races, Richard Crockett may be "finished" at age 28.

The reason? He's going to serve as clerk of scales at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha, then become outstate racing secretary at Columbus, and Atokad Park. Next year, he'll serve as Lincoln's racing secretary.

"This (Fonner Park) could be the last meet I'll ever start," Crockett said between races here at Fonner Park. "Since I've been around the starting gate all my life, I'll probably miss it. But being racing secretary is a big challenge.

"It's not an easy job, but I hope it will open a lot of things for me," he added. "As a starter, you get sterotyped into one thing and it's hard to break."

Crockett, who will be the fourth outstate racing secretary in six years, served the last two years as assistant racing secretary at Lincoln, Columbus and Atokad. He also worked as the starter.

His father, Sonny Crockett, worked as a starter for 30 years in Nebraska and the Southern Illinois circuit. The elder Crockett served as general manager at last summer's quarterhorse races at Broken Bow.

Appropriately, his father will succeed him as starter on the outstate circuit.

"He's taught me everything I know about the starting gate," said Crockett, who has been a Nebraska starter since 1972.

That doesn't mean Crockett is not looking forward to his new job — perhaps trailing only the stewards' as far as importance at any race track.

"I enjoy being with people," he said. "I've met a lot of trainers around the gate and I'm sure it'll help me as racing secretary. I've always been able to get along with people when I've been in a position of authority.

"Both Bob (Pollock, racing secretary the past two years on the outstate circuit) and Dean (Williams, Pollock's predecessor) have helped me a lot," he said. They've both said they'll help me with whatever I need."

No Easy Job

Crockett could very well be the youngest racing secretary in the country. He quickly notes, however, that "age really doesn't have anything to do with it — it's ability that matters."

Besides starting the races in the afternoon, Crockett is responsible for the schooling sessions in the morning and for approving all horses from the gate. Without Crockett's approval, no horse is allowed to start a race at Fonner Park.

The biggest problem is getting unraced 2-year-olds accustomed to standing in the starting gate and then racing from it.

"You let them stand in there a while to get over their nervousness," he said. "Then you hope they walk out the front door right. Very few of them give me trouble. But some of them try to flip and can't stand right in the gate.

Richard Crockett

"A lot of trainers try to ignore the problem," he said. "Instead of getting after the problem, they've always got alibis."

"I'm an avid Big Red fan, although I don't get to see many games since Atokad runs so late (through mid-November)," he said. "I went to Oklahoma a few years and Oklahoma won, 27-0. That's the only Nebraska game I've seen."

A nephew, Dan Pensick, has earned a scholarship to Nebraska and will participate in freshman football as a Husker this fall. Pensick earned honorable mention laurels on last fall's Sunday Journal and Star Super State football team.

"I've liked everything I've ever done around the race tracks. I've always tried to do my best. To be worth anything you've got to like it wholeheartedly," he noted.

Reds, Phillies Appear To Be Best

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

How do you improve the best team on baseball?

The Cincinnati Reds, champions of Bowie Kuhn's world in 1975, found a way, adding bench strength to the awesome starting lineup that produced the city's first championship in 35 years.

Without disturbing the basic starting lineup that destroyed the West Division and then zoomed to the National League and World Series championships last year, the Reds picked up veterans Bob Bailey from Montreal and Mike Lum from Atlanta. Both should be useful additions to the bench of a team that hardly needed help in its starting lineup.

The Big Red Machine has the same old motor composed of MVP Joe Morgan, slugger Johnny Bench, RBI specialist Tony Perez and Mr. Everything, Pete Rose.

Put it all together and it spells pennant, perhaps not by the 20-game margin the Reds had last year, but by enough.

Look for the improving San Francisco Giants to move up the NL West ladder to the runnerup slot behind the Reds.

The Giants own some of the National League's top young players, including third baseman Ken Reitz, acquired from St. Louis, first baseman Willie Montanez, outfielders Von Joshua, Bobby Murcer and Gary Matthews, and pitchers John D'Acquisto, Ed Halicki and John Montefusco, the NL Rookie of the Year.

Los Angeles added outfielder Dusty Baker from Atlanta over the winter but the price may have been too high. The Dodgers surrendered outfielders Jim Wynn and Tom Paciorek and infielders Lee Lacy, Jerry Royster in the deal. That stripped Los Angeles of much of its depth and the loss of 19-game winner Andy Messersmith will hurt, too.

Still, the Dodgers have some solid infield talent in Steve Garvey, Dave Lopes, Bill Russell and Ron Cey and a quality top starting pitcher in Don Sutton.

The Baker-Wynn trade and the acquisition of outfielder Ken Henderson from the Chicago White Sox and infielder Darrel Chaney from Cincinnati gives Atlanta a new look.

San Diego keeps collecting first-round free-agent draft choices and sooner or later, that kind of talent is going to pay off.

During the winter, the club picked up third baseman Doug Rader from Houston and and outfielder Willie Davis from St. Louis. After Randy Jones, however, the San Diego pitching is suspect.

Houston must begin a rebuilding program around talented players like Greg Gross, Cesar Cedeno and Bob Watson. There is, however, plenty of rebuilding to do.

In the year of the nation's bicentennial, much of the celebration has been centered in Philadelphia. Now the Phillies are ready to join in with a serious run at the East Division pennant.

The addition of pitchers Ron Reed and Jim Kaat over the winter seems to have solidified the staff that includes veterans Steve Carlton and Jim Lonborg and youngsters Tom Underwood and Larry Christenson.

The lineup has some impressive bats like Greg Luzinski, Mike Schmidt, Larry Bowa, Dave Cash and Garry Maddox. If Dick Allen can regain the long-ball touch that once made him baseball's highest-paid player, the flag could fly in Philadelphia.

Pittsburgh has won the division five of the last seven years, an accomplishment that wouldn't have been possible if they had been living in the West instead of the East. The Pirates could pull off another division title this year with strengthened pitching from the addition of Doc Medich and a full season from young John Candelaria.

St. Louis is counting on two youngsters in the infield, first baseman Keith Hernandez and third baseman Hector Cruz.

The New York Mets surrendered one of their best bats when they swapped Rusty Staub to Detroit for pitcher Mickey Lolich. Now the Mets have the National League's best four-man pitching rotation—Tom Seaver, Jon Matlack, Jerry Koosman, and Lolich. But who's going to get them any runs?

Chicago has the defending NL batting champ in Bill Madlock but, except for him and outfielders Rick Monday and Jose Cardenal, there isn't much in the Cubs' lineup to recommend them.

The Picks:

East: Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, New York, Chicago, Montreal.

Kentucky Awaits Syndication

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky Colonels' majority owner Ellie Brown said Tuesday that the American Basketball Association club would be syndicated among numerous shareholders.

Mrs. Brown, wife of ABA president John Y. Brown, said that Jefferson County Atty. J. Bruce Miller had agreed to head a search for shareholders.

Miller explained that the syndication calls for stockholders to invest $500,000 immediately and assume a $1-million debt over the next five years. The debt represents a partial repayment to the Browns of the financial deficits they have incurred while running the club.

"I will be a spearhead of a group of people in Louisville and Kentucky to keep the franchise here," Miller said. "To be successful in pro sports in a town this size requires community ownership."

Miller said that he did not think his political office or the fact that he is an agent for several pro athletes represents a conflict of interest. "I see no conflict in my being the Jefferson County attorney and I see no conflict with representing professional athletes because I have no official capacity with this basketball team."

Reggie's Mom Likes Trade

BALTIMORE (AP) — The lady is uneasy. She fingers her gold pinkie ring and the yellow "A's" jumps out from the green stone. When you ask her about it, her uneasiness is whisked away by a smile.

Clara Jackson is proud because all over Baltimore visions of her son, Reggie Jackson, clobbering baseballs out of Memorial Stadium are flashing through the minds of Oriole fans.

And Mrs. Jackson thinks it's great that her youngest son may soon be wearing the orange, black and white of the Baltimore Orioles, who obtained him in a trade with the Oakland A's last Friday.

"I think it's fantastic," said Mrs. Jackson during an interview at the Veterans Administration where she is a benefits counselor.

"I've been elated since Friday when I heard the news on television." she added.

Mrs. Jackson assumes Reggie is coming to Baltimore, though she hasn't talked to him for about 10 days. He didn't mention the possibility of being traded to Baltimore at the time, but she thinks Reg would be very happy about playing here.

Wife Mourns Boxer's Death

SYDNEY (UPI) — Carol Wilburn is pregnant, but her husband will not be at her bedside when she gives birth to her baby. Chuck Wilburn died Monday night from brain injuries he suffered in a fight last Thursday.

Chuck Wilburn of Cleveland, Ohio, died shortly after 10.00 p.m. EDT Monday. He never regained consiousness after being stopped in the 10th and final round of a junior welterweight fight with Australian champion Hector Thompson.

"Naturally, if it's a boy, his name will be Charles, and he'll be strong and good and gentle, just like his father," said a distraught Carol Wilburn, emotion ringing in her voice. Her mother-in-law, Missouri Wilburn, squeezed her hand as she spoke.

Wilburn underwent a four-hour emergency operation after collapsing in his corner last Thursday, but he never regained consciousness.

Thompson was distraught on learning the news. It was the second time in his career that a boxer had died after fighting him.

"I have failed twice. I don't go out to kill people. I just go out to win like a sportsman," said Thompson.

In 1970, Roko Snapja died from brain injuries suffered in a bout with Thompson at Newcastle, 100 miles north of Sydney

Fullback Asks 5-Year Pact

Miami Owner Assails Csonka

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins owner Joe Robbie went public Tuesday with his gripes about a five-year contract being sought from his National Football League team by Larry Csonka, claiming the erstwhile Dolphin fullback wants a financial package totaling more than $2 million.

Robbie said the Dolphins have put off meeting with Csonka and his agent but "remain open to future negotiations based upon our salary structure."

Talking about a proposed pact submitted by Csonka's agent, Ed Keating, Robbie said, "We have too much respect for our players and our fans to agree. . . or to the approach it represents."

"Coach (Don) Shula and I would like to sign Larry to return to Miami if we can sign him at a salary consisent with the salary structure of the Miami Dolphins, which is the best in professional football," Robbie said. "But Mr. Keating's proposal does not provide the basis for constructive negotiations."

Among Csonka's proposals listed by Robbie were:

—A salary of $250,000 a year.

—A $50,000 cash bonus for signing.

—An annual cash bonus of $15,000.

—A 20-year loan of $125,000 at minimum legal interest.

—Separate compensation and an expense account for public relations service during his playing years.

—Separate compensation to perform certain scouting and coaching consultant activities for a period of 10 years after retirement plus a minimum expense allowance of $500 per month or more.

—Eight first-class, roundtrip airline tickets during each playing season between Cleveland-Pittsburgh and Miami which may be used by anyone designated by Csonka, plus one roundtrip ticket each year for members of Csonka's family.

—Additional fringe benefits, including game tickets, transportation and expenses.

Csonka's bruising brand of running helped lead the Dolphins to three consecutive Super Bowl appearances in 1973-75. Last season he jumped to the now-defunct World Football League with teammates Paul Warfield and Jim Kick.

Counselling Assistance

I have a problem. I drink too much. One night last week when I was drunk I decided to try to get some help. After looking in the phone book for some numbers I called the Lincoln Action Program's Alcohol Counselling Program number and was put on hold. Being put on hold didn't help my problem. Is this the correct number to call? Or is there some other places I can call for assistance when I need it?

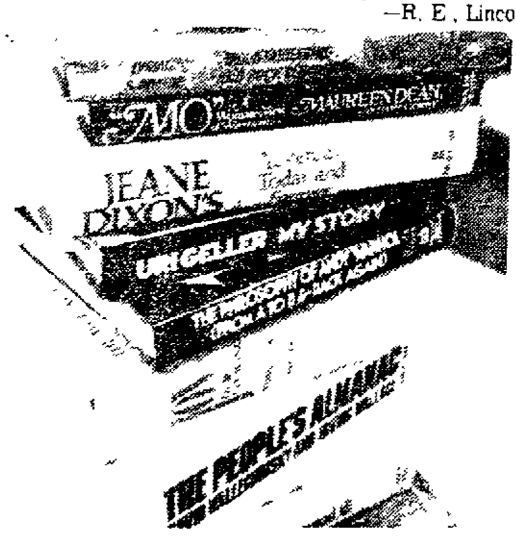
— R.P.P., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Calling the Lincoln Action Program's alcohol counselling number was one of many alternatives you had. According to the director of the program, Willie Coleman, your call was not being ignored when you were put on hold. He explained that the program currently does not have enough personnel to man the line 24 hours a day. The number listed in the Lincoln directory connects the caller to an answering service after hours. A caller is temporarily placed on hold while the operator pages either Coleman or other workers in the alcohol program. The operator explains the situation to the program worker and the caller is either referred to the hospital, (if emergency medical services are necessary), or the call is transferred through to a program worker. Coleman said often people don't realize that while they are on hold the operator is paging someone in the program to assist the caller and often the people hang up or even leave the phone to go do other things. Coleman added that anyone who has had problems with the line should contact him at the Lincoln Action Program offices. Another alternative might be to call the Alcoholics Anonymous number also listed in the directory. A spokesman for the group said they would be willing to have someone assist any caller who is having a problem.

Adult Reading Program

Where can I find an adult reading program in Lincoln?

—R. E., Lincoln



ACTION LINE: Curt Sederburg with Southeast Community College's Adult Guided Studies Program says the college has an adult reading program. The guided studies program includes reading, social studies, science and other basic academic areas. You can register at any time for day or evening classes. Tuition and books are free. To register contact the Lincoln campus of Southeast Community College. The number is listed in the Lincoln phone book.

Gun Certificate

Last fall I took a gun class held in the Armory on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln East Campus. It was sponsored by the State Games and Parks Commission. I passed all the tests yet I never received my certificate. I've made calls to the commission, but so far I can't seem to get my certificate. Can you help?

—Doug Thatcher, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A spokesman for the Games and Parks Commission said he talked to the man who taught your class and the registration certificate was mailed to you this week. You should have your card by Friday.

Extra Copies

A student here is doing a report on mental institutions and would like a copy of recent articles published on the Lincoln Regional Center. How do we go about getting a copy of the newspapers that articles were in?

—B. M. P., Spencer

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Individual sensitivity to soaps and detergents varies, reports the Nebraska Medical Association.

Actually, water alone, especially if hot, will remove significant quantities of skin oils.

The chief difference between soaps and detergents is that synthetic detergents do not deposit hard water scum on the skin, bathtubs or fabrics. Synthetic detergents are made of petroleum derivatives.

Soaps are non-synthetic detergents made of animal and vegetable fats. Soaps combine with the minerals that make water hard to form an unattractive and insoluable scum.

Each individual should learn to read labels and be aware of the affect of individual soaps or detergents upon his or her skin.

To Your Good Health:

Shoulder Pains Not Symptoms Of Peripheral Neuritis

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please tell me about peripheral neuritis? I have had this pain under my right shoulder for some time now and I have been told it could be that. Would high blood pressure be a factor in peripheral neuritis? — Mrs. R.L.

Since you report localized symptoms (shoulder pain) I would doubt it is peripheral neuritis. This usually involves nerves of the extremities. The pain would be accompanied by a numbness, a tingling and a disturbance of both sensation and movement.

One would suspect, rather, some local disorder such as muscle inflammation or bursitis under the shoulder blade. High blood pressure would not be a contributing factor.

Nerves could be involved, however. Disturbances in the spine can cause pressure to be exerted on a nerve root. A focus of infection from such unlikely quarters as the teeth, the sinuses, the tonsils, even the rectum, can be related to the painful symptoms you report.

This condition generally responds well to treatment, which is aimed at the removal of the cause of the neural disturbance. Heat application in the affected area and aspirin are usually sufficient. An X-ray of the neck spine would reveal any arthritic problem there. If this is present then head traction should be considered. Your doctor can advise you on it. This treatment can be done at home.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me what is meant by the term "anginal syndrome." Is it something to be concerned about? — Mrs. D. K.

A syndrome is a combination of symptoms associated with a specific disease or condition. An anginal syndrome includes symptoms of chest pain provoked by exertion or the eating of a large meal. There is usually an element of coronary artery disease at the base of the trouble.

It may eventually lead to a coronary heart attack if not treated, or in many cases it can follow such an attack.

You should be concerned about this, sufficiently concerned to adjust your mode of living to avoid future attacks. This adjustment would include avoidance of excessive exertion and emotional and generally tense situations. You should also lose weight if you need to.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A doctor told me I have an enlarged gall bladder. In fact, I can feel it with my hand. It is not sore. What can be the cause of this? — Mrs. B.R.L.

It is unusual to be able to feel the gall bladder because of its location (under the liver). Your physician may have surmised from various sumptoms that you have an enlarged bladder. This would have to be verified by X-ray.

If yours is enlarged, it would be difficult to say which of several factors could be involved — stones, obstruction, etc. The thing to do now is to ask your doctor what you should do about it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am worried about my husband. He is 22. For about a year now he has been having sharp pains in his stomach. It happens mostly at night.

He goes to bed and the pain is gone the next morning. He gets these pains about once a month or two months. But when he gets them he wants to ball up in a knot. Can you suggest anything? — Mrs. L.W.

Stomach pain like your husband's can have several causes. He could have an ulcer or hiatal hernia. It is not uncommon for a peptic ulcer to occur at his age. Gallstones can behave this way, causing episodic pain like this.

He should keep a record of his food and drink, or at least to recall what he has eaten or drunk the day before an attack.

It goes without saying that your husband should be examined throughly. Any pain that causes a person to double up into a knot demands attention, and the sooner the better. Be sure he gets this. An X-ray would determine the presence of an ulcer or any of the other possible factors I mentioned.

West German Brewers Fear For 460-Year-Old Purity Of Beer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Pure Teutonic beer — its pedigree backed by Europe's oldest brewing law — is threatened by adulterated brands from other Common Market countries, West German brewers complain.

Their European rivals want to "harmonize" brewing regulations and adopt a standard formula "chemical beer" that could be sold throughout the Common Market and escape West German import restrictions.

The West Germans regard this as a threat to their 460-year-old "beer purity" law, which limits brewing ingredients to barley, hops, yeast and water, and forbids other additives.

The purity law applies to all beer brewed in West Germany or imported for domestic sale. It has enabled German producers to maintain a 99 per cent domestic monopoly because few foreign beers meet the stringent standard. Most use carbonation and chemicals to improve color and taste and to shorten the brewing process.

West Germany is a tempting market for foreign breweries. The 61 million West Germans lead the world in annual beer consumption with 155 quarts per capita, and beer consumption is on the rise.

Czechoslovaks are second among the beer lovers with 147 quarts per person, followed by Belgians with 142, Irish with 137, Danes, 130, and British, 120, the West German Brewery Association reports. U.S. per capita consumption of beer is about 125 quarts, of which about one quart is imported beer, based on the 18-year and over population.

West Germany also brews the most beer in the Common Market — 2.46 billion gallons or about 40 per cent of the nine-nation output in 1975, and annually exports over 52 million gallons, mostly to the United States and Asia, the association said.

The European-wide process of concentration in the industry has also been felt in West Germany, where the number of breweries declined 21.5 per cent over the last 10 years to the current total of 1,600.

The German beer drinker has shown remarkable loyalty to his local brewery and only half a dozen brands have achieved nationwide popularity.

In Britain, by comparison, seven brewery companies account for 90 per cent of the beer sales, two control the Dutch and Danish markets and three groups are dominant in France.

Wilhelm IV of Bavaria, seeking a steady market for his barley and hops, proclaimed the beer purity law in 1516 in the beer-making center of south Germany. The basic statute was adopted throughout the country in 1871 when Bavaria made it a condition for joining the German Reich.

But in Bavaria, the law retains special provisions that have proven a hindrance for export-minded brewers. Unlike beer makers in the other West German states, the Bavarians are forbidden from using preservatives to keep beer from going flat during overseas transport.

Munich's Lowenbrau brewery, which has lost ground to Dutch export beers in the U.S. market, was recently turned down in its bid to add Vitamin C as a preservative and thereby improve its chances in foreign markets.

Lowenbrau has since announced it will open a subsidiary brewery in New York next year — the first such venture by a West German company — to improve its sales in America.

The key to German brewing is the so-called "malt process." Dried, germinated barley is mixed with aromatic hops and stirred into boiling water to produce maltose sugar. Yeast is then added, turning the maltose into alcohol end producing carbon dioxide to give the beer its foam.

New Faces Spur LHS 16-1 Win

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Dean Carstens, Dan Vontz and Rick Thomassen turned their varsity baseball debuts into a fireworks display Tuesday afternoon as Lincoln High blitzed Lincoln Pius X, 16-1, in a five-inning season opener for both teams at Pius' diamond.

Carstens clubbed a pair of two-run homers, Vontz unleashed a three-run shot in the first inning and Thomassen applied the finishing touch with a two-run blast in the fifth inning.

"All three of those kids are up from last year's reserve team," Lincoln High coach Bill Zuspan said after the power display.

"None of the homers surprised me," he added. "The kids call Vontz 'Little Babe Ruth' because he's 5-8, 185 pounds and can get wood on the ball."

Carstens is a much lankier 6-1, 150. "But he strokes the ball real well, too," according to Zuspan. "He hits with real authority all the time and always seems to get a piece of the ball."

Another Homer

Carstens stroked another two-run homer in almost identical fashion in the fifth inning off Thunderbolt reliever Bob Charland.

While the Links collected 12 hits in the onslaught, senior fireballer Charlie Metzger quieted 'Bolt bats, spinning a four-hitter while striking out nine and walking only one.

"I'm real pleased with Chuck," Zuspan said. "We've worked real hard on his control this spring and he had it all together out there today."

It was the only blemish in the Lincoln High opener. The Links played errorless ball in support of Metzger. Pius was guilty of seven miscues.

Pius coach Larry Culhane, insisting "we're a much better ball club than we showed today," received a setback Monday when Bob Navratil, a returning letterman pitcher, injured a leg in a parking lot accident.

Almost Scarey

Everything went so well for the Links in the opener, it was almost scarey, according to Zuspan.

"We've still got to show we can hit a fast ball," the Lincoln High coach said. "We should find out Wednesday. Omaha South always has someone who can throw hard."

The Links play South at Brown Park in Omaha, Zuspan indicated he will start junior righthander Myron Drent on the mound against South.

"We really wanted this first game," Zuspan said. "This group has worked as hard as any group I've had. They don't have a lot of experience, but they like to compete."

Huskers Gain Split With Kansas State

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

The Nebraska baseball team proved that even if everything isn't going the way it was planned, you can win half of the time.

The Huskers split a doubleheader with Kansas State, winning the opener 5-2 and losing the nightcap 6-2 Tuesday afternoon at the NU Diamond.

In the first game, righthander Boyd Batenhorst didn't have his fast ball working to form and centerfielder Paul Haas wasn't swinging the way he usually does.

But the two Huskers got the job done with Batenhorst going the distance for his third win against no losses and giving up seven hits. Meanwhile Haas slammed a three-run home run in the sixth inning to break a 2-2 tie and boost NU's record to 8-12.

Six Husker errors and a strong pitching performance by Wildcat Craig Tuttle, now 5-0, eliminated Nebraska's hope of a sweep over the powerful Wildcats, now 18-6.

"K-State is a fastball-hitting team and I couldn't get my fastball working today. So I stuck with the curve and used my knuckleball sparingly," Batenhorst said.

Batenhorst, now 4-0 and pitching in his first starting assignment of the year, was staked to a one run lead in the first inning when designated hitter Bobby Thomas singled and scored on a double play after gaining second on an error.

But K-State jumped on Batenhorst for two runs on three singles and a walk in the top of the second inning. No Wildcats got past second base until the sixth inning as Batenhorst kept the K-State batters guessing, switching on almost every pitch from a slider to curve to knuckleball.

Then in the bottom of the sixth, McManaman led off the inning with a double followed by a Winum single. Winum was forced at second on a ground ball hit by Dick Anderson, moving McManaman to third.

"It wasn't a good swing," Haas said of his home run. "I'm not a long ball hitter and I figured it would be a routine fly ball. But I guess the wind carried it a bit."

Shortstop Miller halted a late scoring threat by the Wildcats in the top of the seventh inning when he fielded a line drive by Kevin Bacon stepped on second base for the force out and threw a perfect strike to first baseman Larry Winum to get Bacon.

The Huskers also proved to be very efficient with the baserunners allowed by the Wildcats stranding only four runners in the first game.

In the second game, Thomas led off with a single and scored on an error and a double play to tie the game at 1-1.

But Tuttle took command of the game, and with the exception of a triple by Haas, he held the Huskers hitless until the fifth inning.

A two-run home run by Wildcat first baseman Steve Anson, who went five for eight for the day, in the third inning gave K-State all the runs they needed for the win.

The Wildcats added a run in the fourth on three errors, and one hit, and two more runs in the seventh on one hit and an error.

NU tallied in the sixth when Randy Benish, who walked and gained second on a single by Miller, scored on a ground ball by Gary Healey, but that was all, as Tuttle struck out the side in the seventh inning.

"I thought we played pretty well overall," said NU coach Tony Sharpe, whose team is now 2-3 in Big Eight competition. "That first game was one of our better games but I don't know why we got all the errors in the second one."

"We had the opportunities to score when we had the bases loaded and one out in the fourth and when Haas led off with a triple and couldn't score," Sharpe said.

"We need to fill some gaps defensively and with the return of Jeff King, who was injured at Kansas last weekend, we'll be more solid," Sharpe said.

The Huskers will host Wayne State in a doubleheader Wednesday afternoon at 2 p.m. at the NU Diamond. Kirk Eymann (1-1) and Dave Baehrer (1-3) are expected to start for the Huskers. The only common opponent the two teams have played is K-State, which swept a four-game series with Wayne earlier this season.

Back In Cleveland

Browns Regain Warfield

The preseason football game between the Baltimore Colts and Cleveland Browns got an early boost Tuesday when the Browns regained superstar wide receiver Paul Warfield. There also appeared to be a chance they could sign bruising fullback Larry Csonka.

The game, which will open the National Football League's exhibition season, will be played July 31 in NU's Memorial Stadium.

Paul Warfield
Home Again

Warfield began his pro career at Cleveland but was traded to the Miami Dolphins in 1970 so the Browns could use Miami's No. 1 selection in the college draft. That pick was quarterback Mike Phipps of Purdue, still with the club.

The former Ohio State running back, a 1964 Buckeye graduate, was converted to wide receiver and almost immediately began setting records. He caught 50 passes for 920 yards and 10 touchdowns in his rookie season. In 1968, he set a team record with 1,067 yards on 50 receptions for 12 touchdowns.

In his last year at Cleveland, 1969, he was second in receptions with 42 catches for 886 yards and 10 touchdowns. His 82-yard TD pass reception that year ranked as one of the longest in Browns' history.

He still holds the Browns' club record with a lifetime average gain of 20.2 yards per catch. His acquisition changes the Browns' draft plans. Instead of going for a deep receiving threat in the lottery Thursday, Cleveland owner Art Modell said the top priority will be a running back.

Browns' Attack Balanced

Warfield, who was knocked out of football when the World Football League folded, said he watched the Browns last season and observed that they have a very balanced attack.

Warfield, who has worked with Phipps during the past two off-seasons, said, "I'm very impressed — his accuracy is uncanny."

He thinks Phipps has matured as a quarterback. "I saw him do things few other quarterbacks can do on the field," Warfield said. Phipps failure until last year to establish himself as the leader the Browns needed caused criticism of Warfield's trade. Now, they're both on the same team and perhaps Warfield now can help Phipps continue to improve.

Warfield, Csonka and running back Jim Kiick caused a national stir when they left the Dolphins and signed a $3.5 million package deal to play for Memphis in the WFL. The Browns still are trying to get Csonka to sign, but say they aren't interested in Kiick.

"I understand Csonka has decided he won't sign before the draft," Modell said Tuesday. "For all intents and purposes we have withdrawn our offer and will go about our business although we may be in touch after the draft. Our interest is still there, but it is not as intense as if he would sign before the draft."

If Csonka would sign, the Browns undoubtedly would again switch priorities for the draft. Their first-round choice comes up after Tampa, Seattle, New Orleans, San Diego, New England and the New York Jets have had a pick.

Islanders Open With Victory

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Lorne Henning and Bill MacMillan scored their first Stanley Cup playoff goals Tuesday night and goaltender Glenn Resch earned his first victory ever against Vancouver as the New York Islanders whipped the Cancucks 5-3 in the first game of their preliminary round series.

The second game of the best-of-three mathcup will be played Thursday night at Vancouver, with the third — if necessary — here Saturday afternoon.

The Islanders, who hadn't beaten the Canucks since March 8, 1975, captured only their third home win against Vancouver in four years.

Henning's goal came only 10 seconds into the second period and gave the Islanders, shy one man, a 3-2 lead. Taking the puck from Ed Westfall at the top of the left faceoff circle, Henning lofted it past Vancouver goalie Curt Ridley for his fifth shorthanded goal of the season.

At 5:36 of the same period, MacMillan, filling Westfall's place after the Islander captain had killed off a penalty, made the score 4-2 when he backhanded the puck past Ridley, who was appearing in his first playoff contest. The loss was Ridley's first this year and only his second ever in 12 career National Hockey League games.

In three games this year and one last season Resch had never beaten the Canucks. The 27-year old rookie netminder appeared shaky in the first period, when Vancouver scored its first two goals on a power play by Dennis Ververgaert and John Gould's shorthanded tally.

Resch proved magificent, however, in the crucial second period when the Islanders scored three times. He made six outstanding saves, including four during the Islanders' only penalty of the period —three on Rick Blight and the other on Mike Walton.

East Rebounds For Triumph

Southeast Stopped, 7-1

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

A practice and a meeting.

That's all Lincoln East baseball coach Rudy Stoehr had time for to prepare his Spartans for intra-city rival Southeast after Papillion handed East a 3-0 loss Saturday.

The results of the practice and meeting were obviously pleasing to Stoehr as the Spartans shook off the effects of the season-opening loss at their home field and hammered Southeast 7-1 at Sherman Field Tuesday.

Fans attending the game were treated to an extra bit of excitment that kept them on their toes throughout the game.

Spartan pitcher Mark Steinberger held the Knights scoreless through three innings while East was able to pick up a second run in the second inning when Jay Rodenburg scored on an error after walking.

Steinberger found himself a in a little trouble in the bottom of the fourth and gave way to Dennis Mertens after giving up the lone Southeast run on four hits.

Mertens handcuffed the Knights without a hit for the duration while his supporting cast gave him five runs to work with crediting the senior with the save of Steinberger's win.

Four of East's five finishing runs came in the top of the fifth after Reynolds had struck out Mason and forced Seaman to ground out.

Yowell singled to center. Tom Vergith walked and Brian Hensel reached base on an error. Then Brian Moreland doubled to center, scoring Yowell and Vergith and Watters singled to center scoring Hansel and Moreland to seal the win.

"That's a pretty good spread this early in the season," Stoehr said. "It's a great city win for us.

"One meeting and one practice was what it took," he added. "I know these kids are good ballplayers, so I told them after that Papillion game.

"I know what these kids can do. I ought to. I pitch 4,000 pitches to them in batting practice," Stoehr said. "They're as good as any team in the state. Maybe it just takes playing at a place like this to get them fired up.

"It's no fun to play out at East," Stoehr joked. "Heck, we practice there all the time. They like to play other places."

The batting of Yowell, Moreland and Watters was a key to East's success as the trio accounted for all six East hits after Papillion had held the Spartans to three hits in the shutout.

"The only thing about Sam Yowell that surprised me was that he didn't hit one out," Stoehr said. "And he almost did. And Watters played real well in his first start. Moreland hit well too."

Stoehr was also pleased with the early season pitching of junior Steinberger and Mertens.

The win evened East's season mark at 1-1 while the loss was the first game of the season for Charlie Gordon's Knights.

Postal Complaint Handling Changed

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Around 1.7 million people complain to the post office every year about lost letters, damaged packages, delivery delays and mail fraud. But sometimes it's just as frustrating trying to get an answer from the postal bureaucracy as it is waiting around a mailbox for a letter that never comes.

Recognizing that they had a little problem in this area, the post office has embarked on a new system for handling complaints. I can't vouch for it, not having used it. But on paper, it's an improvement over what went before. In fact, the more you use it, the faster you'll focus postal attention on any kinks that are making special problems for your route.

When you have a complaint, ask at your post office for the Consumer Service Card. Fill it out in duplicate, telling what kind of mail you were expecting and what the problem is. Besides damage, delay and lost mail, you can use the space to complain about such things as rude mailmen, postal clerks, faulty self-service postal equipment, or a mail order firm you think has bilked you.

One copy goes to the local post office, since the postmaster does the investigating. The other copy goes directly to the Consumer Affairs Office in Washington, to be coded and entered on a computer. To give you an idea as to what an improvement this system is, a single complaint used to be re-copied by various clerks on nine different forms before it finally reached Washington (I wonder what all those clerks are doing now?).

At Local Level

Problems are supposed to be resolved at the local level. If it's a lost letter, for example, the postmaster will ask you for identifying marks (such as the return address, or perhaps what color the stationery was). He'll then search through the dead-letter bags of the post offices en route. One warning: if there was no return address on the envelope, your chance of recovery is small.

Always complain about damaged packages, just to let Washington know that someone (or something) is making a mess of things. But damage won't be paid for unless the package was registered or insured.

The Consumer Affairs Office in Washington keeps track of all the complaints received, as a way of reading what's happening in the system. This is the biggest reason to fill in a complaint card when somethng goes wrong. If a large number of complaints about damaged packages suddenly turn up on a particular route, it might move the postal authorities to investigate. If an unusual number of delays are reported, they might consider adjusting plane schedules. The more complaints there are, the more likely you'll get action.

The local postmaster is supposed to file a formal resolution of each case with Washington. Thomas Chadwick, the post office's consumer advocate, told my associate, Anne Wolman, that his office follows up on a random sample of resolutions every month, to see if they are satisfactory.

Mail Order Problems

Chadwick's office also intervenes in 5,000 cases a year between consumers and mail-order companies. They try to get your money back if you've been conned, and develop evidence for mail-fraud cases. The office also will be watching for violations of the new mail-order law that says you should receive the goods within 30 days, or else be told the reason why. If you have a complaint, write to Chadwick at the Office of the Consumer Advocate, U.S. Postal Service, Washington, D.C. 20260.

Although the post office is trying to extend the hand of friendship to mail users, they remain inflexible on one point. Your mailbox can be used only for matter delivered by the U.S. Postal Service. Magazines delivered by private companies cannot be put in your box; neither can hand-delivered bills or newspapers. Private carriers have had to put magazines and ads in plastic bags hung from doorknobs, which adds to the price and minimizes competition.

The post office says they do this for you, to preserve the privacy of your mailbox. In further defense of the position, a post office spokesman said it would be a terrible thing if, for example, a bill got lost in the pages of a newspaper put in the box by a delivery boy. In my neighborhood, the post office delivers one of the papers. I guess that when bills get lost in the pages of authorized mail, it's okay.

Skutt Named Chairman Of Nationwide Alliance

WASHINGTON (AP)—V. J. Skutt, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Mutual of Omaha and United of Omaha insurance companies, was elected Tuesday as the 1976-77 chairman of the National Alliance of Businessmen.

The alliance is a nationwide, White House-mandated volunteer organization created to enlist the nation's corporate community in a program to provide jobs and training for the economically disadvantaged in the country.

Skutt becomes the ninth chairman of the alliance, which was formed by President Johnson and Henry Ford II in 1968.

Profit Taking Erodes Rally In Market

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 2.44 to close at 1,001.65, wiping out an initial climb of more than seven points and trimming its 12-point advance on Monday.

New York Stock Exchange issues advancing in price held an 8-6 lead on those declining, however.

The Dow held on to a four-point gain through most of the session, then fell off rapidly in the last half hour of Big Board trading.

Brokers attributed the market's slump in volume and prices last week to fears of a national trucking strike, which began Thursday. A settlement between the Teamsters and the trucking industry over the weekend, they said, prompted the market's turnaround Monday.

Otherwise, investors are generally optimistic about upcoming corporate profit reports for the first quarter and the recent stability of interest rates, analysts say.

General Motors and Ford advanced a fraction and Chrysler was unchanged. The auto makers had announced production cutbacks when the trucking strike started, but scuttled those plans when the settlement was reached.

Several oil companies were among the active issues. Texaco was unchanged, while Gulf and Standard Oil of California tacked on fractional gains.

The glamor issues were higher through most of the session before dropping with the market toward the close. Bausch & Lomb, Fairchild Camera and Xerox fell more than a point, and Eastman Kodak, IBM and Halliburton posted declines of more than two points.

Interpace bucked the downtrend, rising more than a point on its announcement that first quarter income will be almost double its level of last year.

The NYSE composite index of all its listed common stocks dipped .07 to 55.13.

Merger Rate About Constant

CHICAGO (AP) — The rate at which business firms are merging is remaining about constant, a merger broker said Tuesday.

W.T. Grimm & Co. said its studies show that there were 557 net mergers for the first quarter of this year, compared with 559 during the comparable period of 1975.

During the last quarter of 1975, there were 565 mergers announced.

Hog Prices Turn Mixed

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Hogs turned mixed in slow trade on the Omaha livestock market Tuesday, while cattle turned lower after a solid week of gains.

Meanwhile, another record top was set in the sheep pens.

The day's hog run was estimated at about 4,000 head. The trade on barrows and gilts was slow, and the butcher trend was steady to 25-cents lower.

Sows turned 75-cents to $1.00 higher on tickets marked from $42.00-$42.75.

The cattle run was estimated at about 5,200 head, and the general trade on slaughter steers and heifers was only moderately active.

Steer prices trended unevenly steady to 50-cents lower, with most sales running 25-to-50 cents off. Heifers sold mostly 25-cents lower, instances 50-cents off, while cows were called firm.

There were only about 200 sheep on offer, and that wasn't enough to test the trade. However, there were a few choice with end-prime spring lambs on offer, and they cashed at $57.00, setting another record top for Omaha. The old record, $56.25, was set last Wednesday.

Farm Futures Prices Climb

Chicago (AP) — Spurred by commission house and speculative buying most farm futures prices rose on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Wheat climbed steadily throughout the day, closing as much as 5 cents a bushel higher.

Also contributing to the wheat increase was news that weekly export inspection figures were up from last week — from 14.9 to 21.1 million bushels. Continued dry weather in the Southwest also helped.

The weekly export inspection figures were also up for soybeans, from 9.7 to 14.8 million bushels and soybean prices jumped as much as 6 cents.

NWU's nightcap victory, coupled with a 6-3 first-game triumph, extended the Plainsmen's NIAC winning streak to 25 games. Wesleyan upped its conference record to 6-0 while evening its overall ledger at 8-8 with its seventh straight success.

Larry Abel silenced Concordia's batters for six innings in the nightcap by allowing only two runs on two hits.

Reed blasted his second extra-base hit of the inning by tripling in all three runners to give NWU a 6-2 lead. Blake followed with a run-scoring single.

In the first game, Wesleyan jumped to a 4-0 lead in the first inning and held on for the win.

Doug Votava opened the ballgame with a single and scored on brother Scott Votava's fifth home run in five ballgames.

New Racing Secretary Crockett Leaving Gates

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Grand Island — For someone who has spent so much time around starting gates at horse races, Richard Crockett may be "finished" at age 28.

The reason? He's going to serve as clerk of scales at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha, then become outstate racing secretary at Columbus, and Atokad Park. Next year, he'll serve as Lincoln's racing secretary.

"This (Fonner Park) could be the last meet I'll ever start," Crockett said between races here at Fonner Park. "Since I've been around the starting gate all my life, I'll probably miss it. But being racing secretary is a big challenge.

"It's not an easy job, but I hope it will open a lot of things for me," he added. "As a starter, you get sterotyped into one thing and it's hard to break."

Crockett, who will be the fourth outstate racing secretary in six years, served the last two years as assistant racing secretary at Lincoln, Columbus and Atokad. He also worked as the starter.

His father, Sonny Crockett, worked as a starter for 30 years in Nebraska and the Southern Illinois circuit. The elder Crockett served as general manager at last summer's quarterhorse races at Broken Bow.

Appropriately, his father will succeed him as starter on the outstate circuit.

"He's taught me everything I know about the starting gate," said Crockett, who has been a Nebraska starter since 1972.

That doesn't mean Crockett is not looking forward to his new job — perhaps trailing only the stewards' as far as importance at any race track.

"I enjoy being with people," he said. "I've met a lot of trainers around the gate and I'm sure it'll help me as racing secretary. I've always been able to get along with people when I've been in a position of authority.

"Both Bob (Pollock, racing secretary the past two years on the outstate circuit) and Dean (Williams, Pollock's predecessor) have helped me a lot," he said. They've both said they'll help me with whatever I need."

No Easy Job

Crockett could very well be the youngest racing secretary in the country. He quickly notes, however, that "age really doesn't have anything to do with it — it's ability that matters."

Besides starting the races in the afternoon, Crockett is responsible for the schooling sessions in the morning and for approving all horses from the gate. Without Crockett's approval, no horse is allowed to start a race at Fonner Park.

The biggest problem is getting unraced 2-year-olds accustomed to standing in the starting gate and then racing from it.

"You let them stand in there a while to get over their nervousness," he said. "Then you hope they walk out the front door right. Very few of them give me trouble. But some of them try to flip and can't stand right in the gate.

Richard Crockett

"A lot of trainers try to ignore the problem," he said. "Instead of getting after the problem, they've always got alibis."

"I'm an avid Big Red fan, although I don't get to see many games since Atokad runs so late (through mid-November)," he said. "I went to Oklahoma a few years and Oklahoma won, 27-0. That's the only Nebraska game I've seen."

A nephew, Dan Pensick, has earned a scholarship to Nebraska and will participate in freshman football as a Husker this fall. Pensick earned honorable mention laurels on last fall's Sunday Journal and Star Super State football team.

"I've liked everything I've ever done around the race tracks. I've always tried to do my best. To be worth anything you've got to like it wholeheartedly," he noted.

Reds, Phillies Appear To Be Best

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

How do you improve the best team on baseball?

The Cincinnati Reds, champions of Bowie Kuhn's world in 1975, found a way, adding bench strength to the awesome starting lineup that produced the city's first championship in 35 years.

Without disturbing the basic starting lineup that destroyed the West Division and then zoomed to the National League and World Series championships last year, the Reds picked up veterans Bob Bailey from Montreal and Mike Lum from Atlanta. Both should be useful additions to the bench of a team that hardly needed help in its starting lineup.

The Big Red Machine has the same old motor composed of MVP Joe Morgan, slugger Johnny Bench, RBI specialist Tony Perez and Mr. Everything, Pete Rose.

Put it all together and it spells pennant, perhaps not by the 20-game margin the Reds had last year, but by enough.

Look for the improving San Francisco Giants to move up the NL West ladder to the runnerup slot behind the Reds.

The Giants own some of the National League's top young players, including third baseman Ken Reitz, acquired from St. Louis, first baseman Willie Montanez, outfielders Von Joshua, Bobby Murcer and Gary Matthews, and pitchers John D'Acquisto, Ed Halicki and John Montefusco, the NL Rookie of the Year.

Los Angeles added outfielder Dusty Baker from Atlanta over the winter but the price may have been too high. The Dodgers surrendered outfielders Jim Wynn and Tom Paciorek and infielders Lee Lacy, Jerry Royster in the deal. That stripped Los Angeles of much of its depth and the loss of 19-game winner Andy Messersmith will hurt, too.

Still, the Dodgers have some solid infield talent in Steve Garvey, Dave Lopes, Bill Russell and Ron Cey and a quality top starting pitcher in Don Sutton.

The Baker-Wynn trade and the acquisition of outfielder Ken Henderson from the Chicago White Sox and infielder Darrel Chaney from Cincinnati gives Atlanta a new look.

San Diego keeps collecting first-round free-agent draft choices and sooner or later, that kind of talent is going to pay off.

During the winter, the club picked up third baseman Doug Rader from Houston and and outfielder Willie Davis from St. Louis. After Randy Jones, however, the San Diego pitching is suspect.

Houston must begin a rebuilding program around talented players like Greg Gross, Cesar Cedeno and Bob Watson. There is, however, plenty of rebuilding to do.

In the year of the nation's bicentennial, much of the celebration has been centered in Philadelphia. Now the Phillies are ready to join in with a serious run at the East Division pennant.

The addition of pitchers Ron Reed and Jim Kaat over the winter seems to have solidified the staff that includes veterans Steve Carlton and Jim Lonborg and youngsters Tom Underwood and Larry Christenson.

The lineup has some impressive bats like Greg Luzinski, Mike Schmidt, Larry Bowa, Dave Cash and Garry Maddox. If Dick Allen can regain the long-ball touch that once made him baseball's highest-paid player, the flag could fly in Philadelphia.

Pittsburgh has won the division five of the last seven years, an accomplishment that wouldn't have been possible if they had been living in the West instead of the East. The Pirates could pull off another division title this year with strengthened pitching from the addition of Doc Medich and a full season from young John Candelaria.

St. Louis is counting on two youngsters in the infield, first baseman Keith Hernandez and third baseman Hector Cruz.

The New York Mets surrendered one of their best bats when they swapped Rusty Staub to Detroit for pitcher Mickey Lolich. Now the Mets have the National League's best four-man pitching rotation—Tom Seaver, Jon Matlack, Jerry Koosman, and Lolich. But who's going to get them any runs?

Chicago has the defending NL batting champ in Bill Madlock but, except for him and outfielders Rick Monday and Jose Cardenal, there isn't much in the Cubs' lineup to recommend them.

The Picks:

Kentucky Awaits Syndication

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky Colonels' majority owner Ellie Brown said Tuesday that the American Basketball Association club would be syndicated among numerous shareholders.

Mrs. Brown, wife of ABA president John Y. Brown, said that Jefferson County Atty. J. Bruce Miller had agreed to head a search for shareholders.

Miller explained that the syndication calls for stockholders to invest $500,000 immediately and assume a $1-million debt over the next five years. The debt represents a partial repayment to the Browns of the financial deficits they have incurred while running the club.

"I will be a spearhead of a group of people in Louisville and Kentucky to keep the franchise here," Miller said. "To be successful in pro sports in a town this size requires community ownership."

Miller said that he did not think his political office or the fact that he is an agent for several pro athletes represents a conflict of interest. "I see no conflict in my being the Jefferson County attorney and I see no conflict with representing professional athletes because I have no official capacity with this basketball team."

Reggie's Mom Likes Trade

BALTIMORE (AP) — The lady is uneasy. She fingers her gold pinkie ring and the yellow "A's" jumps out from the green stone. When you ask her about it, her uneasiness is whisked away by a smile.

Clara Jackson is proud because all over Baltimore visions of her son, Reggie Jackson, clobbering baseballs out of Memorial Stadium are flashing through the minds of Oriole fans.

And Mrs. Jackson thinks it's great that her youngest son may soon be wearing the orange, black and white of the Baltimore Orioles, who obtained him in a trade with the Oakland A's last Friday.

"I think it's fantastic," said Mrs. Jackson during an interview at the Veterans Administration where she is a benefits counselor.

"I've been elated since Friday when I heard the news on television," she added.

Mrs. Jackson assumes Reggie is coming to Baltimore, though she hasn't talked to him for about 10 days. He didn't mention the possibility of being traded to Baltimore at the time, but she thinks Reg would be very happy about playing here.

Wife Mourns Boxer's Death

SYDNEY (UPI) — Carol Wilburn is pregnant, but her husband will not be at her bedside when she gives birth to her baby. Chuck Wilburn died Monday night from brain injuries he suffered in a fight last Thursday.

Chuck Wilburn of Cleveland, Ohio, died shortly after 10.00 p.m. EDT Monday. He never regained consiousness after being stopped in the 10th and final round of a junior welterweight fight with Australian champion Hector Thompson.

"Naturally, if it's a boy, his name will be Charles, and he'll be strong and good and gentle, just like his father," said a distraught Carol Wilburn, emotion ringing in her voice. Her mother-in-law, Missouri Wilburn, squeezed her hand as she spoke.

Wilburn underwent a four-hour emergency operation after collapsing in his corner last Thursday, but he never regained consciousness.

Thompson was distraught on learning the news. It was the second time in his career that a boxer had died after fighting him.

"I have failed twice. I don't go out to kill people. I just go out to win like a sportsman," said Thompson.

Fullback Asks 5-Year Pact

Miami Owner Assails Csonka

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins owner Joe Robbie went public Tuesday with his gripes about a five-year contract being sought from his National Football League team by Larry Csonka, claiming the erstwhile Dolphin fullback wants a financial package totaling more than $2 million.

Robbie said the Dolphins have put off meeting with Csonka and his agent but "remain open to future negotiations based upon our salary structure."

Talking about a proposed pact submitted by Csonka's agent, Ed Keating, Robbie said, "We have too much respect for our players and our fans to agree ... or to the approach it represents.

"Coach (Don) Shula and I would like to sign Larry to return to Miami if we can sign him at a salary consistent with the salary structure of the Miami Dolphins, which is the best in professional football," Robbie said. "But Mr. Keating's proposal does not provide the basis for constructive negotiations."

Among Csonka's proposals listed by Robbie were:

—A salary of $250,000 a year.

—A $50,000 cash bonus for signing

—An annual cash bonus of $15,000.

—A 20-year loan of $125,000 at minimum legal interest.

—Separate compensation and an expense account for public relations service during his playing years.

—Separate compensation to perform certain scouting and coaching consultant activities for a period of 10 years after retirement plus a minimum expense allowance of $500 per month or more

—Eight first-class, roundtrip airline tickets during each playing season between Cleveland-Pittsburgh and Miami which may be used by anyone designated by Csonka, plus one roundtrip ticket each year for members of Csonka's family

—Additional fringe benefits including game tickets, transportation and expenses.

Csonka's bruising brand of running helped lead the Dolphins to three consecutive Super Bowl appearances in 1972-75. Last season he jumped to the now-defunct World Football League with teammates Paul Warfield and Jim Kiick.

Beware Hack With Nose Open

MARION, Ill. (AP) — If someone with a shank throws down on a hack there is friction in the joint. It may just bring on a fever and certainly is going to get the man's nose open.

However, it's not grounds for malpractice because the healing arts aren't involved.

An inmate at the Marion Federal Penitentiary, the maximum-security Southern Illinois institution built to replace Alcatraz, would understand the message to mean:

If an inmate challenges a guard with a knife there is going to be trouble. It could cost the offender another five years behind bars and it is certain to make the guard angry.

Sociologists say prison populations, as most subcultures, develop manners of speaking that serve the needs of group identification. Slang also allows indirect, and therefore nonpunishable, displays of disdain for authority.

However, Henry Gargano, a Marion inmate serving 199 years for bank robbery and murder, furnished in a letter some current examples of the idiom for those unwilling to pay the price of admission.

"... My list of contemporary slang is used in most state prisons and all federal prisons," he wrote.

"Some words (actual nouns) have more than one slang word and are used within the same system. For example, Southerners and blacks invariably use the same terms — which differ from the more predominant usage. They most often refer to a guard as the pohleece or boss. The rest of us use 'hack' or 'the man,'" Gargano wrote.

The inmate, who has been behind bars more than 27 years in state and federal prisons, said guards also are called "cops" in federal institutions and "bulls" in state facilities.

In both systems a sentence is called a "bit." A five-year term, aside from a "fever" is known as a "fin." In state lodgings it's also called a "pound" and a year stretch becomes a "yard."

Informers are still "rats" in the federal prisons and "finks" in the state institutions. They are sometimes "wiped" or "wasted," or just "done in," sometimes during a "rumble" or fight.

Passive homosexuals are known as "fags," "broads," or "sissies." Their agressive counterparts are called "Daddies," or "old men," sometimes "jockers" in the state institutions.

A note between inmates is a "kite." Cigarettes are sometimes known as "squares." Money is simply "green." That which is good is "boss" or "righteous." Those things unrighteous are "sorry."

To "make a play" is to attempt something, most often an escape. A play "comes down."

A "showdown," is not of the High Noon variety. It means getting a good chance to do some forbidden act without being detected by a guard.

To "throw down" is to "confront someone with a knife or a gun . . . a very hostile overt act."

Dessert Wine Being Introduced

San Martin, Calif. (?UPI) — A new varietal dessert wine made with Montonico grapes is being introduced by a winemaker here, using a variety that until now has been used only for blending sherries and muscatels.

Winemaster Ed Friedrich of San Martin Vineyards Co. said Montonicos have been grown in Italy since antiquity. The grapes from which the California wine was made were produced from cuttings brought from Calabria, Italy, in 1938, Friedrich said.

The California wine is called Vin Santo, or wine of the saints, a designation given wines in old Tuscany that were aged at least five years in small barrels and stored high in farmhouse attics.

5 Professors Recognized

Five professors at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln were recognized and rewarded for distinguished teaching at the annual Honors Convocation held Tuesday in the NU Coliseum.

Harry Haynie, president of the University of Nebraska Foundation, presented the five with $1,000 checks. Three of the awards are supported by the Amoco Foundation Inc., one by the University of Nebraska Foundation and one by the family of the late Mrs. Annis Chaikin Sorensen.

The Sorensen Award, given for excellence in teaching in the humanities area, went to Dr. Leslie Duly, professor of history. Since coming to Nebraska in 1968, Duly has established a campus-wide reputation as a highly knowledgeable, creative and stimulating teacher.

Recipient of the University of Nebraska Foundation Trustees' Award for distinguished teaching was Dr. John Davidson, professor of botany. Davidson was cited for enthusiasm for improving his teaching. He has been involved in the Centennial Education and the Training the Trainers of Teachers programs.

Dr. A. Dale Flowerday, professor of agronomy, received an Amoco Foundation Award. He was cited for distinguished teaching in science and technology. He has been rated an excellent teacher by his students and teaches an introductory course in soil science taken by nearly every student in the college.

Also an Amoco Award recipient was Dr. Charles Godwin, associate professor of elementary education, Godwin, in his social studies methods classes, takes time to help students clarify their own value system as well as learning how to teach. He is respected for his scholarship and activities, which have included popular annual winterim tours to study British schools.

The third Amoco recipient was Melinda Holcombe, assistant professor of education and family resources. To keep up on secondary teaching, for which many of her students are preparing, she spends three weeks each winter working in a high school situation.

She has gained national prominence in the area of teaching consumer education for secondary teachers and has co-authored a high school text on the subject. In addition, she has assumed the leadership in developing the course entitled "Home Economics Programs for the Disadvantaged."

State Will Help Detention Center Find Other Funds

By United Press International

A State Welfare Department official said Tuesday he and others planned to help Douglas County, if asked, to find new sources of money to keep its youth detention center open.

"We'll work with them in every way we can to help find other sources," said Larry Nedrow, head of the department's social services division. He said the federal Law Enforcement Assistant Administration, already providing money for a similar center in Lincoln, is a potential source.

Alan Ihms, state welfare director, earlier told Douglas County the detention center is not eligible for the $300,000 in state and federal social services money it had been planning on to operate the center.

Nedrow said the department is more than willing to help because "this is definitely a needed service" and the ineligible status results only from a technicality.

"In other words, we are not saying the program is bad. We are simply saying this is a program for which we can't allow social services money," he said.

Nedrow also said Douglas County, contrary to some reports he had heard, has not been asked to return the $300,000 earmarked for the center.

He said up until Oct. 1 of last year the center was fully eligible and thus only about $138,000 in payments to an ineligible program is involved. He also said any repayment order would have to come from the federal government and not the state.

On Oct. 1 a new state social services plan, which governs where state and federal money is spent, went into effect. Nedrow said detention centers are not included in the plan.

Coincidently, Nedrow said a routine federal audit of the county's books is in progress. Those officials declined to comment about the center or the audit and said the final audit report would indicate whether the federal government intends to do anything about the situation.

Nedrow said he has had no official word from the auditors or others concerning the matter. But he said based on past history "the possibility always exists that the federal government could take exception to expenditures not covered in the state plan and ask that they be returned."

In a related development Tuesday morning, the Douglas County board asked state officials to meet in Omaha to discuss the situation.

Douglas County officials contend the state should have informed them the center was not eligible for funding. Nedrow, however, said administration of social services "remains a county function." He said he first became aware of where money was going in late February and asked for more information. That information prompted Ihms' letter.

"I'm sure Douglas County felt it was an allowable program and I certainly don't feel there was anything sinister involved in this," Nedrow said. "One of our primary jobs is to help children and this program certainly does that."

LAP Seeks Low-Income Input At Planning Sessions April 13-22

Lincoln Action Program (LAP) is launching a series of neighborhood planning sessions to involve low-income persons in planning, said Lynn Tierney, LAP planning officer, at a Tuesday press conference.

The planning sessions, from April 13-22, will be a public forum for discussing community needs and developing ideas for low-income persons in Lincoln and Lancaster County.

The first session will be at 6 p.m. Tuesday at General Arnold School in Lincoln Air Park West.

LAP, funded primarily by the Community Services Administration, provides advocacy and services for the poor.

Ms. Tierney said she anticipates increased participation in this years' planning sessions because the low-income people have "recently become more vocal" and are "more aware of how changes (in regulations and services) affect them directly."

Priorities coming out the planning sessions last year wre the need for more information, transportation, housing, child care and rural recreation, she said.

Utility rate increases, housing shortages, day care and food stamps are concerns of the low-incomed this year, she said.

After the planning sessions, LAP will meet with community agencies delivering similar services to coordinate programs and avoid duplication, Ms. Tierney said. The final priority ranking of programs will be presented to the June LAP board meeting.

The schedule of neighborhood planning sessions is:

—Air Park, April 13, 6 p.m., Arnold Heights School.

—Havelock, April 14, 6 p.m., Pershing School.

—North Lincoln, April 19, 7 p.m., Clinton School.

—Hallam, April 20, 6:30 p.m., Hallam School.

—South Lincoln, April 21, 7 p.m., Saratoga School.

—Raymond, April 22, 6:30 p.m., Raymond School.

Voter Registration Hours Extended, Locations Added

The Lancaster County Election Commissioner has announced special locations and extended office hours so citizens may register to vote in the May 11th Nebraska primary.

County residents will be able to register from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. April 8, 15 and 22 at the Gateway Shopping Center Mall. Registrations also will be at the Mall from 1 to 4 p.m. April 10, 17, and 24.

Additionally citizens may register from 1 to 8:30 p.m. April 29, and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. April 30 in the Gateway Auditorium.

In addition to regular election commission office hours of 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, the commission office will be open until 8 p.m. April 8, 15, 22, 26, 28 and 29.

On April 30th, the last day citizens may register to vote, the office will close at 6 p.m.

4 Die Drinking Weed Poison

Pinneberg, West Germany (AP) — Four tree nursery laborers died after drinking a highly poisonous weed killer from what appeared to be a rum bottle and police said they do not suspect foul play.

Three of the victims were German, the other Portuguese. Police said they drank from a bottle which another laborer emptied some weeks ago and then filled up with weed killer to treat plants at his home.

Postal Complaint Handling Changed

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Around 1 7 million people complain to the post office every year about lost letters damaged packages delivery delays and mail fraud But sometimes it s just as frustrating trying to get an answer from the postal bureaucracy as it is waiting around a mailbox for a letter that never comes

Recognizing that they had a little problem in this area the post office has embarked on a new system for handling complaints I can t vouch for it not having used it But on paper it s an improvement over what went before In fact the more you use it the faster you ll focus postal attention on any kinks that are making special problems for your route

When you have a complaint ask at your post office for the Consumer Service Card Fill it out in duplicate telling what kind of mail you were expecting and what the problem is Besides damage delay and lost mail you can use the space to complain about such things as [illegible] mailmen postal clerks faulty self-service postal equipment or a mail order firm you think has bilked you

One copy goes to the local post office since the postmaster does the investigating The other copy goes directly to the Consumer Affairs Office in Washington to be coded and entered on a computer To give you an idea as to what an improvement this system is a single complaint used to be re-copied by various clerks on nine different forms before it finally reached Washington (I wonder what all those clerks are doing now?)

At Local Level

Problems are supposed to be resolved at the local level If it s a lost letter for example the postmaster will ask you for identifying marks (such as the return address or perhaps what color the stationery was) He ll then search through the dead-letter bags of the post offices en route One warning if there was no return address on the envelope your chance of recovery is small

Always complain about damaged packages just to let Washington know that someone (or something) is making a mess of things But damage won t be paid for unless the package was registered or insured

The Consumer Affairs Office in Washington keeps track of all the complaints received as a way of reading what s happening in the system This is the biggest reason to fill in a complaint card when something goes wrong If a large number of complaints about damaged packages suddenly turn up on a particular route it might move the postal authorities to investigate If an unusual number of delays are reported, they might consider adjusting plane schedules The more complaints there are the more likely you ll get action

The local postmaster is supposed to file a formal resolution of each case with Washington Thomas Chadwick the post office s consumer advocate told my associate Anne Wolman, that his office follows up on a random sample of resolutions every month to see if they are satisfactory

Chadwick s office also intervenes in 5 000 cases a year between consumers and mail order companies They try to get your money back if you ve been conned and develop evidence for mail fraud cases The office also will be watching for violations of the new mail-order law that says you should receive the goods within 30 days or else be told the reason why If you have a complaint write to Chadwick at the Office of the Consumer Advocate, U S Postal Service, Washington D C 20260

Although the post office is trying to extend the hand of friendship to mail users they remain inflexible on one point Your mailbox can be used only for matter delivered by the U S Postal Service Magazines delivered by private companies cannot be put in your box, neither can hand-delivered bills or newspapers Private carriers have had to put magazines and ads in plastic bags hung from doorknobs which adds to the price and minimizes competition

The post office says they do this for you to preserve the privacy of your mailbox In further defense of the position a post office spokesman said it would be a terrible thing if for example a bill got lost in the pages of a newspaper put in the box by a delivery boy In my neighborhood the post office delivers one of the papers I guess that when bills get lost in the pages of authorized mail it s okay

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 2 44 to close at 1 001 65 wiping out an initial climb of more than seven points and trimming its 12-point advance on Monday

New York Stock Exchange issues advancing in price held an 8-6 lead on those declining, however

The Dow held on to a four-point gain through most of the session then fell off rapidly in the last half hour of Big Board trading

Brokers attributed the market s slump in volume and prices last week to fears of a national trucking strike which began Thursday A settlement between the Teamsters and the trucking industry over the weekend they said prompted the market s turnaround Monday

Otherwise, investors are generally optimistic about upcoming corporate profit reports for the first quarter and the recent stability of interest rates analysts say

Kaufman & Broad was the most actively traded issue, rising a fraction in price A block of 80 000 shares was traded at 10½

Auto stocks were widely traded

General Motors and Ford advanced a fraction and Chrysler was unchanged The auto makers had announced production cutbacks when the trucking strike started, but scuttled those plans when the settlement was reached

They also benefited from generally strong sales in late March

Several oil companies were among the active issues Texaco was unchanged while Gulf and Standard Oil of California tacked on fractional gains

Kerr McGee rose more than a point and a half, while Exxon dipped more than a point

The glamor issues were higher through most of the session before dropping with the market toward the close Bausch & Lomb Fairchild Camera and Xerox fell more than a point and Eastman Kodak IBM and Halliburton posted declines of more than two points

Englehard minerals dropped almost a point and International Minerals & Chemicals fell more than a point in active trading

Interpace bucked the down trend rising more than a point on its announcement that first quarter income will be almost double its level of last year

And Westvaco which made a similar announcement advanced a fraction

During the last quarter of 1975 there were 565 mergers announced

Farm Futures Prices Climb

Chicago (AP) — Spurred by commission house and speculative buying most farm futures prices rose on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday

Wheat climbed steadily throughout the day closing as much as 5 cents a bushel higher

Also contributing to the wheat increase was news that weekly export inspection figures were up from last week — from 14 9 to 21 1 million bushels Continued dry weather in the Southwest also helped

The weekly export inspection figures were also up for soybeans from 9 7 to 14 8 million bushels and soybean prices jumped as much as 6 cents

Oats and Corn benefitted from the upward trend of wheat with corn gaining as much as 1¾ cents and oats advancing about 2 cents

Beware Hack With Nose Open

MARION, Ill. (AP) — If someone with a shank throws down on a hack there is friction in the joint. It may just bring on a fever and certainly is going to get the man's nose open.

However, it's not grounds for malpractice because the healing arts aren't involved.

That sort of language is operative not among physicians but among prisoners. It's penitentiary slang.

An inmate at the Marion Federal Penitentiary, the maximum-security Southern Illinois institution built to replace Alcatraz, would understand the message to mean:

If an inmate challenges a guard with a knife there is going to be trouble. It could cost the offender another five years behind bars and it is certain to make the guard angry.

Sociologists say prison populations, as most subcultures, develop manners of speaking that serve the needs of group identification. Slang also allows indirect, and therefore nonpunishable, displays of disdain for authority.

Criminal argot is the foundation for most such slang, but inmates have added some special touches of their own.

Unless you are willing to do the research first hand, about the only place to pick up prison slang is in the movie theater.

However, Henry Gargano, a Marion inmate serving 199 years for bank robbery and murder, furnished in a letter some current examples of the idiom for those unwilling to pay the price of admission.

"... My list of contemporary slang is used in most state prisons and all federal prisons," he wrote.

"Some words (actual nouns) have more than one slang word and are used within the same system. For example, Southerners and blacks invariably use the same terms — which differ from the more predominant usage. They most often refer to a guard as the pohleece or boss. The rest of us use 'hack' or 'the man,'" Gargano wrote.

The inmate, who has been behind bars more than 27 years in state and federal prisons, said guards also are called "cops" in federal institutions and "bulls" in state facilities.

In both systems a sentence is called a "bit." A five-year term, aside from a "fever" is known as a "fin." In state lodgings it's also called a "pound" and a year stretch becomes a "yard."

Knives are "shanks," "blades" or "shivs." Guns are "pieces."

Informers are still "rats" in the federal prisons and "finks" in the state institutions. They are sometimes "wiped" or "wasted," or just "done in," sometimes during a "rumble" or fight.

Passive homosexuals are known as "fags," "broads," or "sissies." Their agressive counterparts are called "Daddies," or "old men," sometimes "jockers" in the state institutions.

A note between inmates is a "kite." Cigarettes are sometimes known as "squares." Money is simply "green." That which is good is "boss" or "righteous." Those things unrighteous are "sorry."

To "make a play" is to attempt something, most often an escape. A play "comes down."

A "showdown," is not of the High Noon variety. It means getting a good chance to do some forbidden act without being detected by a guard.

To "throw down" is to "confront someone with a knife or a gun . . . a very hostile overt act."

Maidstone England (AP) — John Thomas Jova 24 son of the American ambassador to Mexico pleaded guilty to drug smuggling and was sentenced to 2 ½ years in jail

Dessert Wine Being Introduced

San Martin, Calif (UPI) — A new varietal dessert wine made with Montonico grapes is being introduced by a winemaker here, using a variety that until now has been used only for blending sherries and muscatels

Winemaster Ed Friedrich of San Martin Vineyards Co said Montonicos have been grown in Italy since antiquity The grapes from which the California wine was made were produced from cuttings brought from Calabria, Italy in 1938, Friedrich said

The California wine is called Vin Santo, or wine of the saints, a designation given wines in old Tuscany that were aged at least five years in small barrels and stored high in farmhouse attics

State Will Help Detention Center Find Other Funds

By United Press International

A State Welfare Department official said Tuesday he and others planned to help Douglas County, if asked, to find new sources of money to keep its youth detention center open.

"We'll work with them in every way we can to help find other sources," said Larry Nedrow, head of the department's social services division. He said the federal Law Enforcement Assistant Administration, already providing money for a similar center in Lincoln, is a potential source.

Alan Ihms, state welfare director, earlier told Douglas County the detention center is not eligible for the $300,000 in state and federal social services money it had been planning on to operate the center.

Nedrow said the department is more than willing to help because "this is definitely a needed service" and the ineligible status results only from a technicality.

"In other words, we are not saying the program is bad. We are simply saying this is a program for which we can't allow social services money," he said.

Nedrow also said Douglas County, contrary to some reports he had heard, has not been asked to return the $300,000 earmarked for the center.

He said up until Oct. 1 of last year the center was fully eligible and thus only about $138,000 in payments to an ineligible program is involved. He also said any repayment order would have to come from the federal government and not the state.

On Oct. 1 a new state social services plan, which governs where state and federal money is spent, went into effect. Nedrow said detention centers are not included in the plan.

Coincidently, Nedrow said a routine federal audit of the county's books is in progress. Those officials declined to comment about the center or the audit and said the final audit report would indicate whether the federal government intends to do anything about the situation.

Nedrow said he has had no official word from the auditors or others concerning the matter. But he said based on past history "the possibility always exists that the federal government could take exception to expenditures not covered in the state plan and ask that they be returned."

In a related development Tuesday morning, the Douglas County board asked state officials to meet in Omaha to discuss the situation.

Douglas County officials contend the state should have informed them the center was not eligible for funding. Nedrow, however, said administration of social services "remains a county function." He said he first became aware of where money was going in late February and asked for more information. That information prompted Ihms' letter.

"I'm sure Douglas County felt it was an allowable program and I certainly don't feel there was anything sinister involved in this," Nedrow said. "One of our primary jobs is to help children and this program certainly does that."

LAP Seeks Low-Income Input At Planning Sessions April 13-22

Lincoln Action Program (LAP) is launching a series of neighborhood planning sessions to involve low-income persons in planning, said Lynn Tierney, LAP planning officer, at a Tuesday press conference.

The planning sessions, from April 13-22, will be a public forum for discussing community needs and developing ideas for low-income persons in Lincoln and Lancaster County.

The first session will be at 6 p.m. Tuesday at General Arnold School in Lincoln Air Park West.

LAP, funded primarily by the Community Services Administration, provides advocacy and services for the poor.

Ms. Tierney said she anticipates increased participation in this years' planning sessions because the low-income people have "recently become more vocal" and are "more aware of how changes (in regulations and services) affect them directly."

Priorities coming out the planning sessions last year wre the need for more information, transportation, housing, child care and rural recreation, she said.

Utility rate increases, housing shortages, day care and food stamps are concerns of the low-incomed this year, she said.

After the planning sessions, LAP will meet with community agencies delivering similar services to coordinate programs and avoid duplication, Ms. Tierney said. The final priority ranking of programs will be presented to the June LAP board meeting.

The schedule of neighborhood planning sessions is:

—Air Park, April 13, 6 p.m., Arnold Heights School
—Havelock, April 14, 6 p.m., Pershing School
—North Lincoln, April 19, 7 p.m., Clinton School.
—Hallam, April 20, 6:30 p.m., Hallam School.
—South Lincoln, April 21, 7 p.m., Saratoga School.
—Raymond, April 22, 6:30 p.m., Raymond School.

Voter Registration Hours Extended, Locations Added

The Lancaster County Election Commissioner has announced special locations and extended office hours so citizens may register to vote in the May 11th Nebraska primary.

County residents will be able to register from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. April 8, 15 and 22 at the Gateway Shopping Center Mall. Registrations also will be at the Mall from 1 to 4 p.m. April 10, 17, and 24.

Additionally citizens may register from 1 to 8:30 p.m. April 29, and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. April 30 in the Gateway Auditorium.

In addition to regular election commission office hours of 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, the commission office will be open until 8 p.m. April 8, 15, 22, 26, 28 and 29.

On April 30th, the last day citizens may register to vote, the office will close at 6 p.m.

4 Die Drinking Weed Poison

Pinneberg, West Germany (AP) — Four tree nursery laborers died after drinking a highly poisonous weed killer from what appeared to be a rum bottle and police said they do not suspect foul play.

Three of the victims were German, the other Portuguese. Police said they drank from a bottle which another laborer emptied some weeks ago and then filled up with weed killer to treat plants at his home.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, April 7, 1976

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Conditions that appear settled may be just the opposite. Pressures continue in connection with security, property values, rights. You have law, authority on your side. Be aware of it; act in confident manner. Get priorities in order. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Reach beyond a former limitation. More persons now are aware of you and your capabilities. Get rid of burden not rightly your own. Accent on relatives, short trips, versatility, ability to be flexible without abandoning principles. Legal matter tends to be resolved in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Rushing will lead to costly error. Know it and act accordingly. Be creative, not impulsive. Member of opposite sex, who offers you the world, may be victim of pipe dreams. Be independent, original and self-reliant. No one intends to give you something for nothing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have set standards — now you are asked to "come through," to live up to obligations. Cycle is high and you will win. But you will extend yourself. You could be conducting your own, private pep rally. Key is pacing. Know when enough is enough. Eating, sleeping have a place, too!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Highlight humor, showmanship. Stress ability to work with available material. Get behind the scenes. Be discreet; others want to confide. Gemini, Sagittarius could figure prominently. What was "locked in" will be released.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Build for future. Avoid premature commitment. Friend, well-meaning, may not have sufficient data. Know it and respond accordingly. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio figure prominently. Quarrel with one close to you should not be blown up out of proportion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be prepared for change, variety, travel — and a special relationship. Open lines of communication. Satisfy your own curiosity. Get ideas on paper. Some of your ambitions will be fulfilled — starting now. One in position of authority requests an appointment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Family adjustment is indicated. For your part, express willingness to make intelligent concession. Taurus, Libra could be involved. Be aware of potential, long-range plans — and travel requirements. You are going to gain access to privileged information. Use it wisely!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Perceive subtle nuances — take nothing for granted. Avoid trap of self-deception. One in authority is active, seeking changes and you could be directly affected. Pisces, Virgo individuals are in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If single, there is much activity in connection with possible marriage. If married, a legal agreement is put forth. Give it careful study. Married or single, you can expect more responsibility, greater chance for reward. One in authority, familiar with your wishes, could help make them come true.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You do best now by finishing rather than initiating project. Basic services should be reviewed — and improved. Aries, Libra figure in picture. Keep health, diet resolutions. Get together with those who share your interests.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Creative forces jell; you are able to invest in your own style. Leo, Virgo and Aquarius figure prominently. Money factor is important, but you master it. Partner or mate understands, revises, makes necessary adjustments.

IF APRIL 7 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, introspective, not one to follow the crowd. You can be lonely, temperamental, somewhat of a perfectionist. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. October could be one of your most significant months of 1976. You are due to settle a land deal or real estate dilemma. Questions concerning partnership, marriage are paramount.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
